The Amazing Story of the A. & M. Free Bridge Grab

How an East St. Louis Trader in Real Estate Converted an Equity in 56 Acres of Farm Land Into a Gold Brick Which He Is Trying to Sell to the City of St. Louis for $4,250,000.

Aided by a House of Delegates Combine, Leo J. Scherrer Has Succeeded in Keeping the City From Completing the Bridge on Adopted Plans, With His Scheme to Make a Million for Himself.

HERE is the whole story, told for the first time in connected form, of the amazing Alton & Mississippi Free Bridge grab which has aroused city-wide indignation in the last few days. In a sentence, it is the story of how an East St. Louis trader in real estate has converted an equity in 56 acres of farm land into a gold brick which, with the backing of a House of Delegates combine, he is trying to palm off on the city of St. Louis for upwards of $4,000,000, at a profit of anywhere from one to two million dollars to himself and his unknown associates.

The story shows how Leo J. Scherrer, the real estate speculator has, for three years, succeeded in preventing St. Louis from completing the bridge in accordance with plans already adopted, first by the persistent employment of the tactics of blockade in the Illinois courts, and second, through the use, with extraordinary success, of some mysterious influence which operated for neglect and delay in his favor at the City Hall.

The important facts in the free bridge situation, created by Scherrer's schemes to gain an advantage over the city which he could convert into huge profits for himself, are as follows:

1. THAT his original scheme to build a belt railway and bridge approach, and give the approach to the city, to enhance the value of his optioned land, by a process of development, has taken the form of the Alton & Mississippi $4,200,000 grab, which contemplates the construction of an approach 21 miles long at the expense of the taxpayers of St. Louis.

2. That the profits Scherrer expects to make if his scheme should be adopted—$1,500,000 to $2,000,000—are about equal to the excess of the cost of the Alton & Mississippi approach over the more useful and practical Reber approach.

3. That Scherrer and his unrevealed associates in the ownership of the options on lands paralleling the Alton & Mississippi route would be the only beneficiaries from the construction of this approach at the enormous cost of $4,200,000.

4. That the options on the lands on the route of the Alton & Mississippi approach were taken in the name of Prosper J. Soucy, an East St. Louis real estate dealer, associated with Scherrer.

5. That the Alton & Mississippi approach would come to grade in Snag Lake, three miles southeast of the east bridge pier. Snag Lake is a large tract of low, partly submerged land, covered with dead trees and fallen timbers.

6. That the lands in Snag Lake, thence paralleling the Alton & Mississippi route to the bluffs, were optioned to Soucy at $200 an acre, some of the options expiring next June.

(7) That Scherrer, in 1910, before the development of his present scheme, obtained from city officials a plat and description of the lands required for the east side approach, and tried to grab these lands, together with a plot of ground entirely surrounding the east pier.

(8) That at the same time, through a secret agreement with Eugene Latinette, owner of two parcels of land required for the Reber approach, he was contesting the city's right to condemn lands in Illinois.

9. That he was defeated in both of these schemes, but if he had succeeded in having the city's right to condemn lands in Illinois established by the courts, and had had his own condemnation suit to acquire the strip of land surrounding the east pier and running directly east therefrom upheld, he would have had the city at his mercy.

10. That Scherrer stated at the time he instituted the contest of the city's right to condemn Illinois land, and filed a condemnation suit on the lands the city had already platted and staked out for the east approach, that it was his desire to gain an advantage over the city to force it to accept whatever terms he might exact in connection with his belt line railway project.

11. THAT there are at least two gaps in the proposed right of way of the Alton & Mississippi approach, and that there is no assurance that Scherrer will be able to acquire the lands to fill in these gaps and deliver a complete right of way to the city, as he has promised to do if his approach proposition should be accepted.

Map Shows Folly of the A. & M. Plan.

THE accessibility of the Reber free bridge approach, for all existing and future railroads, and the inaccessibility of the proposed Alton & Mississippi approach, are shown by the accompanying map, prepared by President Kinsey of the Board of Public Improvements. The Reber approach terminates just beyond the limits of East St. Louis, being carried over the streets of East St. Louis at an elevation. There are thousands of acres of land in the district in which the approach terminates, and east of it, available for railroad yards, and new lines desiring an entrance to St. Louis.

The proposed Alton & Mississippi approach bears south from the bridge, and would be an elevated structure for a distance of three miles, and would come to grade in Snag Lake, a large, partly submerged district southeast of East St. Louis. The proposed belt line enters the bluffs five miles from East St. Louis, intersecting only the Illinois Central, Southern, Baltimore & Ohio and Louisville & Nashville railroads. The big railroad systems entering East St. Louis from the north side could not get to the approach, without the construction of costly connecting lines and long connecting approaches. At the point where the A. & M. approach intersects the Iron Mountain Railroad the approach would be 30 feet in the air. A connecting approach at this point would be both inconvenient and expensive.

Promoter Scherrer expects to make his profit of $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 out of the sale of lands, on which he holds options, to railroads for additional yards which would be necessary before the A. & M. approach could be utilized. The Reber approach could be used by all railroads entering East St. Louis without additional cost for connecting approaches and yards.

12. That Scherrer and Prosper J. Soucy induced Eugene Latinette to refuse to sell his land to the city for the Reber approach right of way, and entered into a contract with him to furnish counsel and pay the costs of resisting the condemnation suit, promising to reimburse him for any losses he sustained.

13. That after the city had condemned Latinette's land for $1000 less than it had previously offered him, Scherrer refused to make good the loss.

14. That the A. & M. approach would be inaccessible to railroads entering St. Louis from the East, while the Reber approach would be readily accessible to all existing or future railroads.

15. That the construction of the A. & M. approach would make it practically impossible for existing railroads to make a connection with it, or use it, except at great cost for connecting approaches and new railroad yards for breaking up and reassembling freight trains.

16. That the delay caused by Scherrer's negotiations with city officials since last April has caused a direct loss of more than $100,000 in interest on bridge bonds already sold, to say nothing of the great expense entailed upon taxpayers through the costly litigation in which he involved the city through his different schemes to gain an advantage out of which he could make a personal profit.

THE Kreismann administration, following Scherrer's attempts to handicap the city in the completion of the bridge, refused to deal with him, or seriously consider any of his propositions. He was assured that he would be

Record of Litigation in Which Leo J. Scherrer, Promoter of the A. & M. Has Been a Principal

LEO J. SCHERRER, promoter of the Alton & Mississippi belt line which exists only on paper and which is the basis of his A. & M. job, during the 20 years of trading in St. Louis and East St. Louis real estate, has frequently been involved in litigation growing out of his business transactions. Several judgments against him have remained unsatisfied on the court records since 1905, while other cases have been settled. The records in the office of the Circuit Clerk in Belleville show:

In April, 1905, Edwards Whitaker of St. Louis, and Horace J. Eggmann and F. J. Steger of East St. Louis, who were members with Scherrer of a syndicate to purchase the "Orthwein tract," which is on the line of the proposed A. & M. approach, for $217,450.50, filed a suit against Scherrer, William D. Orthwein, Prosper J. Soucy and others for an accounting of the transaction. The decree of the court declared that in the deal Scherrer was acting as agent for Orthwein and was to receive a commission of $25,000 for the sale, and that he also was one of the syndicate, investing in it $10,000, which he received from Orthwein as advance commission, and acting as the syndicate's agent. The Court ruled that because Scherrer withheld from the other members of the syndicate knowledge of his contract with Orthwein, he was not entitled to the $10,000, but that he was entitled to only 10-55 of that amount, and the remainder, $8181.81, was ordered paid to the other members of the syndicate. The Court also ordered that the remaining $15,000 of the commission Scherrer was to receive should be deducted from the price of the land, holding that Orthwein was receiving $25,000 more for it than he was entitled to receive in view of the fact that Scherrer was his agent, and also a member of and agent for the syndicate.

The petition in this case charged that Scherrer "falsely and fraudulently represented to your orators (the other members of the syndicate) that he was to receive no compensation from William D. Orthwein." The decree of the Court stated "the Court being fully advised in the premises, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed by the Court and the Court doth hereby find, order, adjudge and decree that the allegations contained in the original bill of complaint and amendment thereto are true as therein stated."

June 6, 1905, Fred A. Ahring obtained a judgment against Scherrer for $840, with interest. No execution was issued on the judgment, and the records do not show that it has been satisfied.

June 15, 1905, the First National Bank of East St. Louis, obtained judgment against Scherrer for $156.10, with interest from Feb. 2, 1904. An execution was returned unsatisfied, the Sheriff reporting that he could find no property to take to satisfy it.

Nov. 10, 1906, Fred Schneppe obtained judgment against Scherrer, for $2138.93. An execution issued on this was returned Oct. 21, 1913, the Sheriff reporting that he could find no property.

The last case grew out of a real estate transaction by which Scherrer mortgaged property to Schneppe. Schneppe's attorney, George C. Rebhan of Belleville, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that Schneppe believed at the time he loaned Scherrer $3000 that he was getting a mortgage on a house and lot, but after the loan was made, he found that the mortgage covered only two vacant lots. He said Schneppe agreed with Scherrer to take a deed to these lots fixing their value at $500, and that Scherrer paid additional money, reducing the $3000 indebtedness to $2139.93, for which the judgment was rendered.

Scherrer was indicted by the St. Clair County grand jury Jan. 13, 1898, on a charge of embezzling $1750 from Casper Voss, who, at that time, was Tax Collector. He gave a bond of $2000, and March 16, 1898, the State's Attorney dismissed the case. The records contain no memorandum as to the cause of the dismissal.

He again was indicted Feb. 13, 1903, on a charge of embezzling $400 from John W. Worman. He gave a bond of $1000, and March 17, 1903, the State's Attorney dismissed the case.

Feb. 4, 1904, Scherrer was indicted on a charge of falsifying mortgage records. The indictment charged that he assigned a mortgage to Frederick Schneppe, and then executed a release to the original holders. He gave a bond of $1000, and March 19, 1904, the court sustained his motion to quash six of the nine counts of the indictment, leaving three standing against him. April 19, 1904, he went to trial before a jury, and after the evidence for the State had been heard, the Court instructed the jury to find Scherrer not guilty.

Here Are the 22 Delegates Who Are Standing by the A. & M. Grab.

THE 22 members of the House of Delegates who are aiding Scherrer in trying to fasten the costly and impracticable Alton & Mississippi approach on the city, through which Scherrer and his associates would make millions out of their land speculations, are:

WHY DID YOU LEAVE THE FARM?

The Post-Dispatch accepts the suggestions offered by Mr. William Hirth, publisher of the Missouri Farmer, the leading agricultural paper of the State. We will print acceptable letters on the questions submitted in the Daily and Sunday Post-Dispatch. Those who do not wish to answer the questions in order may write short summaries of their experiences and conclusions. The answers should be brief, not more than 300 words. Write "Farm Life" on the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.

Among the great economic and social problems which are occupying the public mind at the present time that of a more successful agriculture overshadows all others. As a nation we are just beginning to realize that our permanent prosperity depends more upon the farm than upon any other industry. When the farmer is producing big crops it means not only that the railroads, the steel mills and the factories run full shift, but also that the millions who dwell in town and city are fed and clothed at a cost within their means.

Since these great truths have begun to take a firm hold upon the public conscience better farming is being discussed from one end of the land to the other, and that we are standing on the threshold of a new era in American agriculture there is little question. In the meantime, one of the most complicated phases of this great problem is to stop the drift of country boys and girls to the cities—first, because the farm cannot be developed to its highest efficiency without their help and, secondly, because the cities are already overcrowded. Manifestly, therefore, before we can apply the remedy we must find out the cause—what it is that in times gone by has caused thousands of the brightest boys and girls to forsake the farm and to this end ask the Post-Dispatch to submit the following questions to its readers:

1. Why did you leave the farm?
2. If you had it to do over again would you come to the city?
3. What position do you hold, what is your salary and how much money have you been able to save?
4. Do you believe the city is as good a place in which to rear a family as the country?
5. Did you find city life as attractive as it looked to you from the old farm home?
6. A young farmer who puts thought and diligence into his work ought to have a good 160-acre farm paid for by the time he is 40 or 45 years old. Such a farm in a good farming community, together with its livestock, is worth from $15,000 to $20,000. Do you believe the average young man can accumulate this much in the city in the same length of time?

These questions are asked with the greatest seriousness and I hope that hundreds of your readers to whom they apply will answer them thoughtfully and carefully, for in so doing they will contribute their share towards the solution of a question of grave importance. What they have to say on this subject—or at least its substance—will be reprinted in my paper for the information and guidance of the thousands of Missouri country boys and girls in whose homes it is a regular visitor. Especially are we anxious that clerks, bookkeepers, street car conductors, motormen, mechanics, etc., respond to these inquiries—for it is the view of the average man that must be obtained before we shall be able to arrive at conclusions that are worth while.

The questions are also intended to apply to young women who have come to St. Louis from the country and they should tell how, in their judgment, life in a farm home could be made sufficiently attractive so that the average bright country girl would be content to remain on the farm.

WILLIAM HIRTH,
Publisher of Missouri Farmer.

The Accident of Birth

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your letter column of Jan. 16 appeared a letter written by an "American Citizen," who bitterly complains about the money sent out of the country by foreigners.

In the first place, has Mr. "American Citizen" stopped to consider that the only true American is the Indian and that the "pale face," regardless of family ties, is of foreign parentage? My mother was a member of a family of pioneer settlers, the Dartars, whose name is not forgotten in these parts, but my father is a foreigner, a native of Germany, who came to this country at the age of 22, with his mind fully made up to become an American citizen. Should I, an American by birth, by accident, consider myself more of an American than my father, who became one by intent?

What right have we to attempt to dictate to anyone what they shall do with their savings? What right to stop these foreigners (who receive 17½ per cent of the wealth they produce) from sending their hard-earned savings to some needy relative?

ONE OF THE DARTARS.
Washington Park, Ill.

THE TRUTH BENEATH THE TINSEL.

Rome was never so rotten as when she relied on the circus for strength and popular attraction; in the last stage of decay she clung to the circus as a straw.

Without disparaging the great pageant with which St. Louis proposes to draw and divert the country, let us avoid comparison to Rome and her circus by putting our house in order as far as possible—reflecting that there are better advertisements than circuses for a great American city. There are more substantial and enduring attractions than the gorgeous glitter of pageantry.

Tinsel cannot hide the truth of defects which must be remedied or overcome if St. Louis is to enhance its popularity and strengthen its hold upon the surrounding country. Tinsel cannot cover up incompetence of government in St. Louis any more than it could disguise the ghastly state of affairs in the old city which boasted the title of Mistress of the World.

Pomp and glitter enhance by contrast what is dull and ugly. Slack government, unfinished works, a slipshod aspect of griminess and grimness, puritanical restraint, joylessness and a smoky sky—these are not the kind of bib and tucker which a metropolitan hostess could afford to wear at her party.

The pageant will produce great good to St. Louis if the citizens will perceive and act upon the sober necessities of preparation underlying the mere show feature. Instead of attempting to gild ugly facts, let St. Louis strain every effort to remove them in as far as possible. Rome was neither built nor rebuilt in a day. But there are numerous works which St. Louis, like any other great American town, can accomplish in short order, if she will set about it in earnest.

Let us make the most—not the least—of the great pageant and its possibilities. Every one of our important public projects could be rapidly pushed to completion if the same hundreds of thousands of citizens who will enthuse over the pageant would likewise enthuse over the less picturesque but more vital works of preparation.

Let us look at the sober facts beneath the tinsel. Let us play the part of earnest citizens and real workmen before we play the part of supes in the great spectacular production. Let us make some quick, effective modern history before we celebrate the long, dreamy and romantic past.

The sober truth is that the pageant must first waken St. Louis to its old remediable defects in order to wake the country up to a vivid and convincing sense of new and powerful charms.

THE NEAREST APPROACH.

The nearest approach to insanity that has ever been made in the way of a bridge proposition is the A. & M. or All Mine approach of Promoter Shearer, who offers to shear off taxpayers' hides in addition to their wool. Pardon our liberty, but it looks like sheer nonsense.

EXIT LIONEL.

Lionel Lawrence (peace to his bones!) has retired from the field of matrimony. Lionel, as you may know, was an actor, and in the short span from the time he attained years of discretion to the age of 50, when a fit of apoplexy rang down the final curtain on a proud career, he had played matrimonial engagements with no less than eleven wives, to the best of his recollection, and probably a handful more whom he could not recall. His funeral last Friday was attended by a bevy of women who refused to give their names, but had presumably been married to him at one time or another.

We propose to observe the rule of the game which proscribes saying naught but good of the dead. But we will say this: That he is the most-mourned man, or rather actor, that we ever knew of—ten times more mourned than the average man. Yet, from the standpoint of the greatest good to the greatest number, his demise must be accepted with resignation, and on the other hand as a merciful release from many woes, for Lionel, too, had suffered much, though he bore it bravely.

Current events are also emphasizing the need for the recall in the new city charter.

DRY-AS-DUST COLLEGES.

Dr. James Monroe Taylor, ex-president of Vassar College, referring to his collegiate services, remarked that during his term of office new ideas had arisen, such as woman suffrage, socialism, etc., but he congratulated himself that these new ideas had been kept out of Vassar.

This testimony emphasizes the force of the statement of a professor's wife that American colleges teach students what has happened in the past, not what is happening around them.

THE JAPANESE ISSUE.

Nobody proposes unrestricted immigration of Asiatics into this country. Nobody desires it. Under a friendly agreement between the American and Japanese governments the latter forbids immigration of Japanese laborers to the United States. Since that agreement was made by ex-President Roosevelt very few Japanese have entered this country, and these of the student, commercial and professional classes almost wholly. The number of Japanese in the United States, officially reported in 1906, was 49,598. Immigration since then has diminished. Figures available are: 1908, 9544; 1909, 2432; 1910, 2598. Many return home each year. The whole number is said to be nearly stationary, approximating 60,000, of whom a few more than 40,000 are in California.

Japan asks only that her people be not utterly excluded from the United States as racial inferiors; that those among her people who are admitted here shall be granted equal legal rights with persons admitted from all other civilized countries, and not be subjected to legislative discrimination because of their race.

There can be no valid objection to these claims. Nobody, thus far, has objected to them, except professional agitators, who are so lacking in intelligence and in true patriotism that they would risk embroiling the nation with a friendly power, in order to gain notoriety leading to political office.

There is not the slightest ground for fear that Asiatics will be permitted to enter this country in numbers sufficient to lower the wage or living standards of American workers. If the rabid exclusionists could commit the American Government to their policy of utter exclusion, coupled with intolerable insult, there would be very real grounds for fear of armed conflict with our neighbors across the Pacific.

Japan will never fight America for land, nor for commerce, nor to help an ally; Japan has been taught to regard America as her first friend among the Western nations. But nobody need doubt that Japan would fight, rather than submit to an insult which no Western nation would tamely accept from one of its peers. This is the element, and the only element, of danger in the Japanese issue.

OUR CURRENCY BILL ABROAD.

The direct effect of the currency bill in easing financial conditions in this country is widely recognized, but effects of much more than national influence are credited to it by Moreton Frewen, member of Parliament, writer on economic topics and former bimetallist, who delved deeply in the science of money.

He says the passage of the bill ended financial stress in Europe also and was one of the most important factors in bringing the Bank of England discount rate down from the storm-signal figure of 6 per cent to the present modest 3 per cent.

Mr. Frewen praises the bill extravagantly. He says it will do more for business and finance round the world than another discovery of a gold reef on the Rand to keep the mints running. Messrs. Glass and Owen, denounced by groups of our own bankers almost up to the day of the bill's enactment as the authors of a measure of ruin, are declared by Mr. Frewen to have conferred greater benefits on humanity than the builders of the Panama Canal.

It is certain that the bill has many beneficial provisions. Everybody will hope that it will bring the full number of extraordinary blessings Mr. Frewen predicts for it. But certain American cities will still have grave doubts about its merit unless their chances for getting a regional bank show a striking improvement in the next few days.

ANOTHER BOGY BANISHED.

The general belief that if men met their womenfolk in the polling places an orgy of brutality must necessarily take place was proven erroneous Tuesday, when Chicago's male election officials registered 150,000 women voters. The men kept their hats off, didn't smoke nor swear and acted just as they habitually do when they meet women under other circumstances.

GUARDING THE INDIAN'S OIL.

Cato Sells, Indian Commissioner, has fined an oil company $1000 for wasteful methods in developing oil wells on leased Indian lands. The next offense, he says, will be punished much more heavily.

Judge Sells evidently means to enforce the monstrous doctrine that white lessees have no right to waste $10 worth of Indian property getting $1 of profit in a hurry. He says lessees must exercise utmost care in drilling to prevent water from reaching and ruining oil and gas-bearing formations. Millions of dollars' worth of these valuable products have been lost to use by carelessness in this particular heretofore.

If the Sells policy is permitted to stand, the get-rich-quick operators will soon find the business of plundering the Indians as unattractive as the business of running railroads is rapidly becoming under governmental regulation.

OPENING UP ALASKA'S SCENERY.

Congressman D. S. Church wants the Government to build a railroad in Alaska to open up not only its stores of natural resources to commerce, but its beauties in scenery to tourists. He says:

> There are treasures in its rivers and treasures in its mountains, all of which I want the people in general to enjoy. I want them to see its sunless days and its midnight suns. I do not want our people to go to Italy to see volcanoes. I want them to go to Alaska. I do not want them to go to Switzerland to see sublime scenery. I want them to go to Alaska. I object to our people going to Europe to spend the summer months. I want them to spend their money and their summers in our great northern summer land.

However admirable this view, something more than a railroad seems to be needed to divert the tide of travel from Europe to this continent. Excellent tourist facilities in the scenic regions of the West have had little perceptible effect on transatlantic business.

However, as Mr. Church says, if Russia can maintain 5000 miles of railroad under fair efficiency in Siberia, "the twin sister of Alaska," why should there be anxiety over our Government experiment with a much less mileage in Alaska?

MEN IN BUCKRAM.

Recruiting Huerta's army by about the same methods and about the same material by which the men in buckram were increased will not make it any more formidable in resisting the movement on the capital. He says that including irregulars he now has 189,000 men. With a stroke of the pen at the bottom of a decree he increases it by 50,000, presumably all Generals. Superiority in phantom units in buckram has not prevented his opponents from overrunning Northern Mexico and has not even checked Bandit Zapata in the South. Pressure on his troops has forced them back everywhere. When his defeated army has not been fleeing toward the protection of Mexico City it has been fleeing in the other direction to wade the Rio Grande.

Newspaper correspondents might find it profitable to accept his invitation to accompany his columns. The tactics by which 189,000 troops have been held back and confined to three or four states by scarcely a tenth as many insurrectionists ought to have instruction for military science.

MIDWINTER RECOLLECTIONS.

As I went down to Panama the southern sea was soft and blue,
And one by one the centuries came blowing up the shore;
I saw a pirate ship go by with all its red and roving crew,
And great Columbus wondering upon San Salvador.
I saw the galleons
Upon the Spanish Main,
And dimly through the centuries

ABOUT NAMES.

We have observed from time to time in the past year that the name of the President of Peru is Billinghurst. Being somewhat familiar with the history of Peru, we could not help believing that this name is not truly Peruvian, and must, therefore, have been affixed to the title of President by other than the usual native processes. We were, therefore, not a bit surprised during last week to read that revolutionists had seized the President of Peru and forcibly removed his name from the official roster of the republic in favor of that of one Durando. The dispatches do not dwell upon the cause of the uprising beyond saying that the deposed President's father was an Englishman, only his mother having been a Peruvian—which is, of course, sufficient. Peru has recently made great strides, but it was presuming too much upon her progressiveness, we imagine, to make Billinghurst President. With all the Rooseveltlng, Rooting and Knoxing we have done down there, the fire under the Latin-American melting pot is not very hot, though we have had some great windbags blowing it of late.

DOING ITS BEST.

It is said in the East that the winter vacation is becoming the thing. The Bermudas have almost been sunk by the crowds on them this winter, and Florida and the tropics beyond are swarming with do-wells. The Democratic administration has equalized the new condition as far as possible by giving those who cannot afford a trip South about the same kind of weather at home.

Senator Calpeper Says a Kind Word for Huerta.

By LEWIS B. ELY.

"VICTORIANO HUERTA never turned a hair when President Wilson read his death warrant the other day. Seems to me he deserves a few bouquets from the women who bestow flowers on condemned murderers. The way the doomed man sits tight in the presidential chair and smilingly waits for the warden to turn on the current for his electrocution shows that a cowardly assassin can still have courage," says the Third Senator from Missouri.

"Nobody has ever said a kind word for Huerta, and it has been left to me to lay a wreath on the casket and make some polite remarks over the corpse. I will stick to the rule of speaking nothing but good of the dead, and necessarily my remarks will be brief.

"There's some good in every man, however, especially if you reflect that good and bad are relative qualities, deriving their values from contrast.

"As an autocrat and despot the man who took Mexico was a mollycoddle beside the conqueror who said 'I took Panama.' Poor Victoriano (alas, what a name for a loser!) was a tame little murderer compared to Napoleon, a humanitarian compared to Nero, a truthful James compared to Machiavelli, and a Christian gentleman compared to Judas Iscariot.

"As a game loser he is not to be compared to anybody. Most of the thrones of history have been abdicated at one time or another on less provocation than his. He has gambled with his life every day since he got into his presidential death chair. With the whole world against him he looked it in the face and told it to go to, while he fed himself on hope and his army on promises. While the Powers clamored for his resignation he merely issued edicts and counterfeit money and amused himself with bullfights. As my old friend, Col. Todhunter, used to say, the next best thing to living victorious is dying game—and Victoriano crowns his good losing qualities with the bland magnanimity of the noblest sportsman. Although he sees the game is up when the United States gives aid and comfort to his enemies, he does not retaliate upon our Charge d'Affaires or otherwise give way to frenzy, and upon his tombstone we may fitly grave the classic utterance: 'Nothing in his life so became him as his manner of leaving it.'

"Though all the good that Huerta did may be interred with his bones without crowding the coffin, he was a man of mettle who will be mourned dead by a few even as he was mourned living by the many."

HEALTH HINTS.

HELEN.—Locomotor ataxia arises from disease of a portion of the posterior spinal ganglia, later involving the posterior columns and the posterior nerve roots, which become atrophied and degenerated. Specific blood poisoning is the cause of it. Pains in the feet, legs and abdomen, vomiting, difficulty in walking, inability to stand when the eyes are closed with the feet placed heel and toe together, blurred vision, etc. A retired physician says: I wish to protest against the statement that locomotor ataxia cannot be cured. I had it many years and was cured by the use of diphtheria antitoxin orchitius fluid and fusel oil, injected hypodermically—but this treatment must be given under a physician's care. Suggestion has been proved a wonderful agent for and against recovery from disease. While I am not a follower of Mrs. Eddy, I have seen her system cure locomotor ataxia (tabes dorsalis) in two instances.

THANKS.—"We know no more about rheumatism today than the physicians of the Middle Ages knew," said one of the most eminent physicians of New York a few weeks ago. Many theories about rheumatism have been advanced. It has generally been described as due to uric acid in the blood, the pain in the joints being caused by minute crystals of the acid forming in the tissues. But some physicians ridicule the uric acid theory. An eminent professor at Johns Hopkins advanced the theory a few years ago that rheumatism had its origin in the tonsils; that tonsilitis and rheumatism went so generally together that it was impossible not to see in them cause and effect. The removal of tonsils was advocated as the cure for rheumatism. This worked well in some cases, but not in all. Then it was suggested that not tonsilitis alone, but any gathering of pus at any place in the body whence it could not escape—an ulcer at the root of a tooth, for example—was the cause. This has recently been one of the most generally accepted theories. Cures have been sought vainly. One meets men constantly who have tried every course of treatment without relief. One meets men who, after trying many treatments for many years, have suddenly found themselves free from pain, seemingly cured, and yet unable to trace their cure to any remedy. Dr. Rosenow is quoted as saying that the germs of rheumatism enter the system through the tonsils. Those strange glands at the back of the throat have some use in the life of the body, but what this use is has not yet been discovered. It is definitely known that they are peculiarly susceptible to infection. Some surgeons have insisted upon extirpating the tonsils. But the operation is a dangerous one, owing to the liability to severe hemorrhage and to the difficulty of preventing infection of the wound.

FIFTEEN READER.—The Japanese current passes the southeastern coast of Asia, and starts in the north equatorial current. This flows to the west, is turned somewhat by Formosa and the Japanese islands, and gets a northerly direction. Then it is hastened by the monsoons or checked by opposing winds, the ordinary range of speed being from one to three miles an hour. It is blue, and its temperature is from 5 to 11 degrees higher than that of the sea water thereabout. Eventually it joins with the slow current that crosses the Pacific Ocean between 40 and 50 degrees of north latitude. Ja. 7, 1912, the following telegram came from Seattle: Warm weather on the Alaska coast, ascribed to the shifting of the Japanese current, continues, and the temperature at Sitka yesterday rose to 19 degrees above zero, at Valdez to 34 and Nome 32.

LESSONS OF THE WRECK OF THE MONROE

THE sinking of the Monroe, rammed by the Nantucket, differed in so many essential details from that of the Titanic, the Volturno and other steamers recently lost at sea, that no agreement has been reached by commentators as to just what remedies should be adopted to prevent similar disasters in the future. The Federal investigation is expected to develop suggestions for new legislation.

"Crying Need of Legislation."

Washington Post: The collision between the Old Dominion Line steamer Monroe and the Merchants and Miners Line steamer Nantucket is a specific instance of a crying need of legislation relating to safety of life at sea.

The testimony given before the Senate Committee on Commerce in December, 1912, disclosed a condition which made such accidents as this inevitable. The testimony in question was given by the representatives of the ship owners, who said that the Old Dominion Line steamers might be taken as a standard for steamers on the Atlantic coast. The testimony was that the steamers left New York with passengers and fast freight that were to be transferred on fixed schedules to railroads at certain points; that they ran 18 miles an hour, always in the night, and that they carried one man on the lookout, one man at the wheel, and one officer on the bridge, each with six hours of continuous duty. The other men and the boatswain worked during the day and slept all night. There was nobody on deck but these three men, except in heavy fog, when the captain remained on the bridge. The witnesses admitted that there was nobody to assist in listening for fog sirens, nobody to take soundings in shallow water, and nobody to obey emergency orders, until after they had been roused from sleep to rush on deck, where they first would have to become acquainted with the emergency before their would could be effective.

Such conditions cannot continue without disaster.

"Whether There Was Vigilance."

New York Sun: One of the companies concerned has already issued a statement from its point of view of what happened. It will be useful in the inquiry, for it raises the question whether there was vigilance on the steamship of the other company in answering warning whistles, but it will have no other value. Stories of survivors, immediately after a sea disaster, are likely to be more or less emotional, and the Federal Court will want facts and professional testimony. Such investigations are always attended with the difficulty of reconciling conflicting statements.

"Off His Course."

Pittsburg Dispatch: On both vessels there was a failure to fully realize the danger of collision in fog. This seemed to lead to omissions which we have no doubt are frequent in navigation and would not attract attention except where they result in disaster. First, it is stated that the Nantucket was off her course. It seems that they have "lanes" or routes for upbound and downbound vessels, but the Nantucket had lost her way in the fog. This would indicate bad fortune more than mismanagement, but another point indicates recklessness. She struck the Monroe with a force that carried her stem one-third of the way through the latter vessel. To do that she must have been going at a speed that was reckless for fog.

"Silent Fog Horns?"

Pittsburg Press: It will require the Government investigation, evidently to explain how it is that the ships struck, and struck with so much force. And the question cannot be approached by the investigators too determinedly. The coastwise navigation, and the navigation of the great lakes, are constantly becoming more dangerous. The statistics of the Government will show, we believe, that far more lives and property are lost in lake coastwise navigation—on the lakes particularly—than are lost in midocean.

The enormous volume of lake and coastwise traffic is one element of the danger, and the comparatively small path which it travels is another. Every year adds to the necessity of greater precaution, and yet it is common observation that in a fog vessels keep on their way at a very fair rate of speed. This is not the exceptional case; it is the general, almost the universal, habit. And even in midocean the danger of speed has been illustrated for all time by the terrible tragedy of the Titanic. If that great ship had been literally feeling her way along it is impossible to believe that her lookouts would not have caught sight of the iceberg in time to allow it to be avoided. Going at anywhere near normal speed in a fog increases the normal danger twenty fold.

"The New Rules."

Indianapolis News: "They that go down to the sea in ships" must brave the dangers of the sea. But it is in man's power to lessen these dangers to a considerable degree. The sinking of the Monroe, when only 25 miles from land, indicates that all the perils of ocean transportation are not confined to midocean. The Monroe was rammed by the Nantucket, and 10 minutes later went down with 41 persons. Wireless, lifeboats, life preservers, even the frantic energy of the Nantucket's crew did not avail to save the lives of all those on board the rammed ship. A dense fog prevailed, perhaps the worst which the Atlantic coast has experienced in years, and it is not yet intimated by the investigators that gross carelessness was responsible for the danger. It was the hazard of the fog. The lookouts were unable to see far ahead. Even searchlights were of little use, and foghorn and bell warnings could not be heard a great distance from the vessels.

"Useless Life-Saving Apparatus."

Baltimore News: After the prow of the Nantucket struck the Monroe amidships the conduct of the officers and men of both vessels appears to have been exemplary. They acted not only with bravery and coolness but with promptness and intelligence. What happened before the collision is a different matter.

Fog, of course, was primarily to blame, but there are frequent fogs off the capes of the Chesapeake, and the rules of coastwise traffic are designed to reduce accidents in such weather to a minimum, the field of official inquiry is narrowed to the question of navigation.

So terrific was the impact that the Monroe sank in 15 minutes. Struck in the engine room, her bulkheads, that might have held her up until all on board had been saved, were useless. There were lifeboats and life rafts for double her number of passengers, but owing to her heavy list to starboard the boats on the port side could not be reached.

With such a short time in which to act and part of the life-saving apparatus useles, it is surprising that a greater number of the passengers and crew were not drowned.

"Automatic Wireless" Wanted.

Memphis Commercial-Appeal: An investigation of the collision of two coastwise vessels just at the time our safety-at-sea delegates are returning from London should be interesting.

The Monroe and Nantucket were both seaworthy ships. Their commanders knew the lane of travel and were doubtless aware of the schedule time of the other ship. The Old Dominion liners sail from Norfolk to New York close into the coast. The Boston ships follow the same line for a number of miles north of Norfolk.

Possibly the ships struck because the commanders, trusting to the general assumption that the ocean is big enough to hold all ships, did not exercise persistently that keen vigilance which makes for safety.

The wireless will be developed so that automatically it will signal from a station on one ship to a station on another ship when two vessels get within a certain distance.

"In Iron Pots."

Philadelphia Record: There can be no safety at sea for passengers who take ship in iron pots. Whether any vessel can keep afloat when rammed amidship is a question. The central compartment of a steamer, being occupied by the engine, is necessarily large and is indivisible by transverse bulkheads; and enough water would enter a hole made by a colliding vessel's bow to sink the victim. But the forepart of the tanker which broke in two in a storm off Sandy Hook a few weeks ago remained afloat long enough to permit a rescue of those who had clung to it for the best part of a night; and, if the unfortunate Monroe had the watertight compartments of her bow and abaft her beam properly secured, she ought to have retained some degree of buoyancy. The fact that she sank out of sight within 10 minutes after her ill-fated passengers were shaken out of their berths would indicate that the most ordinary precautions against disaster had been neglected.

"Lifeboats of No Avail."

Detroit Free Press: The Monroe is the third Atlantic steamship to go down in the last four months with a considerable loss of life. The Oklahoma, an oil carrier, broke in two and sank Jan. 5 with 32 lives charged up to her, and the Volturno tragedy of Oct. 10 last is still fresh in memory. There were 143 deaths in that tragedy.

Here are three terrible stories of disaster at sea, and they are all that have been reported in six months. It cannot escape notice that in the three cases one circumstance is common. Lifeboats were of no avail in any of them. In the Monroe collision there was no time to launch them. In the case of the Oklahoma one got away, but it was speedily lost in the storm. And the Volturno's boats actually caused most of the deaths, for the persons who stayed by the ship were saved.

CLARK VERSUS BORAH FOR THE PRESIDENCY

NEWSPAPER speculation as to identity of candidates in the next presidential election was sharply revived by Speaker Clark's statement that he and Senator Borah might be found leading two opposite parties, which also afforded opportunity to some of the press humorists.

"The Houn' Dog's Bay."

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph: Champ Clark's Missouri houn', unheard from since the merciless kicking around given it at Baltimore in 1912 by the present unparalleled Secretary of State, has reappeared. Sleek, frisky and confident, it invades the city from which it was hurled bodily 19 months ago, and emits a challenging bay to all comers for the honors of 1916.

After listening to warm praise of himself by a toastmaster in Baltimore the other night, Clark rose and declared he would be in the White House at present if the will of the Democratic party as expressed at the last Presidential primaries had not been thwarted. "In no uncertain manner" he forecasted his victory at the next election.

"I like truth, I like courage; and a man, even myself, should be praised for deeds well done," said the Speaker of the House. Here we have the tip-top of political temerity. With the next Presidential race more than two years off, Clark comes into the open and champs the bit of his ambition.

"Pretender to the Throne."

Philadelphia Inquirer: Champ Clark believes that by right he should now be occupying the seat held by Woodrow Wilson. He has said so himself and he says it in words that cannot be misunderstood.

This claim injects a new element into American politics. In some of the countries of the Old World they have a disturbing factor who is styled "the pretender to the throne." Are we to have such a one in this country, and is Champ Clark to be the first of a line of pretenders? If so, the voters, and especially those connected with the Democratic party, may look for trouble in the future.

T. R.'s Opinion.

New York Sun: Col. Roosevelt would probably not agree with the Hon. Champ Clark that the gentleman would now be occupying the White House if there had been Presidential primaries in 1912. Is there not competent and familiar testimony, as bearing upon the question, that the Colonel at the time of the Baltimore convention was "praying" for the Speaker's nomination?

"Could Do Worse."

Boston Traveler: Champ Clark should keep away from Baltimore. He went there when the last Democratic national convention was in session at the behest of George Fred Williams and others of his advisers, but that did not prevent the nomination for President going astray. At least the Speaker of the National House then felt and, apparently still feels that the nomination did go astray.

Speaker Clark is fortunate. He is able to pick out his opponent as well as nominate himself. He does not put faith in the fancy that Col. Roosevelt will elope next time with the Republican nomination, but gives that prize to Senator Borah. The progressive (small p) Senator from Idaho may well blush. He will himself admit that the Republicans could do worse.

"Expects Amalgamation."

Washington Times: Speaker Clark is likely right in his observation that he would have been the nominee of the Democratic party in 1912 if there had been a Presidential primary. He has reiterated that belief a number of times in a public way.

Looking forward to 1916, he prophesies about the Republican nomination rather more pointedly than about the Democratic. He announces, rather than guesses, that Senator Borah will be the Republican candidate in 1916.

The Speaker evidently expects to see amalgation achieved. Borah is of the liberal Republican wing, and his position, undoubtedly one of great political advantage, is such that it is difficult to believe he would be the nominee except at the end of a contest in which the various elements would have pretty well come together once more.

Roosevelt's "Practical" Mind.

Indianapolis News: The prognosticators seem rather inclined to look to Senator Borah as the Moses who is to lead the Republican party out of the wilderness. Mr. Borah himself does not seem to be greatly impressed with his chances to carry off the nomination of his party. Perhaps he is right—and perhaps not. There is plenty of time yet in which to consider the question of candidates. But the Idaho Senator's views of the present political situation are interesting. In a recent Washington dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer was the following:

"Borah is one of the Progressive Republicans who does not regard the third party movement as a stable organization, feeling, it is said, that as soon as Theodore Roosevelt says the word the party will crumble. Moreover, he believes that Roosevelt will say the word, holding the opinion that the former President is of a turn of mind too practical to continue a situation which assures uninterrupted Democratic success indefinitely."

Into such high matters it would be presumptuous for the uninitiated to intrude. And yet we recall a famous phrase, found in a letter to Harriman, "you and I are practical men."

PINDELL'S RESIGNATION FROM DIPLOMACY

REPUBLICAN organs fell on the resignation of Mr. Pindell from the Russian Ambassadorship after he had been confirmed by the Senate, as an administration "scandel," and the jokers derived some amusement from it.

"A Political Deal."

Washington Times: Whatever may have been the reasons leading Henry M. Pindell of Peoria to decline to go to St. Petersburg to serve as ambassador to Russia, it is certain the country has cause for gratification that Mr. Pindell has declined and that some other person will be sent in his stead.

Mr. Pindell complains that he has been put in a false light by some of the newspapers. Granting that he may have some cause for complaint, it is nevertheless true that the impression on the public mind was strong that his appointment was a political deal pure and simple, one which did small credit to those who were concerned in it or to the State Department's ideas of the requirements of the diplomatic field.

Had Mr. Pindell gone to St. Petersburg, he would have gone under circumstances almost certain to impair his usefulness. The Administration seems to have made up its mind to try to get a new Russian treaty negotiated. The vexed and highly important Jewish passport problem has to be dealt with. The situation calls for diplomacy of a high order and for a diplomat as to whom the Russian Government will entertain no doubts. Mr. Pindell did well to drop out, and the Administration is probably fortunate that he has dropped out. The theory that there is nothing to the business of diplomacy, that years of diplomatic training count for nothing, is one advanced just now in high quarters, but there are conditions at least, wherein the nation's diplomatic business cannot be lodged in too skilled hands. This is a good time, with our foreign relations badly tangled as they are, to disregard politics and consider merit alone in the choice of ambassadors and ministers.

"Victim of His Friends."

Philadelphia Ledger: Mr. Pindell's declination of the Russian Ambassadorship reveals him as a man whose fine sense of the niceties of national honor would have enabled him to bear worthily the office which he has so courageously surrendered. "There should be nothing personal to talk about or explain," so far as an Ambassador is concerned. A victim of his friends Mr. Pindell may be, but he is unwilling to let the country suffer in prestige or dignity on that account.

The "gross misrepresentations in the public press" of which Mr. Pindell speaks consisted of the publication of a letter purporting to be from Senator Lewis and declared to be in whole or in part a forgery. To the unreliability of the epistle the press also gave full publicity, so far as the disavowals of the principals permitted. There followed a natural and facetious campaign among the paragraphers, which, however unfortunately, brought about the conditions which rendered Mr. Pindell's occupancy of the post unwise. The forger, not the newspapers, is to blame. Difficulty arose, too, from the failure of Mr. Pindell and Senator Lewis to be more explicit in their disavowals.

The final outcome redounds greatly to the credit of Mr. Pindell. He emerges from the ordeal a much bigger man than the occupancy of the Ambassadorship could ever have made him.

"To Sulk in His Sanctum."

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph: Henry M. Pindell of Peoria has given up his seat at the Democratic Lunch Counter. Months of watchful waiting were at last rewarded by a reluctant Senate, but the honor came too late. Mr. Pindell retires to sulk in his sanctum, but will doubtless emerge at some other and less vulnerable point of political activity. The task of explaining his pro-temporeness and its postponement would not have been pleasant, even though it might have enlivened the tedium of the St. Petersburg Sabbatical year.

"Remain in Peoria."

Indianapolis News: Henry M. Pindell has declined the American ambassadorship to Russia, and his declination has been accepted, with regret, by President Wilson. Mr. Pindell's enemies, on hearing this, may remark that he had rather remain in Peoria, Ill., than reside for a year, "free from irritating entanglements," in the capital of Russia. Mr. Pindell explains that he declines the post because of his conviction that no man who has been the subject of a political controversy should present his credentials as American ambassador to a foreign Government. He fears that it might be misunderstood and that harm would result. Perhaps he is right. Perhaps he has acted wisely in declining the post. But in so doing he has not given in because of the venomous assault which was made upon him by his political enemies.

"Dogged by Ghosts."

Detroit Free Press: Henry W. Pindell, of Peoria, has been very wise in declining to accept the ambassadorship to Russia. It was perhaps natural that once a fight was made against his confirmation in the Senate he should wish to win out over his opponents, particularly as the doubtful question of the J. Ham Lewis letters was involved. But now that victory and "vindication" have been pulled from the fire with the help of the President, Pindell is saving himself much trouble and embarrassment by declining to take advantage of his success.

Whatever may be the fact about the Lewis letters, Pindell as ambassador would have been constantly dogged by their ghosts. He would have been looked upon with mild suspicion by a considerable portion of the American people and his career as a diplomat would have been much in the light of a costly joke. It is certain, as Mr. Wilson himself has suggested, that the Peoria man would not have been happy in his position.

"An Impossible Situation."

New York Evening Post: If the only qualifications for the post of American Ambassador to Russia were a sense of propriety and the ability to recognize the hard facts of a situation, the Evening Post would be glad to retract all that it has said regarding Henry M. Pindell's unfitness for the St. Petersburg post. His letter of resignation places him in far more amiable light than those ill-advised friends who were instrumental in enticing him into an impossible situation. Even had Mr. Pindell originally possessed the qualifications for the Russian Ambassadorship, his usefulness must have been destroyed by the circumstances attending his appointment; and one of the most important places in the diplomatic service, in view of the important questions that are soon bound to come up between this country and Russia, would have remained worse than unoccupied. One can hardly blame Mr. Pindell for not sending in his resignation till he had been "vindicated" by the Senate. His latest act leaves President Wilson under greater obligations than ever to Mr. Pindell.

"Interchange of Molasses."

New York Sun: The interchange of molasses between Mr. Wilson and the Hon. Henry Means Pindell, of Peoria, is the last act and scene of a farce which no amount of deep gratitude, distinguished consideration, imperfect consolation and unqualified confidence can dignify or excuse.

"Delicate Sense of Propriety."

Chicago Daily News: President Wilson is right in declaring that Mr. Pindell shows a delicate sense of propriety in declining the ambassadorship to St. Petersburg. The rebuke administered by the latter to persons who have smeared an honorable appointment with political claptrap is well deserved. Mr. Pindell has performed a valuable service to the nation by refusing to ignore the effect in a foreign capital of an injurious controversy that should never have arisen.

"Political Huckstering."

Pittsburg Gazette: Henry M. Pindell's declination of the ambassadorship to Russia after his confirmation by the Senate will be a surprise to readers of the newspapers, though we question whether that he would do so was not known in advance where the knowledge would do the most good. Mr. Pindell was under the cloud of an accusation that he had agreed with United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis of his state that if appointed by President Wilson he would keep the place for only one year and, having had the honor of the highest diplomatic rank for that period, would retire and make way for another faithful Democrat. Although there have been explanations which seem to exculpate Mr. Pindell the matter left a bad taste and there was fair prospect that he would not be confirmed. There were other allegations, too, that smelled of political huckstering. As the matter now is concluded Mr. Pindell has the sort of vindication supposedly calculated to keep him in good countenance with his fellow citizens, especially those at his home, and an unpleasant situation, which would have been continued if his commission had been issued and he had gone to St. Petersburg, is terminated.

"Party to No Bargain."

Washington Herald: Henry M. Pindell is a greater man today in the estimate of his fellow-countrymen than he would have been had he accepted the title "ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary" to Russia, offered him by President Wilson and the Senate of the United States.

Mr. Pindell's manly course in declining appointment to this important post makes all the more deplorable the circumstances which impelled it. He has proved to the satisfaction of most people that he is equipped to perform with ability and tact the tasks which would have been his in St. Petersburg. When a letter alleged to have been written by Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, to Mr. Pindell was made public, apparently a political bargain to last one year and involving a United States Ambassadorship to a great European power was disclosed. Subsequent investigation by the Senate completely dissipated any such suggestion and proved conclusively that Mr. Pindell was party to no bargain for a year's Ambassadorship. Certainly the Senate had no other course to pursue than to confirm the President's choice.

FOREIGN NEWS GATHERED FOR THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH

King Warns Earl to Clear Himself of Divorce Blame

English Society Eagerly Awaits Outcome of the Melville Cause Celebre in Which Earl Fitzwilliam Figures as Co-Respondent, to the Distress of the Royal Family.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Society is eagerly awaiting the trial of the great divorce cause celebre of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Melville which involves Comyn Platt and the Earl Fitzwilliam as co-respondents. All the parties are well known in the smart set as the news dispatches to the Post-Dispatch have announced, the papers were filed this week.

The Earl Fitzwilliam is head of one of the most powerful, distinguished and wealthy aristocratic families in Great Britain. He has immense landed possessions, derives a huge income from coal and iron mines and for his own special relaxation runs an automobile factory where he is aiming to turn out the most perfect car on the market.

Wentworth Woodhouse, a great family mansion in Yorkshire, is one of the historic country seats in England. It enjoys the distinction, now becoming rarer, for the homes of aristocracy, of never having been let, and it shares with a few other aristocratic houses the record of having entertained within its walls every King and Queen of England since Elizabeth. The present King and Queen are frequent guests there.

King George is greatly concerned by the troubles of his friend. He has, it is said, written to Lord Fitzwilliam that he must clear himself of the accusations at the earliest possible moment. The Earl's reply, it is said, is an assurance of his absolute innocence.

Fitzwilliam a Noted Sportsman.

Earl Fitzwilliam, like all the members of his family, is a great sportsman, has frequently met with accidents in the hunting field and on one occasion enjoyed the privilege of reading his own obituary notice. He is personally very popular and married 18 years ago Lady Maud Dundas, only daughter of the Marquis of Zetland, who had never made her debut in society, and went almost straight from the school room to the altar. They have five children, one son and four daughters.

The other co-respondent, who is mentioned first in the petition is Mr. Comyn Platt, who has come into notoriety lately as the leader of the British League for the support of Leicester, a body which declares that it secures recruits and provides arms and other war necessities for Sir Edward Carson's volunteers.

The importance with which the case is viewed by the press and the Court as well as by the nobility and the royal family was proved a few days ago when Frank Harris, the former editor of the Fortnightly Review and now editor of Modern Society, was sent to jail for contempt of court. The contempt consisted of certain paragraphs in Modern Society reflecting on Earl Fitzwilliams and his conduct with reference to his wife. The Court took the view that the private statements were calculated to prejudice the public and prevent a fair trial of the pending suit. Harris may purge himself of the contempt by making an unqualified apology to the Court, but he has not yet taken advantage of the privilege.

The petitioner, Alexander Broderick Leslie-Melville, is a cousin of the present Lord Middleton, who was better known as St. John Broderick, War Minister for a time during the Boer war, while on the other side he is a cousin of the Earl of Leven, and Melville. He is a man of wealth and also a great sportsman.

Defendant Noted for His Gowns.

His wife, the respondent, is of Irish descent, a daughter of Col. Harvey Kelley, and she married as her first husband, Alan Daly, a barrister, who died, leaving her a widow. She is of handsome appearance, a noted dresser, and very active and prominent in connection with the many fancy dress balls that have been organized in London of late years. Her most noted photographs show her in a very scanty costume, as the Sleeping Beauty at the recent Arabian Nights ball.

Earl Fitzwilliam is anxious to get the case over as quickly as possible, but the President of the divorce division did not see why it should be expedited, and it probably will not come on until the end of the present term or after Easter.

Some people apparently can get their divorce suits expedited and others can't. Mrs. George West had no difficulty in arranging it.

Earl Fitzwilliam, however, may not be so fortunate though he is desirous of going on the witness stand and absolutely denying the allegations made against him. In the papers already filed by his counsel the Earl emphatically denies the suggested misconduct with Mrs. Leslie-Melville. He states that his association with her was of a strictly platonic, friendly character. A great deal of correspondence will be produced before the court.

ROYAL pair whose marriage the Czar refuses to annul; principals in a high-life British divorce in which a close friend of the King is chief co-respondent; and Kaiser's youngest son, for whom bachelor quarters are being furnished at Cassel, the home of his regiment.

KING AT SKITTLES, ONE OF MUNICH'S REGULAR SIGHTS

MUNICH, Feb. 7.—The spectacle of a King in a public drinking saloon must be a rarity nowadays. King Ludwig of Bavaria is, however, the most democratic monarch of the day and every fortnight spends a whole evening playing skittles in a beer garden here. His Majesty is a good player, despite his years and throws himself into the game with a will—collarless and in shirt sleeves. Generally a select party plays with the King, but not infrequently a stranger is asked to complete a set.

Beer, of course, goes very well with skittles and so Ludwig avails himself frequently during the evening of the frothing "Munchener"—of his own making, by the way.

Visitors take no apparent notice of the presence among them of the sovereign, who pays his share of the evening's score and goes away unattended about 11 o'clock.

The "Saxon Skittles Gazette" (skittles may be set down as the German national game) pays an eloquent tribute to His Majesty in its current issue. Saxony also boasts a kingly devotee in King Frederick August, but the latter's ministers will not allow him to play in public.

STRAIN OF PLEASING MANY OF NOBILITY KILLS PAINTER

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Widespread sympathy has been aroused by the singular and pathetic circumstances surrounding the death of John Henry Bacon, who painted the splendid coronation picture in Buckingham Palace. Bacon's constitution was completely broken down by the worries incident upon getting the sitting from the various functionaries who figured in the picture. The King and Queen showed the greatest consideration to him. He left seven children, all of them young and six are daughters. There is no provision for them.

Bacon was only 40 years old and had many years of desperate struggle for a recognition. His last commission, unfinished, stands in his studio. John Wanamaker, through Sir Vesey Strong, the late Lord Mayor of London, employed him to paint the scene at the Guildhall on the occasion of King George's first visit to the city of London after coronation. Wanamaker intended it is a gift to the Guildhall. Who will finish the picture is a problem that is difficult to solve.

FUTURE KING OF ALBANIA A SCHOLAR AND ATHLETE

VIENNA, Feb. 7.—"Carmen Sylvia," Queen of Rumania, has recently written a description of her nephew, Prince William of Wied, who is to be the new ruler of Albania. She says that as a boy he was seldom seen without a book in his hand and was very studious. This, however, did not prevent his physical development and at school he was a leader in athletics.

NICKNAMES BECOME A FAD IN BEST ENGLISH SOCIETY

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Nicknames are growing popular in English society. In a letter of condolence to a widow Queen Alexandra recently used the pet name of the woman's deceased husband. A few of the nicknames of prominent personages are: Prince Albert, "The Lobster;" the Marquis de Soveral, "Blue Monkey;" Lord Stramfordham, "Mammy;" Lord Lonsdale, "The Groom;" the Marchioness of Crewe, "Peggy;" the Marquis of Crewe, "Robin;" Viscount Churchhill, "G. W. R."

LONDON "FLAPPERS" AT DANCES WITH GROWN-UPS.

And Some Who Are Too Young to Flap Are Welcomed and Are Expected to Furnish Innocent Amusement.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The latest fashion in London is the giving of dances for "flappers" and grown-ups. A "flapper" is a boy or girl from 14 to 16 and who, of course, have been formally introduced to society.

There was a pretty party at Bourbon House lately, presided over by Lady Iris Capell, but given in honor of Lady Rachel, her young sister, who is only 15.

The two largest reception rooms on the first floor were used for dancing, which began at 9 o'clock and went on until 12, when a sit down supper (the guests numbered about 25 couples in all) was served in the billiard room.

The Capell girls were also present for the big party given at Drummond Castle, where the Countess of Ancaster has been entertaining.

One night a fancy dress dance was given and lively presents distributed to the youthful guests from a Peter Pan house which was erected in one of the state drawing rooms. The seven-year-old Lord Willoughby de Broglie was Peter Pan and Lady "Katie" Willoughby was Wendy, while fascinating little Lady Priscilla was a miniature Michael in little white knickers and long Norfolk coat. The two elder children, after tea, stood at the entrance to the house and produced from inside toys and sweets and pretty knick-knacks for the grown-ups.

QUEEN DRUMS UP CROWD TO HEAR KING'S SPEECH

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Apropos of the opening of Parliament next Tuesday an instructive story is told illustrating Queen Mary's masterful methods.

She pointedly referred in the court circles to the dwindling attendance of the peers and peeresses in the last couple of years when the King reads his speech from the throne. One woman tactlessly replied that while the Radical Government is in power with a policy antagonistic to the peers, they didn't feel called upon to countenance the inaugural ceremony. The Queen rejoined in caustic tones that when the King opened Parliament in person they showed disrespect to him in absenting themselves and they should imitate his sense of public duty.

The attendance on Tuesday, therefore, will be narrowly scrutinized, as the Queen's opinion becomes widely known.

The truth is that if the Unionists had any expectation of coming back to office in the future, the Tory peers would flock to Westminster and their absence is the measure of their hopelessness. Political weather experts on both sides agree there is no sign of reaction in favor of the opposition. Orange threats of rebellion have failed entirely to convince the electorate there is any genuine Orange grievance, while as a means of stampeding public opinion the civil war talk has proved a ludicrous fiasco.

BACHELOR COURT FOR KAISER'S YOUNGEST SON.

Prince Joachim's Friends Firmly Deny Report That Selection of a Home Indicates His Marriage.

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—The Kaiser's youngest son, Prince Joachim, who was 23 years old last December, will finally leave the "nest" this summer. He is attached to a Hussar regiment stationed at Cassel near Wilhelmshohe, the ancient Hessian capital where Napoleon III was confined a prisoner after Sedan. A new home is being prepared for the Prince in one of the old semi-French chateaux and here Prince Joachim will in future have a "bachelor" court of his own. Rumor declares that he is constitutionally not too strong and it seems to be believed that the Empress chose Cassel for him because of its healthful character and because the palace at Wilhelmshohe, where she usually spends much of August and part of September, is only a few miles distant.

In character and in features of face Prince Joachim closely resembles the Crown Prince. A Berlin rumor that the fitting up of the Cassel home is precedent to a forthcoming marriage is denied in authoritative circles.

It was formerly suggested that Prince Joachim might be the future Prince Consort of Luxemburg, Grand Duchess Marie being four years younger than he. But this plan, if it was seriously considered, was knocked on the head by the pronounced Francophile movement in the Grand Duchy, which made an alliance with the House of Hohenzollern "diplomatically undesired" as the phrase goes.

Last summer gossip in Cairo credited Prince Joachim with having lost his heart to an American girl, Miss Olive Huntington, whom he met while touring Egypt. It is true that the Prince, who shares his oldest brother's taste for witty and pretty American girls, showed a pronounced liking for the company of Miss Huntington, but it was vigorously denied that there was anything more in it.

Miss Huntington was touring with other pupils of Willard School in Berlin.

CZAR'S IRE FALLS ON FICKLE GRAND DUCHESS.

He Refuses to Annul Marriage of Maria Pavlovna to Prince William of Sweden, and Closes Court Against Her, Leaving Her Ostracized by Her Own House.

PRINCE IN AFRICA WITH WM. M'MILLAN OF ST. LOUIS

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 7.—The Czar has vetoed the petition of his cousin, the Grand Duchess Maria Pavlovna, to have her marriage with Prince William of Sweden annulled.

The young Princess is forbidden to attend the Russian court. Her husband has gone to Nairobi, in East Africa, to be the guest of the St. Louis sportsman, William McMillan, and his wife, at their large hunting estate, where they entertained former President Roosevelt on his notable African hunting tour.

The Czar's action creates a strange situation. The marriage was made valid by a political treaty signed by the Czar, and was not a complete religious marriage, because the husband did not join the Russian orthodox church. Thus in Russia it is merely a "union" in which the Holy Synod, as the only authority for divorce in Russia, takes no interest.

The effect of the veto is to punish the young Grand Duchess by ostracism in her position in the Romanoff family, but it cannot compel the Swedish Prince to continue to regard himself as a married man if he does not wish to.

The Czar still urges reconciliation. It is the first marriage arranged by personal treaty in his reign, and if Prince William should marry someone else, it will be a breach of the treaty and technically a defiance of the Czar.

The confusion brought on his authority has provoked a complete boycott of the young Grand Duchess, whose name has not been published anywhere since her return to Russia.

ANTI-JEWISH RULE HURTS RUSSIAN MEDICAL CONGRESS

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 7.—Invitations were issued for a medical congress at St. Petersburg next summer, in which it was stated that Jewish doctors could only remain in Russia during the session of the Congress. The Scandinavian profession protested against this offensive regulation affecting the Jewish conferees and the Russian Government has canceled the restriction, sending out amended invitations, but the Scandinavians have decided to boycott the congress.

QUEEN MARY'S STAFF TOO SEDATE FOR MODERN GIRLS

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Queen Mary has two vacancies for maids of honor. There has been the usuhl difficulty about making such selections because of the conditions prevailing in the royal household. The dress ordinances and the routine which is strongly proscribed makes the position rather trying except to some very serious-minded young women. It is stated that several young women have been approached and have excused themselves upon various grounds.

WOMAN DIES IN COFFIN AS GRAVE DIGGER SEEKS HELP

GENEVA, Feb. 7.—An aged woman was buried alive here the other day, but died before the coffin was opened. When the service was over and the grave digger was left to fill in the grave, he heard a noise in the coffin.

He became frightened and instead of opening the coffin he ran to summon help. When he returned with a doctor, the coffin was opened, and it was found the woman had turned over, but had died before help arrived. An investigation has been started.

"Hair More Beautiful Than You Ever Thought Possible"

Thousands of Women Are Using With Extraordinary Results the Secrets of Valeska Suratt, the Most Famous Self-Made Beauty of the World's Stage.

By Valeska Suratt.

IF I had a score of various hair tonics laid out before me, and I should close my eyes and pick one out indifferently, I believe the one I had so chosen would not produce on my hair any greater or less result than any one of the other nineteen. Formulas of many hair tonics sold still remain anciently modern. Improvement, I believe, has been sacrificed for cheapness of materials. Science's best formulas for growing hair do not find their way into the hands of the millions.

This is why I myself propose to give to you and the army of my less fortunate sisters the help which is their right to have. The formula I give here I consider one of my precious possessions. It has produced results out of all proportion to its cost. It is the most economical, effective hair preparation possible to secure. I am known as the only woman on the American stage who does not have to wear puffs, switches, turbans or other hair makeshifts to conceal poverty of hair. My wealth of hair is all my own. Try this formula if you would have your hair grow luxuriantly become long, silky, glossy, full of life, and thin patches will quickly fill out.

Mix half a pint of water with half a pint of alcohol (or take a full pint of imported bay rum, if you prefer it) and add to this one ounce of beta quinol, which you can obtain for not more than fifty cents at any drug store. Then it is ready to apply.

Mix this formula yourself at home and it will cost you far less and be more effective than any hair tonic you can ever buy ready to use.

MISS AGING—Every day that passes fastens a new line or wrinkle to your face, unless you have grown to learn the real way to keep the skin in youthful condition. There is only one way that I have ever learned and I will give it to you here. Every day is a day gone forever. Every day you use this formula is a day gained. I have known women even of 50 and 60 years to make themselves look years younger by using this wrinkle formula:

Add two teaspoonfuls of glycerin and two ounces of eptol to a half pint of hot water. Stir constantly until cold. Use very liberally. The eptol you can obtain for not more than fifty cents at the drug store. Mix the formula yourself and you will save a good many dollars. Use this cream very liberally.

ANGELINA—I defy any cream ever sold to produce the exquisite results which can be obtained by the following formula. This cream you should mix yourself, and you will then have a quantity of the most effective beautifier it is possible to obtain and at a cost many times less than is asked for complexion preparations. This cream beautifies the face, hands, arms and shoulders in a most remarkable way, removing every red spot, freckle and blemish and leaving the skin pinky white, soft and of the most exquisite purity.

Simply mix two tablespoonfuls of glycerin in half a pint of hot water and add one ounce of zintone, which will cost not more than fifty cents at the drug store. Stir until cooled. It is then ready to apply.

MISS O. F. N.—Too much care cannot be exercised in selecting a remover of superfluous hair. The only preparation I know that will do this without leaving a red spot, mark or burn is simple sulfo solution. You can use this on the most tender skin anywhere and you can be sure that it will remove every hair, heavy or light, thoroughly and without the least injury. It is wonderful to see how it just dissolves away the hair. Simple sulfo solution will cost you one dollar at any drug store.

SOROSIS—A good shampoo is absolutely necessary to hair health. Ordinary soap does not remove all the scurf, grease and grit which form a film on the scalp and take away the vitality of the hair. Dissolve a teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of hot water, and you will have the finest cleansing shampoo you have ever used. Your hair will be easier to do up, too, than after using soap and other shampoos. Eggol will cost you twenty-five cents at the drug store, and for this amount you will have enough eggol for over a dozen luxurious shampoos.

MISS R. T. B.—Development of the bust is one of the most difficult things to accomplish I know of. The use of mechanical devices, air or suction appliances are all dangerous, bothersome and, in fact, unnecessary. Massage is tedious and takes very long to show results. For a good, normal, prompt and natural development try this: Take regularly two teaspoonfuls three or four times a day, of a mixture of two ounces of rustone, half a cup of sugar and half a pint of cold water. This is absolutely safe. The rustone will cost one dollar at the drug store.

PEPPERY—Yes, it is possible to get rid of blackheads in only a few minutes' time. The use of blood tonics and creams I have found a waste of time and money. This will remove blackheads absolutely and surely: sprinkle some neroxin on a hot, wet sponge and rub this on the blackheads for a few moments. Then wash the face and see the difference. The neroxin will cost fifty cents at the drug store.

• • •

MRS. G. N. T.—No, blood tonics are not the thing for removing pimples. Creams are also useless. What you need is a powerful yet safe blood cleanser which will give quick results. Dissolve twelve ounces of sugar and one ounce of sarsene in a pint of water. Do this, take one or two teaspoonfuls after meals. Get the sarsene in the original package by the ounce.—ADVERTISEMENT.

VALENTINE DANCE OF U.D.C. SATURDAY

SYMPHONY CONCERT WITH YSAYE FRIDAY AFTERNOON AND SATURDAY EVENING

Society Rehearsing New Dances and Numbers for the Musical Comedy, "Campus Mouser," Which Will Be Given for the Benefit of Ridge Farm—Present Social Season Marked by Dances, Some of Which Are Followed by Breakfast, and by Parties Which Have Many Novel Features—Plans on for a Brief but Gay Season After Lent.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

ISN'T it funny, at the end of the season when everyone is supposed to be tired to death, what a lot of enthusiasm can be aroused over something new, no matter how much work it entails? About two hundred maids, matrons and men who have been dancing like mad all winter are rehearsing almost every hour in the day for the big dancing, musical comedy, "Campus Mouser," for the benefit of Ridge Farm.

The rehearsals are the most important things in their lives just now and everything else is put aside. However, these rehearsals furnish many an excuse for a party. The girls meet at each other's houses to sew and plan, and, of course, that means a luncheon or a tea.

Sometimes they have a rehearsal between rehearsals, with their dancing partners to help get over some part, a little difficult, as the debutante chorus did the other night when its members met at the Buckingham. Later Miss Jane McNair, whose birthday it was, took all to the McNair apartments and had a birthday celebration.

All the new steps which have been danced during the winter and lots of old ones are being embodied into dances for the various choruses.

ONE of the strangest affairs of this winter was the sheet and pillow case party given at the Country Club last night. Everybody who could get there was there, and as dancing until dawn has been the custom this winter, it is fairly certain to end with a breakfast. It is said that even the last Imperial was so late that some of the guests got home only in time for breakfast.

One of the most unusual was a masquerade given by Hugo Koehler a little more than a week ago. The apartment under the one he occupies in the Oxford was vacant so he hired it for the occasion and he had the supper served there. The rooms were arranged like a large cafe and the guests were seated at small tables, each with its special "cooler" and good things to eat.

There was the Schnaider fancy dress party, when a vaudeville troupe was hired to amuse the guests who stayed all night—it was New Year's eve—went to church and came back again for breakfast.

Then there was Billy Barnett's party when he and Miss Anna Benoist wore pink gingham rompers and all the guests dressed themselves up in the most comical costumes they could find.

There was the elaborate fete champetre which Mrs. John T. Davis Jr. gave when the inside of the Country Club was transformed into a summer scene and some of the guests wore dresses as Watteau shepherdesses and many more as summer girls. Some of the men were in Louis XIV costumes and others wore white flannel suits.

The McBride Twelfth Night Revel will go down as one of the most beautiful balls ever given here, when the maskers, in every conceivable costume, danced in a snowstorm—an imitation, but most realistic.

The Mother Goose party, which was talked of early in the season, was abandoned, and Mrs. John Fowler's Pierrette and Pierrot ball for her niece, Miss Ellanore Scott, was postponed indefinitely on account of Mr. Fowler's health.

There is some talk of another season after Lent, a short but a gay one, between the time everyone comes back from the South and the time they are off again for the summer.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE W. SIMMONS of Clayton will go to Ormond, Fla., this week to be with Mr. Simmons' father, E. C. Simmons, who has spent his winters in Florida for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Simmons will join them there about two weeks later.

Advance Styles in Spring Millinery. Sally Meagher, 801 Century Building.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurie F. Day of Minneapolis are coming to St. Louis about March 1 to stay until spring and have taken the James W. Wear house at 5333 Waterman avenue. Mrs. Day was formerly Miss Sister Hopkins, the sister of Mrs. Robert E. Filley.

SEVERAL interesting engagements were announced during the week, two of which are of more than ordinary interest in the Columbian Club set. Mr. and Mrs. David B. Eiseman of 4387 West Pine boulevard have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Eiseman, to Ralph Wolff, son of Mrs. Sigmund Wolff of 5068 Westminster place. The other was that of Miss Florence Bauman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Bauman of 41 Kingsbury place, and Jerome A. Sternberg of 1302 West Pine boulevard.

Mrs. Morgan Krebbs Deale of 5744 Cates avenue has as her guest her sister, Mrs. Helen Chamblin Dodson of Dallas, Tex.

A. Schumack, Ladies' Tailor and Dressmaker, 854 Century Bldg., is showing Callott, Premet, Cheruit-Bernard, Georgette tailored models for early spring.

Dr. and Mrs. Sylvester Nifong and Dr. W. D. Temm will depart for New Orleans today, where they will spend Mardi Gras, after which they will go to Cuba. They will return about the middle of March.

Misses Gladys and Helen Ittner, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Ittner of 5553 Bartmer avenue, left last week for Washington, D. C., to attend the Georgetown Prom.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Groves of 5419 Maple avenue gave a dance Friday evening in honor of her daughter, Miss Vera Groves, and Mr. Groves' niece, Miss Marjorie Brownson of Providence, R. I., who is visiting her.

Mrs. B. B. Graham will give a subscription suffrage bridge party Wednesday afternoon at her residence, 4145 Lindell avenue.

MRS. CHARLES H. BAILEY of 87 Vandeventer place will entertain her bridge club Wednesday at the Woman's Club at luncheon. There are 16 members, who have played together for a number of years, and a game will follow the luncheon.

All spring materials and fashions have arrived and await your inspection. H. Cramer Ladies' Tailoring Co., 4517 Olive.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver W. Hickel have returned from a trip through the South, where they spent their honeymoon, and will be at home after Feb. 15 at 3860 De Tonty street. Mrs. Hickel was formerly Miss Mae Overhoff.

Mrs. O. E. Auerbach of New York announces the engagement of her sister, Miss Glena Syfert, formerly of St. Louis, to Frank Archibald of Boston. The wedding to be early in March.

Now in our new location. Chas. Dauerheim Wall Paper Co., 4324 Olive st.

THE marriage of Miss Gladys Cupples-Scudder, daughter of Mrs. William H. Scudder of 3673 West Pine boulevard, and Henry McRee, Tuesday, will be one of the important weddings of the year. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride at 3:30 in the afternoon.

Miss Maude Cupples-Scudder will be the only bridemaid, and Mr. McRee's brother, William Griffith McRee Jr., will be his best man. It will be a quiet wedding, with only the nearest relatives and friends present, because Mr. McRee's family is in deep mourning.

The bride is considered one of the most beautiful girls in St. Louis, and since her debut she has been an acknowledged belle. Her mother was Miss Amelia Cupples, the adopted daughter of the late Samuel Cupples and the niece of Mrs. Cupples. The late Mrs. Walter Cerre Taylor and Mrs. Clifford R. Scudder were Mrs. Scudder's sisters.

Mr. McRee and his bride will go abroad for their honeymoon and will sail Thursday on the Kaiserin Auguste.

HAIR STOPS FALLING AND DANDRUFF GOES AT ONCE—25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Save your Hair! Beautify it! Invigorate your scalp! Danderine grows hair and we can prove it—Always effective.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous you must use Danderine, because nothing else accomplishes so much for the hair.

Just one application of Knowlton's Danderine will double the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, don't hesitate, but get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now? A 25-cent bottle will truly amaze you.—ADV.

The Home Beauty Parlor

Sue L.: I always recommend quinzoin to put vitality and luxuriance into any one's hair. It will promptly remedy the dandruff and itching scalp; it costs little and you can prepare it at home. From your druggist get one ounce quinzoin and one-half pint alcohol. Mix and add one-half pint cold water. This makes enough tonic to last a long time. Apply to your scalp twice a week. This is fine to prevent falling of the hair and premature loss of color.

Daly: Don't worry about being too "plump" when there is such a simple, easy way to reduce flesh without dieting or any strenuous exercise. Get four ounces of parnotic from your druggist and mix it in one and one-half pints hot water. Take a tablespoonful before meals. This is harmless and inexpensive and I think you will find a beneficial change within a week.

Leonora: There is no virtue in an egg shampoo. The slimy animal matter clings to the strands and clogs the pores of the scalp. I have found that canthrox is far the best thing to use in shampooing, as besides cleaning the hair, it leaves the scalp thoroughly stimulated. It is also very economical, and you can now get a trial package without cost by sending your name and address to the manufacturer, H. S. Peterson & Co., Dept. M. V., 212 W. Kinzie St., Chicago, Ill.

Polly: You do not need to send abroad for the new, perfect substitute for face powder. Make it yourself at home, by dissolving four ounces spurmax in one-half pint hot water. This is the simplest, purest lotion for making the skin soft and naturally fair. It stays on closely and gives a youthful freshness. When on it seems part of the skin and cannot be detected as can the old-style face powder.

Caroline: Yes, if the tissues of your face are inclined to sag, beware, or you will soon have wrinkles! Here is a good massage cream which tones and braces the tissues, while also beautifying the complexion: Mix an ounce of almozoin (from your druggist) in one-half pint of cold water. Add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply freely. At the first application you will feel the skin contract and you will soon get back the firm contour and a velvety skin. For a good blood purifier see answer to Maurice.

Maurice: The skin eruptions of which you speak are caused by impure blood, and you must eliminate the poisons from the system before you can hope to enjoy complete health. Into one-half pint alcohol (whisky must not be used) pour one ounce kardene, then add one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make a full quart. Take one tablespoonful of this old-fashioned blood cleanser and tonic before each meal. This is splendid for that weak, worn feeling and restores the vital organs to a healthy condition, and its timely use will save much serious sickness.

Fanchon: Certainly eyes are harmed by belladonna, but this homemade tonic will clear and make them brilliant, while it is strengthening and resting. Anyone can prepare it by dissolving an ounce of crystos (obtainable at any druggist's) in one half pint of clear water. Use eye cup or put a few drops in each eye at least once a day. Its brightening effect is immediate.

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Answer to "Modist": When the skin is too oily, a little borax added to the water before washing is helpful. For pimples and blotches on the face there is nothing better than taking a thorough course of one-grain Quinoxide tablets, which can be obtained in sealed tubes with full directions. These tablets remove pimples and whiten the skin.

Answer to "Annette": If you want a harmless and effective hair tonic, make it yourself, and avoid alcohol mixtures. Mix one-half ounce of Hairwand powder in a pint of pure soft water. This promotes the health and increases the growth of the hair. You will find directions with each sealed vial of the Hairwand powder. Miss Jose Collins, starring in "Follies," says: "I find Hairwand a most delightful tonic. My hair has greatly improved in every way."

Answer to "Mrs. R. G.": I can see no valid reason why you should not reduce your weight, since it is so well known that five-grain Phythyrin tablets will do it readily and harmlessly. You should reduce from 30 to 40 pounds to be normal. Most pharmacists sell these tablets in sealed tubes with directions.

Answer to "Miss B. B.": A pretty skin and a clear pink and white complexion can be attained by using the Gloriol system, consisting of Gloriol Glowene, Gloriol Emollient and Gloriol Balm. Full directions for massage accompany each and thousands of dollars' worth of these articles are bought each year by women and girls who appreciate their superior excellence. Regular and persistent use is required to get and keep the results. Miss Laurette Taylor, starring in "Peg O' My Heart," says: "I have never been able to find anything which cleared me so well as the three toilet requisites, Gloriol Golwene, Gloriol Emollient and Gloriol Balm, etc."

Answer to "Curious": Yes, superfluous hair on the face or neck can be readily and quickly removed by applying Fluvol powder as per directions with each sealed vial. This does not mar or scar, nor make the skin sore if used as directed.

Answer to "Man and Wife": Dandruff and itching scalp if neglected will result in the loss of hair and premature baldness. I know there are many unreliable remedies, but plain yellow Minyol is most reliable and effective, while it improves the color and texture of the hair and stops itching and removes all traces of dandruff.

Answer to "Mrs. C. M.": For a dry, harsh, wrinkly skin I advise twice daily a massage with Gloriol Emollient. Soon the wrinkles will vanish and the skin will become smooth and fair.

Answer to "Thin Girl": Your whole body being so dreadfully thin, indicates poor nutrition, which should be helped by taking three-grain Hyponuclane tablets with each meal. These tablets aid nutrition and weight is increased thereby. To develop the arms and chest, massage with medicated Venosol every day for several months. This is a nourishing, stimulating application which proves more effective than anything I know of.

Answer to "Miss G. R.": To keep the hair in curl and wave for days at a time try Gloriol Wavolene. It is invisible and easily applied. Straight, straggling hair is transformed into beautiful lasting waves. The best shampoo to use is Gloriol liquid shampoo. It does not deaden the hair or cause it to split.

Answer to "Mrs. B. R.": You ask what brand of face powder to use. There are many good and many harmful brands. I prefer Gloriol face powder, which can be had in white, pink and brunette shades. It is pure, fine and daintily perfumed.

Send two stamps for my book "Beauty Truths." It gives much valuable advice on massage, health and beauty.—ADVERTISEMENT.

RE-MODELING SALE

Beginning Monday (Tomorrow), a Week of Unparalleled Value-Giving

The Conditions that face us are these: We are taking over the entire Fourth Floor for the new Coat Department. This was formerly our reserve stock floor. This takes away the only place we had for our surplus stocks, and it will be a week or more before the new reserve stockroom will be ready. In the meantime new Spring goods are rushing in by every express and we are compelled to bring them all forward. This is crowding our floor until something MUST be done to relieve the congestion.

We had intended making these changes without saying anything about it to the public. But it's a bigger job than we thought, and will take several weeks to complete. So we are going to make prices for one week that should crowd a month's business into this one week.

NEW SPRING GOODS WILL BE SACRIFICED ALONG WITH WINTER LEFT-OVERS

Below is a partial list of what this sale offers. Every woman who can should attend and supply her outer apparel needs for both early Spring and to finish out the Winter.

FACE BROKE OUT WITH PIMPLES

Would Enlarge to About Four Times Their Size. Itched Very Much and Cracked Open. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In Short Time Cured.

R. F. D. No. 1, Thurston, Ohio.—"About a year ago my face broke out with small pimples. They were about as big as the head of a pin when first noticed, and would enlarge to about four times that size. A yellow fluid would gather in them and I could open them. This enlarged the sores and caused large scabs over my face. When it would commence to dry up it would itch very much and then crack open around the scab making a very sore spot.

"I tried several different salves and ointments but none of them did any permanent good. At last I sent for some Cuticura Soap and Ointment which I used according to directions and in a short time I was completely cured and it did not even leave a scar." (Signed) Miss E. Irene Thomas, June 16, 1913.

In the care of baby's skin and hair, Cuticura Soap is the mother's favorite. Not only is it unrivaled in purity and refreshing fragrance, but its gentle emollient properties are usually sufficient to allay minor irritations, remove redness, roughness and chafing, soothe sensitive conditions, and promote skin and hair health generally. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Brings Natural Color to Gray Hair

Men and women whose hair is gray, streaked or faded, and who would like to bring back its natural youthful color, should try just one application of Queen Gray Hair Restorer and then note results in their mirror. The transformation is amazing and pleasing beyond all description and better yet the restoration does not leave the hair sticky or greasy.

This wonderful preparation, which was discovered some years ago, should not be confused with ordinary "hair dyes" or stains, which at best merely darken the hair with unnatural color very easily detected. The Queen Gray Hair Restorer brings a color that is the exact duplicate of your youthful days and leaves the hair soft and fluffy. This valuable preparation is made by Queen Chemical Co. of Buffalo, N. Y., and is sold by all the leading drug and department stores everywhere, and almost any hairdresser will recommend it. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00—ADV.

To Increase Bust Measurement

A beautiful bust is woman's greatest charm, and with the aids that modern science has wrought any woman may possess one.

If every flat-chested woman who reads this would go to Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. at once and get a package of Sorose (price $1.00) she would soon learn that her own bust could be developed from three to six inches very quickly and with perfect safety and secrecy.

Sorose, which is a prescription recommended by a famous physician for just this purpose, is almost magical in its quick effect, and as it is used any woman can watch her busts develop almost from day to day and see them grow large, round, firm and beautiful. There is no massaging, no steaming pots, nothing to rub on and nothing injurious to take. Sorose acts only on the busts.

It does not increase growth at any other point, but its action on the bust is so certain and remarkable that long ago its makers authorized Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. to sell it on a positive guarantee of satisfactory development or money back, and this same guarantee is in effect today. Mail orders filled by Embee Toilet Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Doctor's Advice
By Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Ellwood streets, Dayton, O., inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Anxious Wife"—Give 10 to 15 drops of the following in water an hour before each meal and your child will soon be controlled: Comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; tincture cubebs, 1 dram; tincture rhus-aromatic, 2 drams.

"La Rue" writes: "For many years I have suffered with stomach and bowel trouble, which has been caused by a severe case of catarrh. My blood is also in poor condition. What can be done for me?"

Answer: If you follow the directions given below you should be well and strong again. Obtain the following from any well-stocked drug store and mix by shaking well, then take a teaspoonful four times daily: Syrup sarsaparilla comp., 4 ozs.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; fluid ext. buchu, 1 oz. Use in connection with this the following local treatment: Get a 2-oz. package of antiseptic vilane powder and make a catarrh balm by mixing one ounce of lard or vaseline with a level teaspoonful of the powder and use in the nostrils daily. Also make a wash of one pint of warm water and one-half teaspoonful of vilane powder and use two or three times a day until the nostrils are thoroughly cleansed and your trouble should soon be gone.

"Elsie M." writes: "I have such short, stringy, straggling hair and my scalp is full of dandruff. Please advise what to do."

Answer: The best advice I can offer is simple. Get at a well-stocked drug store a 4-oz. jar of plain yellow minyol, directions accompanying, and use it regularly. It promotes a healthy, vigorous growth of hair and abates dandruff, itching scalp, lusterless hair and stops falling hair. If the hair is harsh and straggling it restores a soft, fluffy appearance, and brings back the intense natural color.

"Hazelle" says: "I would certainly appreciate something that would increase my weight, and take away that languid feeling which I am subject to most of the time. My blood is weak and watery and my appetite is poor."

Answer: Your condition is very easily overcome if you will follow the directions given below. Ask your druggist for 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets and take according to the directions and your weight should increase. These tablets promote assimilation, absorption and aid digestion, transform the complexion and figure. They are prescribed by physicians and are perfectly good. They should be taken regularly for several months and you should depend upon gaining flesh and that languid feeling will vanish completely.

"D. E. G." writes: "My rheumatism is getting worse all the time. I am getting so stiff that it makes it very hard for me to get around."

Answer: Do not worry about your rheumatism, as that can be very easily controlled by using the following: Get at the drug store the ingredients named, mix thoroughly and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again at bedtime, and you should soon be entirely relieved of that disagreeable disease, rheumatism. Purchase 2 drams of iodide of potassium, ½ oz. of wine of colchicum; 4 drams of sodium salicylate; 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort; 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, and 5 ozs. of syrup sarsaparilla. This has satisfied thousands and I am sure it will you.

"Musician" asks: "Can you tell me how to overcome a bronchial trouble, which manifests itself after singing by a tickling in the throat, hoarseness and a slight cough?"

Answer: Obtain a bottle of essence mentho-laxene and use it pure, or make into a cough syrup by mixing with ordinary granulated sugar syrup or honey. Directions for use and how to make accompany the package. It makes a full pint of effective, pleasant cough syrup and is excellent for all throat and bronchial trouble.

"Mrs. G. B." writes: "I suffer a great deal with stomach disorders—heavy feeling after eating, heart palpitation, gas on stomach, etc. Am restless and irritable. Afraid to eat a hearty meal. Sometimes great pain. I fear appendicitis."

Answer: The neglect of constipation and indigestion is the most frequent cause of appendicitis. It is better to prevent than to cure by an operation. I advise that you obtain tablets triopeptine and take according to directions accompanying sealed carton. They are pink, white and blue, to be taken morning, noon and night, respectively. I think many cases of appendicitis could be prevented by using triopeptine intelligently.

"Mrs. C. C." writes: "Can you prescribe a tonic for one who is sleepless, nervous, hysterical, thin and getting thinner? Have little appetite and am restless day and night."

Answer: The following if used for several weeks will gradually restore and strengthen your nervous system: Compound syrup of hypophosphites, 5 ozs., tincture cadomene, 1 oz. (not cardamom). Mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful before each meal.

"K. K. K." asks: "I am growing more stout as I get older and weigh 65 pounds too much now. I am alarmed and want to reduce. Please advise what to take."

Answer: You need not be alarmed if you will begin taking 5-grain arbolone tablets. These tablets reduce usually at the rate of a pound a day after the first few days. Any druggist can supply them in sealed tubes with full directions.

"Poor H." writes: "My health is very poor on account of a long-standing constipation. I have to use pills or something all the time. Can you prescribe something to take that will cure chronic constipation?"

Answer: Constipation is probably the cause of more illness than any other thing. Most remedies only aggravate the trouble and never cure. I always prescribe 3-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets), and have found them most reliable and gradually curative. They act pleasantly and tone up the bowels and liver while purifying the blood.

"Candid" writes: "Can you advise me how to cure a very bad case of nervous breakdown? I am easily startled, irritated or worried. Have aching in back of neck, dizzy spells and seem wholly unable to get strong and energetic as I was at one time. Cold hands and feet bother me, too."

Answer: A good vitalizing tonic such as 3-grain cadomene tablets is advised. Splendid effects are obtained by hundreds from this treatment.

"Mr. C. F." writes: "What should I do to relieve a severe case of kidney and bladder disease? Have fever, chills, pains like rheumatism and soreness in region of bladder."

Answer: For such symptoms as you describe, I prescribe my favorite formula under the name of balmwort tablets. This is a splendidly efficacious remedy for such abnormal conditions. Begin their use at once as per directions on each sealed tube.

PERU'S CONGRESS CALLED TO DISCUSS NEW REGIME

Statement of Political Change Will Be Made and Approval Asked of All Projects.

LIMA, Peru, Feb. 7.—An extraordinary session of the Peruvian Congress was called today to meet on March 1. At the opening of the session the Government will make a statement in regard to the political situation arising out of the overthrow of President Billinghurst.

Resolutions for the persons who distinguished themselves at the time of the change of government will be asked and Congress will be asked to approve the budget and other projects.

The provisional government today made grants of $500 to each of the families of soldiers who died during the fighting at the capture of the presidential palace.

The second vice-president of the republic, Miguel Echenique, who took office at the same time as President Billinghurst, returned today.

WILD BIRD PLUMES SENT BY PARCEL POST SEIZED

Shipments From Foreign Countries Will Be Taken and Destroyed by Customs Men.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Shipments of wild bird plumage from foreign countries will be seized and destroyed in this city, it was announced today by the customs collectors. Two parcel post shipments of feathers from the Orient were seized and the District Attorney's office asked a court order to destroy them.

The shipments were a package of Chinese pheasant wings mailed to Mrs. G. R. Hing of Northboro, Mass., and three pheasants breasts mailed from Japan to Mrs. F. S. Kochendorf of Newark, Ohio.

250 New Spring Suits

Models that ordinarily would sell for $19.75 to $22.50

at $16.50

WE are determined to turn these usually dull February days into busy ones, and to accomplish this we placed an order with one of the best makers for 1500 handsome Suits for all our various stores, of which 250 have been allotted to St. Louis.

On account of the magnitude of our order, we secured an unusual concession in the price—and in addition to this we have sacrificed the greater part of our profit—which accounts for the fact that we now are in a position to offer you models that regularly would sell at $19.75 and $22.50—at this surprising price of $16.50.

We illustrate four of the handsome new models

WHICH you can readily see are just the correct and popular short, jaunty effects which will be in vogue this season—and there are quite a number of other pleasing styles in all the new shades including navy blue, nattier blue, oriole, tango and the new brown as well as black. This is an extraordinary offering to come at the very beginning of the season—but we assure you the values are as represented—and if you will call and see these suits, you will appreciate the importance of this occasion.

Final Clearance of Winter Suits

Choice of the finest in the entire house at............ $14.75

THIS offer means exactly what it says—every Fall and Winter Suit in our entire establishment, no matter what the former price may have been, will go on sale tomorrow at $14.75—there are about 196 Suits in all—some sold as high as $50.00 and many at $25.00, $30.00 and $35.00—take the finest in the lot tomorrow, at $14.75.

HAIR TURNING GRAY OR FALLING? JUST MIX SAGE TEA AND SOME SULPHUR

It's Grandmother's Recipe for Dandruff and Restoring Color to Hair. Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's" which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can positively tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and glossy than ever.—ADV.

BUST DEVELOPED ONE OUNCE A DAY

A New Simple Easy Home Method That Gives Quick And Permanent Success

Judge from my picture as to the truth of what I say to you—that the crowning feminine attribute is a bust of beautiful proportions, firmness and exquisite development. Then ask yourself how much you would like to have such a photograph of yourself, showing the glory of womanhood with its lines of infinite charm and grace. It would be worth far more than a two-cent stamp, would it not? Then let me give you my message—let me tell you of what I have learned and let me give you recent pictures of myself to prove what I say—for if you will write me today

I Will Tell You How—FREE

I will tell you gladly and willingly. Why should any woman neglect an opportunity to escape the pain and heartache of being skinny, scrawny, angular and unattractive in body? Misery is not our heritage. Nature planned that you—a woman—should have the rich, pulsing lines of warm, living flesh molded after the mother of us all, the description of whom perfumes our sacred literature with love and admiration for the divinity of woman's form. For why should there be that pitiful aspect—the face of a woman and the form of a man.

Write To Me Today

I don't care how fallen, or flaccid, or undeveloped your bust now is—I want to tell you of a simple home method—I want to tell you how you can gain perfect development one ounce a day. No physical culture—no massage, foolish baths or paste—no plasters, masks or injurious injections—I want to tell you of an absolutely new method, never before offered or told about—insuring immediate success and permanent beauty.

Send No Money

Just write me a letter—address it to me personally—that's all. I will answer it by return mail—and you can develop your bust one ounce a day—you can be what you want to be. Believe me when I say that you will bless me through years of happiness for pointing the way to you and telling you what I know. Please send your letter today to the following address

Every Home Needs This Splendid Remedy

No Home Can Afford to Be Without a Mild, Reliable Laxative-tonic.

No well-regulated home should be without a laxative, for there is scarcely a day in a family of several persons that someone doesn't complain of a headache or sleeplessness, or show the first signs of a cold.

A laxative then becomes a necessity or what was a trifling congestion at the beginning may run into a serious cold or fever. No harsh remedy is needed, but simply a mild laxative-tonic that will make the liver active and stir up the bowels. People who have tried a great many things and are themselves heads of families, who have seen the little ills run to big ones, will tell you that there is nothing better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which you can obtain at any drug store for 50 cents or $1 a bottle, the latter being the family size.

Among the great believers in Syrup Pepsin for constipation in old or young, as a general household emergency remedy, is Mrs. M. F. Smith, 710 N. Cherry street, San Antonio, Tex. To use her own words, she says she will bless Dr. Caldwell to her dying day for she believes that through his remedy, Syrup Pepsin, she found her way to permanent good health.

MRS. M. F. SMITH

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is scientifically compounded and its purity is vouched for. Mothers give it to tiny babes, and grown people, taking a little larger amount, find it equally effective. It is mild and gentle, pleasant-tasting and free from griping.

It does not hide behind a high-sounding name and is absolutely free from any prohibited ingredient. Families who once use Syrup Pepsin forever after avoid cathartics, salts, pills and other harsh medicines, for these only do temporary good, are nauseous and a shock to any delicate system. Such things should never be given to children.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington street Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

Amazing Story of the A. & M. Bridge Grab

given the privilege of connecting his belt railroad with the free bridge approach at a point 2300 feet east of the pier, and that the city would not interfere with any of his own private projects, provided they did not interfere with the city's plans.

As soon as the new administration went into office, Scherrer renewed his negotiations with the city, coming forward with a new proposition to build an approach 21 miles long and sell it to the city, on the installment plan, at a cost of $7,000,000. This proposition the House of Delegates converted into a scheme to grab $4,200,000 for the construction of the Scherrer approach on the right of way he originally proposed to use for his belt line railway. As Scherrer's principal object was to get the approach built through the lands on which he held options, to give value to these lands, he offered no objection to the changes made by the House of Delegates.

But for Scherrer's many requests for more time to get his proposition in shape, the administration would have submitted a bond issue proposition for $2,750,000 last summer, and if it had carried, the construction of the approach would now be under way.

Scherrer's attempt to grab the land required for the east side approach was regarded with great disfavor by former Mayor Kreismann, former President of the Board of Public Improvements Reber and former City Counselor Walther.

In preparing to file its condemnation suits to acquire approach lands, the city had staked out the right of way for the east approach and made a plat and description of the lands. Scherrer examined these plats and descriptions in the office of the Board of Public Improvements.

Scherrer Tries to Bottle Up the East Pier of the Bridge.

Then, on the thirteenth day of October, 1910, using an equity in a $7000 tract of land, incumbered by mortgage for $32,000, as the capital stock, he incorporated the Alton & Mississippi Belt Railway and Transportation Co.; with an alleged capital of $25,000.

Without the knowledge of any city official, he filed a condemnation suit on the strip of land from the river to the point where the wagon approach diverges from the railroad approach—a distance of 2300 feet. Then, to completely bottle up the east pier, he included a plot of ground entirely surrounding the pier at the water's edge.

In this suit, as well as in the Latinette case, Scherrer contended that St. Louis had no right to condemn land in Illinois for the bridge approach. He carried the Latinette case to the United States Court of Appeals, but his connection with the case was not definitely revealed until Latinette, after Scherrer had refused to reimburse him for the loss he suffered, told the whole story, and made public the secret contracts.

Investigation by Post-Dispatch reporters revealed the fact that Scherrer had permitted the options to lapse on lands within range of the proposed approach where it would be an elevated structure. The options in force are on lands about three miles from the east pier of the bridge. The farmers who gave the options said that Soucy, who grew up in the Cahokia district, obtained them. Scherrer and Soucy have both refused to disclose the identity of the persons interested with them in the ownership of these options, or of the persons who have been advancing the money to pay the expenses of the Alton & Mississippi promotion. Scherrer's financial rating is indicated by the fact that the Sheriff of St. Clair County has been unable to find that he had enough property to satisfy a judgment for $156.10, which is one of several judgments that have been outstanding against him for nine years.

It was to break the grip which the A. & M. schemers seemed to have on a majority of the House of Delegates, and to bring about the speedy completion of the free bridge, in accordance with the Reber plans already adopted by the city, that the Post-Dispatch inaugurated its campaign on Jan. 10.

THREE OPERAS OF APRIL SEASON NOW NAMED WITH CASTS

"Rigoletto," "Tosca" and "Parsifal" Announced, With Fourth Choice to Follow.

RUFFO AND GARDEN STARS

Fremstad or Julia Claussen to Sing Kundry—Heavy Season Renewal Sale.

The Grand Opera Committee met yesterday and, after reviewing the result of the voting contest which was inaugurated several weeks ago among subscribers of previous seasons as well as the public in general, announced three of the four selections for the fifth annual engagement at the Odeon, April 16, 17 and 18.

"Rigoletto," by Verdi, with Titta Ruffo, the world's greatest baritone, in the title role received the highest number of votes.

Next, and in almost equal demand, was "La Tosca," by Puccini, with Mary Garden, assuming the role of Floria Tosca.

"Parsifal," Richard Wagner's Consecrational Festival Play, was the overwhelming choice over "Lohengrin," the only other Wagnerian opera offered for the forthcoming engagement.

The selection of the fourth opera will be deferred until later in the month. The order in which the operas will be given is also withheld for the present.

The committee announces that more than half of the subscribers of last season have renewed their subscriptions without knowledge of what operas will be presented.

The committee will continue to receive renewal subscriptions until next Saturday, Feb. 14. On the following Monday, Feb. 16, the season subscription lists will be open to the public at Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney's, Stix, Baer & Fuller's, Famous-Barr and Nugent's—these institutions having agreed to serve as agencies for the Grand Opera Committee.

It is believed the out-of-town patronage will surpass that of previous years. Season subscriptions have already been received from Memphis, Tenn.; Litchfield, Belleville, Springfield, Edwardsville, Ill.; Jefferson City, Fayette, Moberly, Mo.; also Fort Smith, Ark.

The casts of the three operas now chosen are:

The Executive Board in charge of arrangements for the forthcoming season is: G. W. Simmons, chairman; Edward A. Faust, vice-chairman; Mrs. J. L. Mauran, Mrs. John T. Davis Jr., Daniel G. Taylor, Charles A. Stix, James E. Smith, Alex Hilton and Guy Golterman.

The guarantors who have subscribed $1000 each are: W. K. Bixby, Robert S. Brookings, August A. Busch, Daniel Catlin, Dwight F. Davis, G. L. Edwards, Edward A. Faust, Philip B. Fouke, John Fowler, Edward F. Goltra, Lyman T. Hay, C. Kilpatrick, J. L. Mauran, Dan C. Nugent, Tom Randolph, M. Shoenberg, G. W. Simmons, James E. Smith, Charles A. Stix, Festus J. Wade, M. L. Wilkinson and Louis Werner.

TIME FOR DISAPPEARING.

"The life of a playwright is not all beer and skittles," says David Belasco in the February Green Book Magazine. "There are many disappointments and discouragements.

"A young playwright attended the first performance of his play one evening and turned pale with excitement and a sudden rush of pride as he heard, from his position in the wings, the sound of roaring voices.

"'They are calling for the author!' he cried feverishly, as the manager stepped up behind him. 'What shall I do? Must I make a speech?'

"The manager had not only heard but seen the audience. He took the budding playwright by the arm.

"'The best thing you can do,' he whispered, 'is to slip out of the stage door and escape while there's time.'"

Play-Producer Brady Forms Photoplay Corporation With Capital of $1,000,000

Spoken-Drama Magnate Enters the "Movie" Field on a Big Scale, Equipped With Sufficient Play-Material to Last for Years—His Significant Announcement of Plans for His New Venture—A Seemingly Ominous Situation, Promiseful of Good.

Vast Growth of Motion Picture Industry Contains No Real Menace to the Art of Drama—Fewer Plays and Playhouses, but Worthier Productions, the Logical Outcome—A Study of the Situation Now Being Created in the Theatrical World.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

WILLIAM A. BRADY, one of the leading New York play-producers, now also becomes a "movie" magnate, having organized the Brady Picture Plays Corporation with a capital of $1,000,000 and gone into the business on a big scale that testifies to his confidence in its box-office promise of prosperity.

"The motion picture concerns now in the field," says Mr. Brady, "appear to have approached the verge of a play famine. This is the situation for which I have been waiting. I already control a great number of plays, acquired during my career as a producing manager, and in addition to these, I have been quietly acquiring rights in others for the past two years, so that my company starts in with enough material to keep it busy for a long time to come. A few of the plays controlled by me are 'Way Down East,' 'Trilby,' in conjunction with the Famous Player Film Co.; 'The Shepherd King,' 'Bought and Paid For,' 'The Man of the Hour,' 'Under the Polar Star,' 'The Dollar Mark,' 'Hindle Wakes,' 'The Bottom of the Sea,' 'The Pit,' 'After Dark,' 'A Woman's Way,' 'Monbars,' 'Over Night,' 'Carnival,' 'The Sorrows of Satan,' 'Little Women,' 'Foxy Grandpa,' in association with Joseph Hart; 'The Painted Woman,' 'The Dagger and the Cross,' 'The Lady from Oklahoma,' 'A Daughter of the Tenements,' 'The Balkan Princess,' and at least 80 others. This list does not include the numerous scenarios already purchased from novelists and dramatic authors and ready for production at any time. We have secured a big plant in the Far West, in addition to a completely equipped studio in New York which we will take over in the next three or four days. It is our purpose to issue our product through states' rights distributers in America and foreign rights' agents in the various countries of Europe."

So there you are—and please remember that Daniel Frohman and Klaw & Erlanger already have preceded Mr. Brady in this invasion of the moving picture field. It will be in order to look out for some startling changes in the offerings of many established theaters next season, both in New York and throughout the country at large.

At this same time there comes from London the first moving picture year book issued in England, showing the amazing rise and progress of the "movie" industry in Great Britain, with figures bearing upon the European situation as a whole.

According to these statistics, there are now 15,700 moving-picture shows in the British Isles and during 11 months of 1913, these shows were visited by 8,000,000 persons. Among the famous players who have "acted into the films," are Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, Sir Charles Wyndham, Sir Johnstone Forbes-Robertson, Gertrude Elliott (Lady Forbes-Robertson), Charles Hawtrey, Ellaline Terriss, Seymour Hicks, Mrs. Langtry, Violet Vanbrugh, Arthur Bourchier, Gladys Cooper, James Welch, Martin Harvey and, most illustrious of all, Sarah Bernhardt. The interesting fact also is mentioned that, in addition to their popularity throughout Europe, moving-pictures now are being permanently exhibited in Australia, China, India, Africa and even in the Pacific islands, this latter employment of the "movies" being in conjunction with missionary work.

Coincidently, also, George Bernard Shaw characteristically announces in London that he is seriously considering an offer for the production of his plays in motion pictures. "The only way to fight bad films is to produce good films," says Mr. Shaw, with his accustomed modesty. "I have been offered large sums to allow my plays to be produced at the picture theaters and to write special scenarios for moving-picture presentation. I am very fond of the cinematograph. When I go to the provinces I visit a cathedral, if there is one. Otherwise, I go to the only alternative, a cinematograph theater."

Do not believe for a moment, however, that the present great importance of the motion-picture industry, or its assured greater development in the near future, contains any serious menace to the spoken drama, which is, in its essentials, and in humanity's need of it, an imperishable art.

There will be fewer theaters, but they will be more sincerely devoted to the production of worthy drama. There will be fewer producers of plays, but they will be more solicitous concerning the artistic values of the plays they produce. There will be fewer playwrights, but the quality of their work will be higher because of a more genuinely vocational impulse toward their chosen calling. There will be fewer plays, but they will be better plays because of a more discriminating selection directly due to the above mentioned truths. There will be fewer stars in the theatrical firmament, but they will be real stars, not shallow mediocrities "circused" into the semblance of stars. And there will be fewer players, but they will be more competent because fitness for the best performance of their tasks will be the dominant factor in their professional well-being. For it must be remembered that the existing plethora of theaters, of play producers, of playwrights, of plays, of stars and of players has been born not of a vast increase of devotion to drama, but of the discovery, made about twenty-five years ago, when the tidal wave of playgoing began to indicate its full possibilities of financial profit, that there were "millions in it" for all who should invest their money in the theater as a money-making proposition pure and simple.

Well, the millions have been made, to the sore detriment of the drama, the tidal wave of theatrical prosperity has reached its crest and is now receding, the stage soon will return to the normal conditions that are healthiest for the noble art of which it is the native soil—and there is every good reason why all true lovers of the play should rejoice and be exceeding glad. The "movies" are a blessing, not a curse, in the ultimate logic of their competition with the spoken drama. They are restoring it to the safekeeping of those who will serve its interests for love's sake—and this is the only service through which any art can attain its noblest expression.

Suppose, for example, now that well-attested figures have shown an annual American expenditure of $600,000,000 for music, that the whole greedy army of mere money makers should here discern another entertainment field for profitable investment of the dollar-breeding dollars which they so cherish for the breeding quality alone. What would be the result?

Why, bless us and save us all!—in another 10 years or so one wouldn't be able to recognize the ancient and honorable art of music in the swollen monstrosity then created by too liberal a feeding of money for the sole purpose of making more money. There'd be a thousand so-called great musical stars where now there is one really great. Pianists, violinists, cellists, vocalists, all possible solo material for commercialized exploiting, would be press-agented into pseudo-distinction by battalions. Grand operas would be composed while you wait. Symphonies would be written between the rising and the setting of the sun. Sonatas would have their inception and completion within a period of the moon's one swing across a section of the sweet night's sky. Opera houses and vast music auditoriums would spring up like mushrooms. Four-flushing symphony orchestras heralded as worthy of Beethoven's conducting would come into existence with an afternoon's rehearsal. Music? Why, we'd be told that it was the golden age of music!

And so it would be, in the sordid sense—but O, the pity and the shame of it! And the acute indigestion and sickening revolt of the world's musical stomach—precisely what now has happened to the world's stomach for drama! There you have the whole situation in a nutshell. The worst fate that can befall one of the fine arts is for it to become financially so profitable, as to attract those who don't give a whoop in Hades for the art itself, but who love its pecuniary rewards with a love that passes all understanding.

Granville Barker in London and Winthrop Ames in New York seem likely to lead the way in a return to the sound foundation upon which all genuinely worthy achievement in the production of drama must of necessity be based—that of the permanent acting organization, carefully schooled, having a home of its own in a theater devoted to high dramatic endeavor.

Granville Barker, financially backed by a popular subscription of funds upon the investment, of which virtually no return of profit is asked save that of profit to the drama itself, is hoping and striving to render good service with his Repertory Theater, to be established in time for the opening of the next London theatrical season. Winthrop Ames, devoting his own inherited fortune to the best service of the drama, is seeking these same good ends in his conduct of the Booth and the Little Theater, his two New York playhouses. A skilled intelligence and a time-mellowed experience in their field of effort are possessed by both. The experiment of each is well worth watching and well worth supporting if opportunity arises. Also are their ventures of value as serving to hasten that day when every large city will boast its own theater and its own generously supported company of players for the wise fostering of an art necessary alike to the happiness and to the culture of all such communities.

In the meantime, no lover of the spoken drama need feel the slightest apprehension because of the world-wide popularity of the moving-picture shows. The "movies" themselves are, in this very aspect, among the drama's best friends. They are compelling its return to its own people. Already it has been too long under the control of those who value it solely and exclusively for the money that can be made from it.

KATHLEEN MACDONELL SHUBERT...

JULIA SANDERSON OLYMPIC

AN IMITATION DUET.

When Alexander Carr was stricken with illness recently his role in "Potash & Perlmutter" was played by Harry First, an understudy who had been hovering about the Cohan Theater awaiting a chance ever since the opening night. First acted the part very well, and during his period of convalescence Carr went to the theater to witness his performance.

After watching the performance for a while Carr called on First in his dressing room.

"You are doing very well, First," said Carr, "but tell me, why do you imitate me in every gesture and facial expression?"

"Say, Carr," replied First, "I don't imitate you, and you don't imitate me. We both imitate David Warfield."

BEAUTIFUL BUST

How to Get a PERFECT FORM

50c Box FREE

We want to send you free a 50c package of Dr. Catherine E. Kelly's wonderful treatment for making the bust plump and firm; also our booklet, "The Perfect Figure." Dr. Kelly used this treatment herself, and it increased her own and her patients' bust measurements from 3 to 6 inches. Write today and enclose 10c to help pay distribution expenses, and a 50c treatment will be mailed at once in plain package.

Frost-bites, Chilblains, Corns, Callouses and Sore Feet. Quick Cure.

Many persons dread the approach of winter on account of chilblains and frost-bites which causes a soreness and itching at times almost unbearable, frequently bringing on a nervous condition. The following treatment gives immediate relief. "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for 15 minutes. Repeat this for several days until the trouble disappears." The action of Calocide compound for all foot ailments is really remarkable. It works through the pores and removes the cause. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. Sweaty, smelly feet and tender, aching feet need but a few applications. Bunions get relief instantly. Any druggist has Calocide in stock or will get it from his wholesale house. A twenty-five cent package is usually sufficient to put the worst feet in fine condition. Each package contains valuable instructions on care of the feet. Published by Medical Formula laboratories of Chicago.—ADV.

"SUNSHINE GIRL," MUSICAL COMEDY, NOW AT OLYMPIC

"Bought and Paid For" Returns to Shubert; "The Old Homestead" to American.

JULIA SANDERSON in "The Sunshine Girl." Olympic. New musical comedy. Ran all last season at the Knickerbocker Theater in New York City, following a two years' run at the Gaiety Theater in London. Score by Paul Rubens, who also collaborated with Cecil Raleigh in writing the libretto.

Story concerns a young Englishman who inherits a famous soap-making plant at Port Sunshine, England, with the proviso that, if he marries within five years, the factory becomes the property of the employes. Disguised as a laborer in the plant, with a friend posing as the heir, he falls in love with the prettiest of his factory girls, and the plot's complications arise from this situation.

Play produced by Charles Frohman. Supporting company headed by Joseph Cawthorn in leading comedy role.

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR." Shubert. Return engagement of George Broadhurst's drama, telling the story of a powerful financier who marries a telephone girl and, drunk, claims her as his chattel because it was for money and social position that she became his wife. In the play's "big scene" the husband shatters the panel of a door and forces his way into the wife's room.

Next week, "The Honeymoon Express."

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD." American. Return engagement of Denman Thompson's famous character-type comedy of New England rural life, with E. L. Snader in the star role of old Josh Whitcomb. Capable production promised, with the singing of the village quartet a feature, as always.

VAUDEVILLE. Columbia. Bill headed by Eddie Foy and the Seven Little Foys, his clever children, in a bright comedy act.

As one of the most important vaudeville offerings of the present season the Columbia Theater announces for next week Gertrude Hoffman and her big company in the "Hoffmann Revue," containing 11 scenes and presenting a score or more of beautiful dancing girls.

VAUDEVILLE. Hippodrome. Bill headed by the Great Carson Troupe of whirlwind acrobats, four men and two women.

VAUDEVILLE. Grand Opera House. Bill headed by the Great Kaufman Troupe of cyclists, six girls and one man.

GOLDEN CROOK CO. Standard. New musical review, entitled "From Riches to Rags," and the Golden Troupe of Imperial Russian Dancers heading vaudeville bill. Wrestling matches Friday night.

GIRLS FROM JOYLAND. Gayety. Clever musical comedy, with Dolly Sweet as prima donna and Joe Adams, the tramp comedian. The Six Forget-Me-Nots head vaudeville bill.

Next week, Broadway Belles.

PHOTOPLAY. Garrick. "Traffic in Souls." Ninth week of picture-drama telling story of so-called White Slave methods.

DWIGHT ELMENDORF. Odeon. Thursday afternoon and evening. "Java," fifth and last of this season's Elmendorf travel-talks, illustrated with striking motion pictures and beautiful color-views.

VAUDEVILLE. Park. Sunday night's bill headed by "A Day in the Alps," an electrical scenic fantasy. Monday night's topline feature, the Boris Fridkin Troupe of Russian singers and dancers.

VAUDEVILLE. Princess. Bill headed by Beatrice Morelle and her Parisian Harmony Girls in a richly costumed musical act with special scenery.

VAUDEVILLE. Shenandoah. Sunday night's bill headed by Eddie de Noyer and Rosa Danie in "In Wrong," a musical comedy. Monday night's headliner, Leon and Adeline, in a pantomime novelty.

PHOTOPLAYS. Juniata. "Out of the Depths" and "The Husband's Experiment." Pathe Weekly films on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

RUSH OF NEW PLAYS.

From New York comes the announcement that 40 new plays will be produced there this spring. Charles Frohman, Henry W. Savage, the Shuberts, William A. Brady and Cohan & Harris lead the list of producers of these vernal offerings.

Discolored, Wrinkled Skin Easily Removed

(From the Woman Beautiful.)

Since brown or yellow, over-red or blotchy complexions are decidedly not the fashion, I cannot understand why so many continue to wear them. Surely every woman has heard of mercolized wax. This I know—from my own and others' experiences—will positively banish every unsightly tint. The wax really takes off a bad complexion. It gradually, harmlessly, absorbs the thin layer of surface skin with all its defects, as chaps, liver spots, pimples, freckles, blackheads. Just as gradually the discarded skin is replaced by the clear, white, youthful skin underneath. Mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is applied nightly like cold cream and erased mornings with warm water. One ounce will produce the loveliest girlish complexion in less than a fortnight.

I can't understand, either, why folks will be bothered with wrinkles, since the famous saxolite formula has become public property. One ounce of powdered saxolite, dissolved in a half-pint witch hazel, makes a wash lotion that will quickly efface every line, even the deepest.—ADV.

BIG OPERA STARS TO BE HEARD WITH CANADIAN TROUPE

Leo Slezak, Jeanne Gerville-Reache, Marie Rappold and Rosa Olitzka Head List.

No singer in the long list of stars of the National Grand Opera Company of Canada, whose home is His Majesty's Theater in Montreal, will be hailed with keener interest than the giant Czeco tenor, Leo Slezac, called by Jean de Reszke "the greatest living dramatic tenor," when the curtain rises at the Odeon on Monday evening, March 2, for the first of the four St. Louis performances to be given by this organization.

In his first performance Slezak will appear as Samson in Saint-Saens' majestic opera, "Samson et Dalila," with Jeanne Gerville-Reache, the famous Dalila of the cast, as his co-star. It was in this opera, also with Mme. Gerville-Reache, that he made his first appearance in Montreal a short time ago, creating a profound impression. The Samson role has given him one of his greatest triumphs, well abreast of his "Lohengrin," in which latter part he made his London debut at Covent Garden in June, 1909, and his New York debut at the Metropolitan Opera House later, scoring memorable successes. Slezak was born in a small village in Moravia. He has sung in Europe with equal distinction in German, French and Italian opera.

Another of the National Opera Company's stars is Marie Rappold, an American soprano. Mme. Rappold has attained the distinction of becoming a Metropolitan Opera House star, appearing there, under Heinrich Conreid's direction, as Salamith, the prima donna role in "The Queen of Sheba," and remaining for six years, firmly establishing her artistic reputation.

The leading contralto of the Canadian company is Rosa Olitzka, who is equally well known to the audiences of the Imperial Opera House in St. Petersburg, the Berlin Opera, La Scala in Milan, the Boston Opera House, the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and Covent Garden in London. During a period of eight years, Mme. Olitzka brilliantly alternated between the Metropolitan and Covent Garden as prima donna contralto.

MAGGIE TEYTE AND MISCHA ELMAN IN ST. LOUIS RECITAL

English Prima Donna Soprano and Famous Violinist Appear at Odeon Tuesday Night.

The recital of Mischa Elman and Maggie Teyte, which will take place at the Odeon, Tuesday evening, will present two stars much in the public eye at present. Miss Teyte, who is the youngest of the grand opera sopranos of the day, is a beautiful English girl, whose career has been one success after another, and Elman has just returned to America to be hailed by Eastern critics as a more delightful violin artist than ever before.

Elman's first concert in New York City last week broke all records for encores, 8 being given at the conclusion of his last number on the regular program. Miss Teyte was the youngest pupil ever accepted by the London Conservatory of Music, and she was the favorite pupil of Jean de Reszke, and the only singer whom Debussy, the great French composer, ever consented to coach.

The program for the Odeon recital includes Wieniawski's "Faust Fantasie" (Mr. Elman); Giordano's "Caro Mio Ben," Schumann's "Der Nussbaum," Grieg's "Im Kahne," Strauss' "Heimliche Aufforderung" (Miss Teyte); Saint-Saens' "Rondo Capriccioso (Mr. Elman); Debussy's "C'est l'extase langoureuse," "Fantoches," "Je tremble en voyant ton visage," and "Femmes de Paris," (Miss Teyte); the Chopin-Sarasate "Nocturne, E flat, No. 2, Op. 9," the Schumann-Auer "Vogel als Prophet," the Beethoven-Burmeister "Minuet," the Leclair-Nachez "Tambourin," (Mr. Elman); Cadman's "Moonlight Song," Homer's "Ferry Me," Winthrop Rogers' "The Woodlark," Carey's "Flocks Are Sporting" (Miss Teyte); and Wieniawski's "Polonaise" (Mr. Elman).

Mr. Charles Lurvey will be the piano accompanist for Miss Teyte and Mr. Percy Kahn for Mr. Elman.

PARIS THEATER SEASON BRINGS MANY FAILURES

No New Successes Until Latter Half, for Which Fact "Movie" Shows Are Blamed.

At the close of the first half of the theatrical season just ended in Paris every new play produced had failed, the only successes being scored with revivals such as "La Vie Parisienne" at the Varietes, "Cyrano de Bergerac" at the Porte St. Martin, "Samson" at the Renaissance and "La Marche Nuptiale at the Francais.

During the season's latter half, however, several new works broke this malign spell and achieved notable triumphs. Among the number were D'Annunzio's "Le Chevrefeuille," its central figure described as a curious sort of female Hamlet; Tristan Bernard's "Jeanne Dore," in which Sarah Bernhardt so poignantly plays the role of a mother who permits her criminal son, just before his death on the guillotine, to kiss her hand in a passionate parting, through the grating of his cell, believing it the hand of the fallen girl for whom he committed murder; Henri Battaile's "Le Phalene," almost exactly paralleling the real life story of Marie Bashkirtseff and Bastien-Lepage; Maeterlinck's "Mary Magdalen," written some years ago but now just receiving a Paris production, and Henri Bernstein's "Le Secret," in which Mme. Simone has scored the greatest success of her life.

As a whole, the Paris season has not been satisfactory. The moving-picture shows are held responsible for this melancholy truth.

Cyril Maude and Charles Frohman have acquired the English producing rights of "Potash and Perlmutter," this season's biggest comedy success in New York, and the play soon will have a London presentation.

Cheap and Easily Made, but Ends a Cough Quickly

How to Make the Very Best Cough Remedy at Home. Fully Guaranteed.

This pint of cough syrup is easily made at home and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It relieves obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—quickly, and is splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, spasmodic croup and hoarseness.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this mixture, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful combination has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Doctor's Best Cold Formula

Breaks Severest Cold in a Day and Cures Any Curable Cough.

This has been published here for several winters and has proven the quickest and most reliable formula obtainable for coughs and colds. "From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake it well and take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime. Smaller doses to children according to age. Be sure to get only the genuine Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half-ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. Any druggist has it on hand or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. Don't experiment with preparations because of cheapness. It don't pay to fool with a bad cold. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical laboratories of Chicago.

For Indigestion—Mix one ounce Catandir Compound; two ounces Essence of Pepsin; three ounces Syrup of Ginger. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after meals. This is said to have no equal. Catandir is that new compound. Any druggist has it or will get it. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical laboratories of Chicago.—ADV.

FRIENDS PRAY FOR A WEEK; PARALYTIC WALKS FROM ROOM

Woman Helpless for 26 Years, Recovers at End of Week of Continuous Prayer.

SHE TELLS OF A VISION

Declares Image of Christ Appeared Before Her Urging Her to Arise.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

RICHLAND CENTER, Wis., Feb. 7.—Mrs. S. H. Moran, for 26 years a paralytic, stepped from her roller chair and walked around the room at the close of a spectacular climax of a seven-days continuous prayer meeting held in her room with a view of aiding her return to health.

All of Mrs. Moran's neighbors vouch for her unexpected return to health. Within a few days after her recovery she had gained strength so rapidly that she was able to go about her housework without aid and she has appeared in public carrying a child of a neighbor on her arm.

Tells How She Recovered.

This is the story of her recovery as she tells it:

"My neighbors and friends gathered in my room for that special prayer meeting. Our minister began the service with a few beautiful words to them, and then they—all knelt about me in prayer, as I sat suffering—I was enduring worse pain than usual that day—in my wheel chair. That chair had been a prison of torture to me for over a quarter of a century!

"All through the night, and all through the following week the watchers stayed with me, relieving each other in turn. Finally one night the pastor tiptoed silently into the room. He said that seven days of worship had passed, and he retold the story—the beautiful story of the day when Christ, beside the pool of Bethesda, bade the cripple arise and take up his bed and walk.

"Then the pastor turned to me and anointed me with oil. The room was very dark, despite the faint glimmer of the candles on the mantel. There was the perfume of flowers in the air, and the sound of half-breathed prayers. A sort of musical throbbing beat dully on my ears.

Vision of Christ Appears.

"Suddenly I knew that not my friends' prayers, but only my own perfect faith in God would bring me His mercy. Then everything around me fell into blackness and I saw Jesus himself, in a glow of gold. He spoke to me in a voice as sweet as beautiful music.

" 'Will you walk' came His voice, 'leaning on none other arm but Mine?'

"Right with His words, a great strength flowed into my spirit. 'I will!' I cried, and I rose to my feet. I walked about the room, and I seemed to feel the guidance of His arm."

Whatever happened, it is a fact that Mrs. Moran, who was regarded as a hopeless invalid a few days ago, apparently is in the enjoyment of perfect health and normal strength today. Her sudden cure is regarded almost as miraculous not only by those faithful persons who prayed with her so long but also by those neighbors who are skeptical about whether the prayers had anything to do with it.

PROPOSE to her with a diamond ring and she is sure to say "Yes." Easy payments. Loftis Bros., 2d fl., 308 N. Sixth st.

MAN SAYS HE IS A "NUT"

Rodman Law, Daredevil So Asserts When He Is Arrested.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Rodman Law, who has been shot up in a giant skyrocket, popped into a canal on a motorcycle, ridden a horse off the brink of a steep waterfall, yesterday was arrested, charged with attempted felonious assault. When the desk sergeant asked his occupation, Law answered:

"Nut."

Law is accused of making a disturbance in the offices of Clarkson P. Rittenberg, a theatrical agent. Miss Constance Bennett, who jumped with Law from the Williamsburg bridge on Thursday, was with him in Rittenberg's office.

MAN CAN REGULATE HOME

Court So Rules in Case of Husband Who Opposed Boarders.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn has reversed the judgment of separation granted to Caroline J. Blair against her husband, Charles O. Blair, on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment, consisting in part of smashing dishes and chinaware and objecting to her keeping boarders. The Appellate Court says:

"Even if the home is jointly owned, the husband has the right to regulate the household and it is his duty to do so and to say what persons are to share his home."

Here Is That Sensational Offer that never fails to attract a rousing response—just the dining chairs you want and would prefer above all others—on sale this week at a lower price than you have ever known for equal quality. If you want to brighten your Dining Room with a new set of handsome chairs—you could not ask for a better opportunity than this.

These Are High-Grade Dining Chairs exactly as illustrated—made to our special order by one of the very best factories in Grand Rapids—they are constructed of solid oak throughout and finely finished—designed with broad back, box seats and French legs—strongly supported and absolutely rigid—a chair that will give a life-time of service.

Upholstered in Genuine Leather Remember—the seats of these chairs are finely upholstered in genuine leather and edge finished in leather-covered tacks. And when we say genuine leather, we mean a high quality of real leather—and not one of the many imitations of leather that are so often offered under the name of Boston, Chase or Fabricoid leather.

Chairs of Unusual Quality in every detail of construction and finish, these chairs show the handy work of the most skillful artisans and finishers—they are chairs that will harmonize nicely with the highest class furnishings in anyone's Dining Room—they are chairs that you can buy with the confidence that you are getting something of unusual style, quality and character.

Think of the Price—Only $11.75 The only reason in the world that we can offer you this set of six handsome Genuine Leather Chairs at a price like this is due to the fact that we were fortunate to secure a tremendous quantity of these chairs at a decided concession from the usual price—and in this sale we are giving you the benefit of every cent of this saving.

Terms—$1.00 Cash—$1.00 a Month In order to open a great many new accounts this week—we offer these handsome chairs—an actual $18.00 value for only $11.75—and on terms of payment that will appeal to everyone—all you pay is $1.00 cash and this set of six beautiful chairs will be delivered to your home—and you can pay the balance $1.00 a month. Be here tomorrow if you possibly can—it's worth your while

The New Poetry

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

WHEN Homer smote his blooming lyre
He had no hero like to Mars,
And touched with glorifying fire
Whatever appertained to wars;
His muse, it seems, could never tire
Of what a poet now abhors.

He never blushed to sing the name
Of anyone who bore a sword,
And many men achieved their fame
Forever when the poet soared;
The slightest bid for his acclaim
Was never willfully ignored.

If anyone stood out for peace
In all the centuries before
The poet moved the heart of Greece
With ballads sung before her door,
We know it not, for his caprice
Was war, and war possessed the floor.

BUT that was very long ago,
And there are fashions, too, in verse;
We are not saying if the flow
Of song is better or is worse:
But this much, anyway, we know—
The songs are harder to asperse.

From Homer down to Alfred Noyes
The world has come to change its view,
And no one nowadays employs
His art as poets used to do.
If Homer knew it, all the boys
Have dropped the old thing for the new.

It is not good that men should die
For politicians and for kings,
And look wide-eyed upon the sky
In death's unanswered wonderings;
Nor ever understanding why
They have to do these awful things.

IT is not good that men with wives
And little children should be shot,
And throw away their precious lives
To serve the ends of God knows what;
To follow death where it contrives
Without respect to human lot.

It is not good to think of men
In God's own image on the ground
Like swine within a slaughter pen,
And flowers blossoming around;
While blood runs redly down the glen
From open mouth and gaping wound.

It did for Homer long ago
To glorify that sort of thing;
But poets nowadays are no
Great hands for slaughter when they sing.
Indeed, they hope to overthrow
Old War, that bloody-handed king.

IT may be said this does not make Great poetry, and that is true;
But probably the bards shall shake
Us out of this old point of view.
Who knows but someone's song shall wake
Our fancy yet with something new?

The battery of lyres attuned
To peace is growing day by day,
And all the world is importuned
To throw its armament away;
Some timid people must have swooned
For reading what the poets say.

The dove and other sentiments
Are not a part of the crusade;
But rather are the battlements
Assailed with cannon and grenade;
The warlike bards have left their tents
And stand in battle form arrayed.

THEIR big siege guns are dropping shell
And shrapnel in the camp of Mars,
And giant bombs a moment dwell
Among the planets and the stars;
There is no engine, foul or fell,
Their headlong violence debars.

Too long have poets sued for peace
As timid supplicants that pray,
And having made their prayers, cease
To worry providential away.
Too long have they seen wars increase
And watched Carnegie and his way.

The thing to do is just to tell
The tale of war, as poets can;
To make it horrible as hell—
That is the new poetic plan;
To paint the dying where they fell,
And suffer with the wounded man!

TO glorify the name of war
Is not the part of modern verse,
But rather is it written for
The purposes we here rehearse;
A thing the poets all abhor,
They imprecate it with a curse.

They hound it through the magazines,
And in and out of little books;
They render terrible its scenes,
And show the reader how it looks;
It is, they tell us, but a means
Employed by governmental crooks.

The glory fighting men have won
Is kicked around in this new game
Till one discovered with a gun
Would drop it to preserve his name—
For now the poets have begun,
They'll win the fight or bust a hame.

Good Stories by or About Men You Know

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.

WHILE Washington and the nation generally is proclaiming President Wilson the greatest living American (notwithstanding the claims of T. R.) because of the manner in which the President carried out his currency and tariff program and launched his fight upon monopolies without in the least affecting financial conditions in Wall street, the correspondents and others who are close observers are giving more or less credit to a certain Joseph Tumulty. He does not take any credit himself, because he is so loyal to his chief that he assumes only blame.

Nevertheless, it was Tumulty who prepared Wall street for the President's message, the correspondents say. Had the declaration against monopolies come out of a clear sky, stocks would undoubtedly have dropped in Wall street, but, as it was, they rose two points, and part of the President's message was cheered by the minority leader of the House.

For weeks and even months Tumulty knew what was coming, and he knew that unless the public, and especially Wall street, was prepared for it business must suffer.

Therefore, this master "publicity agent" prepared the nation and the financiers with exact information through the newspapers, and the result was very satisfactory to all concerned. If you will think it over you will recall how marvelously accurate were the stories sent out by the Washington correspondents, for weeks, even months, on the President's position on the trusts. They were inspired by Tumulty and the correspondents knew all the time that they were writing with White House authority, though, of course, they carefully kept the confidence that was imposed in them and let no one know the source of their information.

Glass Appeals Old Currency Problem to Senator R. L. Owen

SENATOR ROBERT L. OWEN of Oklahoma and Representative Carter Glass of Virginia, the framers of the new currency law, were boys together in Lynchburg, Va. The first time Owen heard of the Glass family was when Glass' father lost an eye by a bullet fired by an angry citizen who did not like an article published about him in Glass' newspaper.

During one of their conferences over the currency bill, Glass suddenly recalled an incident of their boyhood and said: "Owen, I want you to tell me, now that we are discussing currency, where you got the currency to buy those cannon fire crackers that you woke up the town of Lynchburg with that night when we were boys."

It seems that young Robert Owen had saved his pennies for many weeks and finally had enough to buy a dozen cannon firecrackers. It wasn't July 4, but that made it all the better for his purpose. He intended to wake up the town.

He started out one night and reaching a corner near the business center, he fired one of the crackers and fled. A big crowd gathered to see who had been shot and while they were discussing the mystery, they heard another explosion a block away. They ran to the next block and barely reached there when in another direction, they heard another loud report. This was kept up until all the cannon firecrackers were exhausted.

In those days cash was very scarce among the boys of Lynchburg and had someone suggested that these two boyhood chums would meet in the national capital years later and form a popular national currency law, it would have sounded preposterous.

Senator Chilton Presents Knives Instead of Drinks

SENATOR CHILTON has a habit of presenting his friends with pocket knives, instead of buying them drinks and cigars. The friends who have received these knives have formed a knife club and Secretary William J. Bryan is the ranking member.

When the Senator got ready to give Secretary Bryan a knife he thought of the old free silver days and presented Bryan with a solid gold handled knife costing $25.

Snow-Mellow
Beat Stiff Before Adding Sugar.

FREE

Quick! Ladies! Get this 12-inch Nickel Plated Dessert Beater FREE

SNOW-MELLOW is wonderful. It is so economical. Full directions come inside every package for making Meringue for Pies, Puddings, Custards, Floating Island—Fillings for Layer Cakes, Cream Puffs, Eclairs—Sauces for Puddings, and to use instead of cream for fruits, berries and cereals—Plain and Boiled Icing without eggs—Candies—Divinity Fudge, Marshmallows and Kisses—and many other dainty, special desserts for your family.

Here are some of these new desserts: Snow-Mellow Delight—Rainbow Loaf—Snow-Mellow Fruit Pudding—Snow-Mellow Pineapple Cream—Snow-Mellow Peach Cream—Snow-Mellow Orange Cream—Snow-Mellow Currant Whip—Snow-Mellow Apple Sponge—Floating Island—Mocha Charlotte Russe—Mock Macaroon Souffle—and more than a score of delightful new desserts for your family.

The lady in the picture here is holding up the spoon to show you that just one tablespoon of Snow-Mellow, costing only 4 cents, makes a bowlful of snowy, fluffy, thick, delicious meringue—more and better than you could make with 12c to 15c worth of eggs!

But to make this amazing quantity of delicious Snow-Mellow, you must use our Special Snow-Mellow Beater. And we will give you this Special SnowMellow Beater, 12 in. long, nickel plated—Absolutely free.

Snow-Mellow

Saves Eggs! Saves Work!

So that you may use this wonderful, exquisite Snow-Mellow to save yourself the expense of eggs—so that you may delight your family with these many new Snow-Mellow desserts—you may have absolutely FREE one of these specially designed dessert beaters, which beats up a bowl full of delicious, snowy meringue from just one tablespoonful of Snow-Mellow.

So Economical!

We want to explain to you how we have arranged to make Snow-Mellow the most economical of desserts for your table.

In business there is a certain "overhead" charge against each package—packing, wrapping, boxing, cartage, freight, delivery, etc. And here is how we solved the problem of making Snow-Mellow economical for you. The same "overhead" expense that pays for delivering a ten-cent package to you will pay for delivering five or six or seven times that quantity of Snow-Mellow if we put it all in one package, and that is what we have done.

Instead of putting only enough Snow-Mellow for one dessert in a package and charging ten cents—we put seven times that quantity—enough for seven desserts—in one package, and instead of charging you seventy cents, the price is only 25c—because we save for you the cost of packing and delivering the six extra packages. That is the only fair way. For after you once find how easy to make and how good to eat Snow-Mellow is—you will want to serve it in different desserts several times every week.

So go today, madam, to your grocer and get for your family this exquisite, wonderful Snow-Mellow.

FREE! Our Special Snow-Mellow Beater—which makes 4 cents' worth of Snow-Mellow go as far as 15c worth of eggs—is absolutely FREE to you! We will give you this Special Beater absolutely FREE with your first package of Snow-Mellow! Just go to your grocer today and get the big-quantity, economical package of Snow-Mellow—enough to make seven full family-size desserts—for only 25c. And hand your grocer the FREE Coupon below. RAILROADS GET ANOTHER APPEAL IN RATE CASES

McPherson Erred in Not Retaining Rebate Jurisdiction, Is Plea for Supreme Court Hearing.

$24,000,000 IS INVOLVED

Attorney-General Barker Says Move Will Not Delay Suits in State Courts.

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 7.—Jurisdiction over claims aggregating $24,000,000 will be determined by the Supreme Court of the United States if that tribunal decides to hear an appeal signed today by Judge Smith McPherson of the Federal District Court.

The appeal was prepared by attorneys for railroads affected by suits for overcharges arising from the litigation involving the Missouri 2-cent passenger and maximum freight rate laws. The United States Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of these laws last summer.

The thirteen railroads affected obtained an appeal to the higher court from Judge McPherson's decision of yesterday, holding he had no power to retain jurisdiction of suits of passengers and shippers against the railways to recover alleged overcharges.

Yesterday's decision was in the form of a decree entering a mandate of the United States Supreme Court upholding the Missouri rate laws as constitutional and dissolving an injunction granted to the railways in 1909 against the enforcement of the laws. The railways seek a Supreme Court order compelling Judge McPherson to take jurisdiction of the claims of passengers and shippers, who paid the higher rate during the life of the injunction.

McPherson Signs Appeal.

Judge McPherson signed the appeal petition at his home in Red Oak, Io., where Eugene E. Ball, representing Frank Hagerman of this city, counsel for the railroads, presented an assignment of errors, as a basis of appeal.

The assignment charged that the Court erred in the following respects:

In decreeing that it refused jurisdiction to determine liability for alleged overcharges.

In holding that it was without discretion under the Supreme Court mandate to reserve such jurisdiction.

In appointing a Master to hear such claims as might be filed in the Federal Court.

In ordering that the decree entering the higher court mandate should not bar claimants from suing in any other court.

In directing that the complaint pay the costs, made in the case in the Supreme Court.

The Missouri rate laws have been in litigation virtually since their passage in 1907. An injunction against the enforcement of the freight rate laws was obtained, immediately.

In June, 1909, Judge McPherson granted the injunction against the new passenger rate on the ground it was confiscatory.

John T. Barker, Attorney-General of Missouri, last December filed suits in State courts to collect $24,000,000 from the railroads in alleged overcharges, made while the lower rates were held up by injunction. The railroads' appeal from Judge McPherson's decree putting the Supreme Court mandate in effect, is based primarily on the contention that the Federal court should have retained jurisdiction over all claims for overcharges.

Roads' Appeal Won't Interfere With Him, Says Barker.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 7.—The railroads' appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States from the decision of Federal Judge Smith McPherson dissolving the injunction against Attorney-General Barker and holding that shippers and passengers who were overcharged by the roads could sue to recover their money, will not prevent Attorney-General Barker from proceeding immediately with the prosecution of his suits in the State courts to recover overcharges. Baker says the appeal of the railroads does not act as supercedeas.

Probably the first suit that will come up is that against the Kansas City Southern, to be heard at Butler on Feb 13. The Attorney-General does not believe the United States Supreme Court will entertain further jurisdiction in the rate cases.

William M. Williams of Booneville has been retained by Barker as special counsel for the State to assist him in the suits, which seek to recover a total of $24,000,000.

Barker says the principal opposition to his suits comes from lawyers who have taken many of these claims for the purpose of suing on them.

Stops Tobacco Habit in One Day

Sanitarium Publishes Free Book Showing How Tobacco Habit Can Be Banished in From One to Five Days at Home.

The Elders Sanitarium located at 997 Main St., St. Joseph, Mo., has published a free book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be banished in from one to five days at home.

Men who have used tobacco for more than fifty years have tried this method and say it is entirely successful, and in addition to banishing the desire for tobacco has improved their health wonderfully. This method banishes the desire for tobacco, no matter whether it is smoking, chewing, cigarettes or snuff dipping.

Don't Be Misled if You Have Lung Trouble

If you have Lung Trouble, do not be misled by reports of discoveries of specifics to relieve that affection. No specific has as yet been found. Eckman's Alterative, however, is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, which has been successfully used in many cases. If you are sick, it might be wise for you to investigate its merits and its use may be of lasting benefit to you. Read of this case:

893 Seventh Av., New York.

"Gentlemen: Five years ago last August I was taken to St. Francis' Hospital to be treated for Bronchitis and congested lungs. After several weeks' treatment I was advised by the doctor to go to a convalescent sanitarium, but could not be admitted because the doctor at the hospital, after a thorough examination, declared my case Lung Trouble, and gave me a certificate to that effect. I showed the certificate to Father Stark, and he advised me to take Eckman's Alterative. I took the Alterative faithfully as directed, and soon found myself free from night sweats and fever, and gradually got better. I have not taken the Alterative now for two years, and can truthfully say I am well. I feel better and am stronger than before my sickness."

(Affidavit.) MARY KORHAMER.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by Raboteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

MOROS MUST BE RULED BY U. S., PERSHING SAYS

Mindanao Governor Declares Tribe Would Make Short Work of Filipino Government.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—"The Moro would make short work of local Filipino government," says Brigadier-General Pershing, in his latest report as Governor of Mindanao to Secretary Garrison.

"The actual relations between them are such that any attempt at Filipino government would lead only to rebellion and disaster," he says. "Peace in the Moro province can be maintained only by a continuance of American control. If we are to honestly carry out our obligations to the tribes who have yielded to our authority and who expect us to guide them to something better, then the entire island of Mindanao should be governed and controlled permanently by American officials and under American sovereignty."

The administration's Philippine government policy has not yet been worked out far enough to indicate how far the General's views are shared in Washington.

TAKE SALTS IF YOUR BACK HURTS SAYS DRUGS ONLY EXCITE THE KIDNEYS

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite and irritate the kidneys. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder trouble.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—ADV.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TOLD OF DISEASE DANGER SIGNALS

Health Department Warns of Sore Throat and a Blotched Skin.

"BEWARE OF THE SICK"

Public Schools Are Called the Spreader of Maladies of Childhood.

A warning to school children of the spread of contagious diseases in the schools is sounded in the current issue of the Bulletin of the St. Louis Health Department, published by Health Commissioner Starkloff and his assistant, Dr. Jordan.

That the school is the spreader of the so-called "diseases of childhood" is proven, the article says, by the fact that these diseases begin to increase with the opening of the schools, and multiply until the closing of the schools, when the decrease begins. The diseases mentioned particularly are scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, measles and chicken pox.

There are two danger signals which the children are warned to observe—a sore throat and a flaky or blotched skin. The article says:

Change in Parents' Attitude.

"Make it a rule never to go to see a sick person until that person has been seen by a doctor and you know that there is no danger in your going."

A change is noted by the writer in the attitude of parents from the time when it was thought children had to have these diseases and that the sooner they had them the better for the children. Then, it was a custom for mothers to take the children into the room where the sick child was, so that the child would catch the disease. This was bad and foolish and caused the needless deaths of many children.

"When a child hears that a little friend is sick, of course the first thing it wants to do is to go and see the sick person," the article says. "Often the mother of the little patient would like some friend to come in, as the child is lonesome, never stopping to think that there might be something in the sickness that would be dangerous to the friend.

"Many mothers do not think that their child is sick enough to need a doctor and they keep the child at home a few days and then let it go back to school. Many of these children are suffering from a disease they can give to others; and when they get into the school without being noticed there are a number of children who soon become sick."

Disease Spread at Shows.

These children are permitted oftentimes to attend picture shows and Sunday schools and further transmit the disease.

The children are told that the whooping cough may be recognized by the peculiar "whoop" at the end of the coughing attack. They are reminded that what is said about their guarding against "catching" these diseases is equally applicable in guarding against giving them to others.

SLAYER GOT $2 AS HIS SHARE OF $6200 HOLDUP

Pueblo Prisoner Confesses Killing Omaha Bank Teller in Robbery at Resort.

PUEBLO, Colo., Feb. 6.—According to local police, Charles Bender, alias "Black Tony," confessed today to the murder of Henry Nickell, Omaha bank teller. The murder, according to the alleged confession, occurred when Bender with two companions held up a resort in Omaha.

Bender is said to have admitted killing Nickell himself, while his two confederates escaped with $6000 worth of jewelry and $200. Bender said he received only $2 as his share. He says he has not seen his accomplices since the holdup.

Bender was arrested here last week, and after he had written a letter to Omaha, and tattoo marks on his body had been compared with the description of "Black Tony," the police began to connect him with the Omaha affair. Bender was arrested on the charge of larceny here, preferred by a hotel at which he had been employed as a bell boy last year.

MOVIES HEARING HERE

Examiner Plans Session This Week in Anti-Trust Inquiry.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 7.—Henry P. Lay of Warsaw, who was appointed examiner to take testimony in the inquiry instituted by Attorney-General Barker against the alleged Motion Picture Trust, will come here Monday to qualify before the Supreme Court. He may begin the taking of testimony in St. Louis next week. If he finds evidence of anti-trust violation ouster proceedings may be instituted against the Mutual Film Corporation of Missouri, the only one of the companies involved which is licensed in Missouri.

RICH JOPLIN MAN DEAD

Capt. E. O. Bartlett Discovered White Lead Process.

JOPLIN, Mo., Feb. 7.—Capt. E. O. Bartlett, 73 years old, discoverer of a white lead process for the manufacture of paint pigment from the fumes of lead ores, died today at his home here. He was a pioneer of Joplin, having come here in the early 70s. He established a white lead works here, which was for many years the only works of its kind in the United States. He was rated as one of the wealthiest men in Missouri.

In person and by telephone and letter, hundreds of women have asked us when this sale will begin—it's an event that's always eagerly awaited and always intensively patronized.

It will be greater than ever this year through our good fortune in obtaining also the surplus of Zuckerman and Joyce, equally noted with the makers of the "Cadet" brand of Suits.

More than 2000 Wash Suits!—Sailor Blouse Suits, Beach Suits and Russian Blouse Suits—yours in this great, rousing sale, beginning tomorrow, at away below half price for the great majority involved. We know no finer suits—we unhesitatingly offer to replace any of these that fades if laundered according to instructions. According to our custom in this sale, none will be sold to dealers, and each customer will be limited to the purchase of four.

$2.00, $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50 Suits

You can choose of a wonderful variety of patterns in a full assortment of materials. There are suits of madras, of chambray, of linen, of pique, of galatea, of duck, of butcher linen, of Oxford suiting and of linen crash. In every instance the quality is unsurpassed and the suits are perfectly made. They go on sale at 8:30 tomorrow—they are on tables so that you can pick the best—the price for these wonderful Suits is only.......... $1.19

THIS CHOICE OF THE HOUSE SALE

It's Our Greatest—Men Say "It's Wonderful"

Many tell us they have never known such good values—that these Suits and Overcoats surpass in every way any from which they have ever had the privilege of choosing at so low a price.

It is no wonder they say this for these Suits and Overcoats are the very finest $22.50, $25.00, $27.50 and $30.00 kinds of five of America's greatest makers.

Blue Serge Suits and Suits of black unfinished worsted—Astrakhan Collar Overcoats, such as this we illustrate, Overcoats with shawl collars, and Overcoats of chinchilla—these are among the several thousand that are to be had in this sale. All are hand-tailored throughout and have hand-made button holes, hand-felled collars, etc.—there are even silk-lined Overcoats that were priced $35.00 and $40.00 included.

Unrestricted Choice of Any

This is a semi-annual sale—our purpose is complete clearing of all lines of the present season, and this price is the measure of our determination and not of the worth of the clothing. We make no reservations from our entire lines, excepting only our Fur and Fur-lined Overcoats, literally turning over to you all the Suits and Overcoats we have and whether they were priced $22.50, $25.00, $27.50 and $30.00, they are yours at.... $12

DOMESTIC SERVICE SCHOOL PLANNED FOR SETTLEMENT

Girls at Proposed County Institution Will Learn to Be Home Makers.

BALL TO RAISE FUNDS

Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison Tells of Work Society Women Hope to Accomplish.

Girls will be taught the dignity of domestic service in a school which, at the suggestion of Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison, president of the Board of Patronesses, has been added to the plans for the settlement house to be erected at Olive street road and Maple avenue.

"Cooking meals and washing dishes properly is just as honorable and just as difficult as pounding a typewriter or selling a yard of ribbon, if girls could be made to realize it," said Mrs. Morrison yesterday. "The most useful and the best loved women in the world are those who devote their lives to the care of a home.

"As high a grade of intelligence is needed to be an efficient home maker as for any other line of endeavor open to women. We are going to teach girls to be home makers. We are going to show them that it is the most honorable and the best paid labor in the world, and that success in this calling requires both brains and training.

Training to Be Free.

"The training we will give free, under the supervision of experts. The brains the girls must supply themselves. An employment bureau will be provided. But I believe that a matrimonial bureau would be more to the point, because an intelligent girl who is a real home-maker will be much sought after by the young men who are afraid to fall in love with the frivolous, extravagant young women they usually meet."

Other features which Mrs. Morrison has had incorporated in the plans for the settlement house are visiting nurses, medical examination of all children admitted and the proper care of expectant mothers.

"The most important thing for the welfare of a community is that children shall be born strong and healthy," says Mrs. Morrison. "A healthy mind usually goes with a healthy body. The care of children will be the principal work of the settlement house. Visiting doctors and nurses will make sure that none of the little ones are suffering from defective teeth or hearing, and weakness of the eyes will be attended to at once. Most of the incorrigible children who grow up to be criminals are made so by physical defects which could have been corrected easily if treated in time.

Ball in Coliseum Feb. 19.

"Most blindness could be prevented by high-grade medical attention to the eyes at birth, and an occasional expert examination of the eyes of the growing children. Bad teeth make many incorrigibles. Neglected adenoids have filled many asylums and jails with innocent victims.

"The Settlement House Association will take care of the health of the children, see that they are well nourished and warmly clothed, and provide a kindergarten to make sure that their early education is begun under the proper auspices."

A charity ball for the benefit of the settlement house will be given in the Coliseum Feb. 19, under the auspices of Mrs. Morrison and a score of other society leaders. Mrs. Morrison yesterday bought the first box for the ball. Luke Lamb is president of the Olive Social Settlement Association, recently incorporated, and August Heman, wealthy Mayor of University City, is treasurer.

BOARD WILEY ATTACKED ABOLISHED BY HOUSTON

Pure Food Body Done Away With and Chemist Will Decide Appeals.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The Board of Food and Drug Inspection in the Department of Agriculture, which was often the center of attack by Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, former Chief Chemist, has been abolished by Secretary Houston.

At the Department of Agriculture it was said the board had been abolished in the interest of efficiency and economy. Dr. Carl Alsberg, who succeeded Dr. Wiley as pure food chief, will decide the appeals that formerly went to the board. He will be assisted by Dr. R. L. Emerson of Boston.

Dr. Wiley attacked the Pure Food Board in unmeasured terms at various stages of his administration, declaring its operations hampered administration of the spirt of the pure food laws.

Under the new plan the enforcement of the pure food law virtually will be entrusted to one man. That was what Dr. Wiley contended for.

ROBIN SEEKING TO MAKE PARDON VALID, IS DENIED

Banker Contends That Sulzer Issued Document Day Before His Impeachment.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Joseph G. Robin, who served a term on Blackwell's Island in New York for wrecking the Northern Bank and other institutions there, appeared before Supreme Court Justice Hasbrouck at Kingston today, seeking a rehearing in the matter of his pardon, issued by William Sulzer as Governor, after his impeachment. The Court had previously ruled the pardon invalid and in effect so ruled today by denying Robin a rehearing.

Robin has served his time, but seeks to have the validity of his pardon sustained in order to clear his name. He contends that it was originally issued on Aug. 13, the day before Sulzer's impeachment.

February Furniture Sale

Larger assortments—greater varieties—better values!

Truly a combination of unusual strength—the combinations are good reasons for the splendid success of this well-planned occasion.

But the Point To Consider in Connection With This February Event Is That It Is a Sale of Quality-Furniture

In all the thousands of pieces, specially built and specially purchased for this February Furniture Sale, in not one instance, has quality been sacrificed for the sake of price!

After all, it is the one best reason for you to take advantage of the savings of this occasion, for an occasion extraordinary it is, indeed.

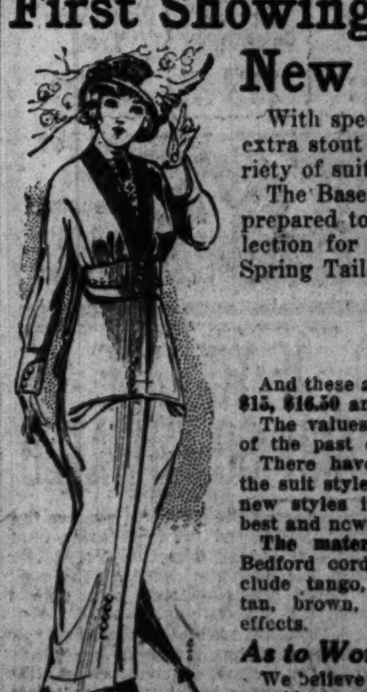
The Basement Garment Section Announces Its

First Showing and Sale of New Spring Suits



With special selections for slender and extra stout figures, as well as a large variety of suits for women of average build.

The Basement Store, tomorrow, will be prepared to show an especially large collection for this time of the year in new Spring Tailored Suits. Pricing begins at $10

And these are splendid assortments at $12.50, $15, $16.50 and upward.

The values at each price are indeed worthy of the past efforts of this section.

There have been radical changes made in the suit styles for 1914 and every one of these new styles is the embodiment of all that is best and newest.

The materials are crepes, woven poplins, Bedford cords, Vigoreaux, and the colors include tango, violet, pea green, Copenhagen, tan, brown, gray, navy, black, also striped effects.

As to Workmanship—

We believe we have excelled in workmanship, considering the moderate price of these suits, to a greater extent than ever.

Every garment is lined in peau de cygne or satin, and many are protected with shields. All sizes from 14 years to 53-inch bust measurement.

(Basement.)

10c and 12½c Curtain Swisses, 5c Yard

There are just 1000 yards in the lot, in lengths ranging from 2 to 10 yards. Come in a splendid assortment of pretty figures, choice, Monday, while the lot lasts, 5c yard.

CASCARETS TONIGHT! IF YOU ARE BILIOUS, HEADACHY AND CONSTIPATED.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy stomach.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely dosing yourself every few days with salts, pills, castor oil and other harsh irritants? Cascarets immediately cleanse and sweeten the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the system.

A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning—a 10-cent box keeps your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and you feel bully for months. Don't forget the children.—ADV.

Physical Department Had an Enrollment of 640 for the Year.

The Young Women's Christian Association has issued a report of the activities in 1913, which shows a gain in all departments. The association was 88 per cent self-supporting, which is hardly equaled by any other association in the country. About $183,321 was expended during the year, of which $162,000 came in through the various departments of the association. The report follows:

Religious department—1912, attendance at vespers, 10,888; 1913, 17,165. Attendance at Bible classes, 1912, 11,678; 1913, 16,763. Attendance at all meetings under Bible study department, 1912, 17,147; 1913, 29,894. Total attendance at all meetings, 55,659.

Industrial department—Four noon meetings a week at three factories in 1912; 1913, 10 at nine factories. November attendance at noon meetings, 470; 1913, 2580. Christmas at the factories, attendance, 1912, 1000; 1913, 2500. Total attendance at all meetings, 20,653.

As this department had no secretary for 1912 until September, our comparison must be of the last months of the two years.

Extension department—Number of clubs, 1912, 5; 1913, 11. January attendance at clubs, 208; 1913, December, 1123.

The monthly attendance is again used for sake of comparison.

Girls' department—Enrollment Jan. 1, 1913, 194; Jan. 1, 1914, 349. Total attendance in 1912, 4093; 1913, 10,175.

Physical Department—1912, December, number enrolled, 579; 1913, December, number enrolled, 640. 1912, number of gymnasium classes, 23; 1913, 40.

Educational Department—1912, number of pupils registered, 680; 1913, 865; 1912, attendance at day and night classes, 14,432; 1913, 21,796.

Membership of colored branch, 175.

The campaign for membership during April, 1913, brought in about 2500 new members, but as they did not renew memberships the real increase is indicated by the above figure.

At last!
a comfortable
support for the arch

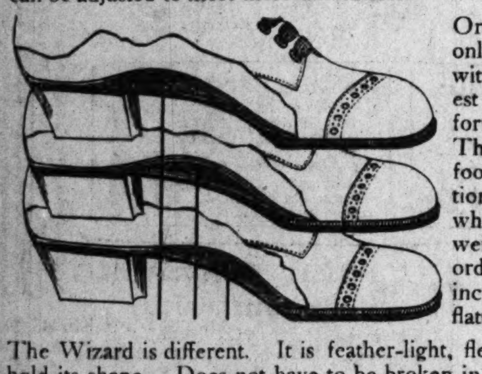
Comfortable because you can adjust it to fit the shape of your foot. Simply shift the inserts about until you find the normal shape of your arch. You will have no trouble after that. With the

WIZARD ADJUSTABLE ARCH-BUILDER

Pocket Adjusting Plan

You can, by gradual readjustment at home, build up your arch to normal condition and your foot troubles will vanish.

Every person's arch is different. They vary in height, length, shape and in the location of the highest part. The arrows in the accompanying illustration point to the high part of each arch and show how the Wizard can be adjusted to meet these differences.



Ordinary arch supports can only be raised or lowered with difficulty, and the highest part cannot be moved forward or backward at all. They arbitrarily force the foot into an abnormal position, causing much pain, which is increased by the weight and stiffness of the ordinary support, and further increased when the support flattens, as it generally does.

The Wizard is different. It is feather-light, flexible, and positively will hold its shape. Does not have to be broken in. Get a pair today—they will be a big $2 investment in comfort.

A device for every foot trouble.

If you have tired feet, arch troubles, bunions, callouses or corns, or if you run your heels over on the side, there is a Wizard device that will relieve you by removing the cause.

Order from your dealer. It he can't supply you, write us. Ask for our book "Orthopraxy of the Foot," a treatise on foot troubles and their cure.

Something Absolutely New in a Musical Instrument

- Time and time again pianists have stated that they believed it impossible to faithfully reproduce their playing on an automatic instrument.
- But the seemingly impossible has been achieved.
- The new APOLLO Reproducing Piano does reproduce the hand playing of pianists with every artistic detail true to life.
- And it does all this without human guidance in any shape, form or manner!
- This wonderful new instrument in your home will render the piano music you want, the way you want it, when you want it and without the necessity of an operator.
- Simply put in the desired roll—touch a button—and the instrument—absolutely and positively—by itself does the rest.
- In addition to its wonderful automatic qualities it can be played by hand as a regular piano, or as a SOLO-APOLLO, with the motor doing the pumping, or by the pedals as an ordinary player-piano.

Whether you are thinking of purchasing or not, it will be time well invested to come in and hear the new APOLLO do, by itself, all that a master pianist can manually.

EUGENE YSAYE.

YSAYE HERE THIS WEEK; CONCERT TO BE HIS FAREWELL

Highest-Priced Instrumentalist Will Appear With Symphony Orchestra.

Eugene Ysaye, the Belgian violinist, who will make his farewell appearance in St. Louis at the Symphony concerts Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, has announced his present tour will be the last in America, and that he will devote himself to his orchestra and violin school in Belgium, with an occasional concert engagement in other European cities. He will play two concerts here, one by Mozart and the other the Bruch No. 1 in G Minor.

Ysaye is the highest-priced instrumenttalist in the world. As a fee for his St. Louis performance he will receive twice as much as was paid Kreisler a fortnight ago. In addition to the guarantee, Ysaye will get a percentage of all box-office receipts over a certain amount, and the total probably will more than treble that received by any other artist in the season's list, with the single exception of Kreisler.

Conductor Zach will give as his portion of the same two programs the Franck symphony in D Minor and a symphonic poem, "Le Rouet d'Omphale," by Saint Saens.

A new vocalist will be presented at the "Pop" concert this afternoon. She is Lilian Wiesike, the young soprano who, though an American, never has sung in her own country until this season. The program for the "Pop" concert follows:

Polonaise in A	Chopin
Overture to Zampa	Herold
Jewel Song from Faust	Gounod
Ballet music from Sylvia	Delibes
Songs with piano—
Menuet and Gavotte from Manon	Massenet
Waltz, Kuenstlerblut	Eysler

The Symphony Orchestra has announced a special concert for Saturday evening, Feb. 28, the week in which there will be no regular concerts this month, with Rosina Galli, premiere danseuse of the Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera, as the feature of the program. Mlle. Galli, who is one of the few exponents of the old-style ballet dancing now before the public, will give a series of solo ballets from some of the older operas in which the ballet played a prominent part and will be accompanied by the full orchestra. A program of orchestral music also will be given.

Brewers Oppose Sunday Opening.

At a meeting of the Missouri State Brewers' Association held in St. Louis, Mo., on Feb. 5, 1914, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, There is being circulated in some portions of Missouri a petition for signature with a view of submitting by means of the initiative an amendment to the existing law authorizing the opening of saloons on Sunday in cities of the State;

And whereas, This association had nothing whatever to do with the starting of this movement to repeal the Sunday law, and are in no way responsible for it;

And whereas, For more than half of a century the law of Missouri has required saloons to be closed on Sunday;

And, Believing the Sunday closing law is founded on and voices the sentiment of an overwhelming majority of the people of Missouri;

And, maintaining that the first essential duty of good citizens is obedience to and respect for the law;

Therefore, Be it Resolved, That we hereby declare that we are strongly opposed to this attempt to open the saloons in the cities on Sunday and we regret the fact that any such effort is being made, and we request all interested in the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages to assist us in our efforts to end this endeavor to alter the existing law requiring saloons to be closed on the Sabbath.

Teachers Hold Meeting.

HATTIESBURG, Miss., Feb. 7.—The Forrest County Teachers' Association was addressed by President Joseph Cook of the Mississippi Normal College at their meeting at the Normal here. His subject was "Marketing Crops." This, he says, is an important subject for rural teachers. He said they should be prepared to teach the pupils how to raise something to market, and then to prepare it for the market.

CHEER UP, JACK. Come on over to Loftis Bros., 2d floor, 308 N. 6th st., and pick out one of those sparklers for her; easy terms.

Lecture to Aid Epworth League.

The Rev. W. J. Isler, pastor of the Zoar M. E. Church, Gano and Carter avenues, will lecture on Switzerland, at the church, Thursday, at 8 p. m. The proceeds of the lecture will be turned over to the Epworth League to aid them in raising a fund to pay off a church debt.

LIVES TEN DAYS ON HAY

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Albert Kerzgan has just been rescued from a barn near Lorient, where, for 10 days he lived with nothing to eat but hay while a prisoner.

He entered the barn for shelter during a severe blizzard. He found it necessary to remain there for some hours and fell asleep. When he awoke he found that the owner had barred the one door from the outside, and for 10 days there was no response to his cries for help.

When the Loser Won.

ANTWERP, Feb. 7.—Marie Schwabacher, a pretty milliner, who was courted by two brothers, promised to marry the winner of a game at cards, but eventually eloped with the one who was beaten.

MADAM! DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS" IS THE ONLY SAFE LAXATIVE FOR YOU.

A delicious cure for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, sour stomach, indigestion, coated tongue, sallowness—take "California Syrup of Figs." For the cause of all this distress lies in a torpid liver and sluggish bowels.

A tablespoonful tonight means all constipation, poison, fermenting food and sour bile gently moved out of your system by morning without griping. Please don't think of "California Syrup of Figs" as a physic. Don't think you are drugging yourself or your children, because this delicious fruit laxative can not cause injury. Even a delicate child can take it as safely as a robust man. It is the most harmless effective stomach, liver and bowel regulator and tonic ever devised.

Your only difficulty may be in getting the genuine; so ask your druggist, for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Say to your druggist, "I want only that made by the 'California Fig Syrup Company.'" This city has many counterfeit "fig syrups," so watch out—ADV.

OPENS UP NOSTRILS, CLEARS HEAD, ENDS COLDS OR CATARRH AT ONCE

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lie awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—ADV.

SLASHES WIFE AND SELF

Peoria Couple Are Dying From Razor Wounds.

PEORIA, Ill., Feb. 7.—Emil Kutz, a distillery employe, and wife, are dying in a local hospital as the result of the husband's attempt to murder his wife and then commit suicide by cutting his throat with a razor.

Kutz slashed his wife's throat with a razor and then tried to end his own life in a similar manner. Neighbors who heard the woman's screams called the police.

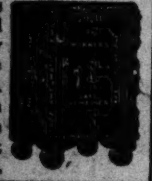
CAUSE OF ILL HEALTH

Nine Times Out of Ten It's the Kidneys

The subtle and delusive character of kidney disease often leads people to believe they are suffering from neuralgia, rheumatism, pleurisy, heart weakness, and other acute forms of disease. In reality all such troubles sometimes arise through failure of the kidneys to properly perform their functions of removing the poisonous matter from the blood. Unmistakable signs of kidney disease are pains in the head, swelling under the eyes, dry skin, dull complexion, tired feeling, loss of energy, etc. Many physicians say that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy is the only medicine that heals with certainty the frail tubular structures constituting these important organs. It soothes and heals the inflamed parts and gradually restores them to their normal condition. For sale by all druggists in 50c and $1.00 bottles. A sample free if you write Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Dept 245, Rochester, N. Y.



Radway's Ready Relief

James Able of R. F. D. No. 1, Milltown, N. J., writes: "For the last three years I have had kidney disease and backache, and I have had it so bad that for eight days and nights I could not get my clothes on. I thought I would try Radway's Ready Relief. I gave my back and hips and sides a good rubbing, and in a short time the pain was all gone. No one in this world knows but God and myself the misery I was in till I USED Radway's Ready Relief. I thought it was my duty to let you know what your medicine has done for an old man."

AQUARIUM IS PROPOSED AS AN ADDITION TO ZOO

President of State Fish Commission Urges Its Establishment in Forest Park.

John P. Woods, president and treasurer of the Missouri State Fish Commission, told a reporter yesterday that he would urge the establishment of an aquarium in connection with the zoological garden in Forest Park, for which an appropriation already has been made.

The aquarium, as an addition to the zoo, would not only be a feature attraction and educational display for the garden and park, Woods said, but would prove of great value in the campaign of the State for the conservation of water and fish. The aquarium could be added to the zoo at a very nominal cost, Woods believes.

Woods would build a first-class aquarium and employ an attendant competent to furnish information regarding the fish, the possibilities of the industry in the State, and particulars on the work of the State Fish Commission, which will supply fish for ponds owned by citizens.

As an example of the possibilities of the fish industry, Woods declared that Game Warden Dyche of Kansas, during the last three years, had raised 15,000 pounds of fish in a one-acre pond, at a yearly profit of $500, getting his start by constructing the pond and supplying it through the Fish Commission of that State.

In Boston, Woods said, it was proposed to establish an institute for instruction in the fish industry, from which qualified men could be sent out to develop the industry.

BANKERS ASK CHANGE IN INCOME TAX LAW

Petition Being Circulated Says Collection at Source Is Proving Serious Burden.

St. Louis bankers are being asked to sign a petition, which the trust company section of the American Bankers' Association is circulating nationally, asking that the income tax act be amended so as to change the provision of "collection at the source" to one of "information at the source." Signers are requested to send the petition to their Congressmen not later than Feb. 15.

"The present method," states the document, "has added enormously to the expenses of banks, bankers and trust companies. The law provides that the tax shall be collected first and assessed afterwards. The tax is collected on the gross income and is later assessed on the gross income less certain deductions, so that refunds will be necessary on a very large proportion of the returns of individuals.

"Under a plan of information at the source, all of these complications and unnecessary expenses, aggregating up into hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, would be eliminated."

The further request is made that, in the event the amendment is not speedily passed, Congress shall make an annual appropriation to reimburse the banks for the extra expense to which they are subjected as agents for the Government in collecting the income tax.

RIVADAVIA AT BOSTON

New Argentine Dreadnaught Making Long Endurance Runs.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—The new Argentine dreadnaught Rivadavia swung at her moorings in the lower harbor today, waiting for the weather to moderate sufficiently to permit the taking on of coal, water and provisions before resuming her endurance runs at sea.

When the Rivadavia sails again she will make long endurance runs at 15 knots and 22 knots. These runs will cover between 1200 and 1500 miles, and it will be more than a week before all the tests are completed.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

Thousands of Men and Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

Nature warns you when the track of health is not clear. Kidney and bladder troubles cause many annoying symptoms and great inconvenience.

Unhealthy kidneys may cause lumbago, rheumatism, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints or muscles, at times have headache or indigestion, as time passes you may have a sallow complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, sometimes feel as though you had heart trouble, may have plenty of ambition but no strength, get weak and lose flesh.

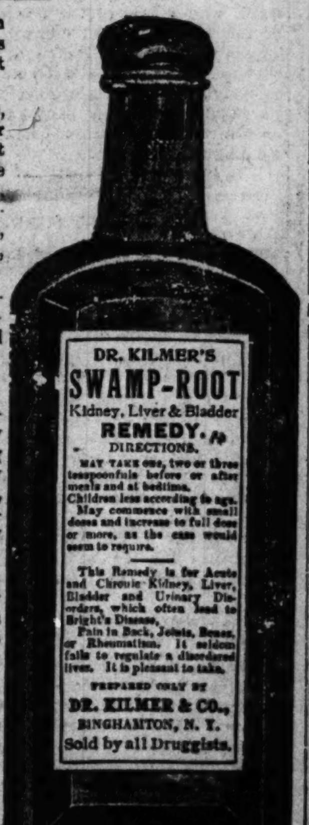
If such conditions are permitted to continue, serious results may be expected; Kidney Trouble in its very worst form may steal upon you.

Prevalency of Kidney Disease.

Most people do not realize the alarming increase and remarkable prevalency of kidney disease. While kidney disorders are among the most common diseases that prevail, they are almost the last recognized by patients, who usually content themselves with doctoring the effects, while the original disease may constantly undermine the system.

If you feel that your kidneys are the cause of your sickness or run down condition, try taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the famous kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys improve, they will help the other organs to health.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at all drug stores. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., which you will find on every bottle.



Sample Size Bottle.

SPECIAL NOTE—You may obtain a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. This gives you the opportunity to prove the remarkable merit of this medicine. They will also send you a book of valuable information, containing many of the thousands of grateful letters received from men and women who say they found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed in kidney, liver and bladder troubles. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that readers are advised to send for a sample size bottle. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Be sure to say you read this offer in the St. Louis Sunday Post-Dispatch.

A Fine Tonic That Prevents Wasted Energy

So many people refer to the "merit" of S. S. S. By this they mean that it causes them to feel good; they get rid of stagnation. Things are happening within us all the time that give evidence of having slipped a cog.

We are constantly producing waste products that should come out promptly.

But they accumulate here and there, the nerves tell us about it, the skin shows it, there are almost always certain indications that we need help.

The blood and the nerves are so intimately associated that they are mutually dependent upon each other for health. And since the influence of S. S. S. is so pronounced in the blood it necessarily must prove a proper stimulus to the nerves whereby each assists the other to check and eliminate conditions of disease.

There is probably no other remedy so well known as S. S. S. for the blood. And for this reason it is the one remedy invariably called for. But there are many people who do not insist upon having S. S. S. and are easily persuaded to try something else "just as good," so they are told. If your blood is thin; if you have rheumatic pains; if your skin is irritated with eczema, lupus, tetter, psoriasis, or any other blood humour; if you are troubled with pimples or boils do not permit yourself to be talked into buying something else, but insist upon S. S. S. It is really a remarkable remedy. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food.

Not only this, but if from the presence of some disturbing poison there is a local or general interference of nutrition to cause boils, carbuncles, abscesses and kindred troubles, S. S. S. so directs the local cells that this poison is rejected and eliminated from their presence.

Then, too, S. S. S. has such specific stimulation on these local cells as to preserve their mutual welfare and a proper relative assistance to each other.

In a very brief time S. S. S. has the reconstructive process so under control that remarkable changes are observed. All eruptive places heal, mysterious pains and aches have disappeared, and from head to foot there is a conscious sensation of renewed health. That strange, moody, morbid feeling of depression is lifted, and the entire system responds with surprising energy.

From the fact that S. S. S. is purely a botanical preparation, it is accepted by the weakest stomach and has great tonic influence in all the digestive organs. It is certainly a wonderful blood medicine, and is prepared direct from native materials gathered by the experts of the famous Swift Laboratory. Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and insist upon having it.

You can get S. S. S. at any drug store. Beware of any effort to sell you something claimed to be "just as good." If yours is a peculiar case and you desire expert advice, write to The Swift Specific Co., 309 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

How to Save Your Eyes

Try This Free Prescription

Do your eyes give you trouble? Do you already wear eyeglasses or spectacles? Thousands of people wear these "windows" who might easily dispense with them. You may be one of these, and it is your duty to save your eyes before it is too late. The eyes are neglected more than any other organ of the entire body. After you finish your day's work you sit down and rest your muscles, but how about your eyes? Do you rest them? You know you do not. You read or do something else that keeps your eyes busy; you work your eyes until you go to bed. That is why so many have strained eyes and finally other eye troubles that threaten partial or total blindness. Eyeglasses are merely crutches; they never cure. This free prescription, which has benefited the eyes of so many, may work equal wonders for you. Use it a short time. Would you like your eye troubles to disappear as if by magic? Try this prescription. Go to the nearest wide-awake drug store and get a bottle of Optona tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one tablet and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up and how soon the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it; it is absolutely harmless. Many who are now blind might have saved their eyes had they started to care for them in time. This is a simple treatment, but marvelously effective in multitudes of cases. Now that you have been warned don't delay a day, but do what you can to save your eyes and you are likely to thank us as long as you live for publishing this prescription.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Famous for Her Hair

Actress Tells How She Grew It.

Madame Rose, the well known actress who played on one of the leading vaudeville circuits the past winter and who is especially noted for her long, beautiful hair; in a recent interview in Chicago, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can promote the growth of their hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, and a small box of Barbe Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. This is not only the finest hair grower I have ever known, but it prevents the hair from falling out, removes dandruff and scalp humors, darkens streaked, faded gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. The ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost."—ADV.

RUB RHEUMATISM AWAY; STOPS PAIN

Rheumatism is "pain only."

Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging! Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" directly upon the "tender spot" and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and can not burn the skin.

Limber up! Quit complaining! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Oil" and in just a moment you'll be free from any rheumatic pain, soreness and stiffness. Don't suffer! Relief and a cure awaits you. "St. Jacobs Oil" is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains and swellings.—ADV.

BRIEF SHOWS RATE DISCRIMINATION IN BRIDGE ARBITRARY

Twenty-Cent Toll Is Absorbed on Traffic From Outside the 100-Mile Zone.

EAST ST. LOUIS BENEFITS

Post-Dispatch Attorneys Will Argue Case Before Commission at Washington.

Arguments showing the unfair discrimination against St. Louis and in favor of East St. Louis in the existing arbitrary bridge charge on coal from the Illinois coal fields are contained in a brief filed last week with the Interstate Commerce Commission by Edward C. Crow and Sidney F. Andrews, attorneys representing the Post-Dispatch in its appeal to the commission to abolish the charge.

The brief was filed in advance of oral arguments to be made to the commission in Washington Friday, and is based on evidence heard before Interstate Commerce Commissioner Harlan two months ago in St. Louis.

The Post-Dispatch case was combined in the hearing with the pleas of the railroads for permission to increase the coal rate 5½ cents a ton, the protests of the shippers in opposition to the increase and the opposition of the Business Men's League to the increase. The city of St. Louis joined in the case in opposition to the increase, and the city of East St. Louis joined in opposition to the Post-Dispatch fight to abolish the arbitrary bridge charge.

Rate Same on Long Hauls.

The brief for the Post-Dispatch sets out that all traffic originating a greater distance than 100 miles to the east of St. Louis is brought to St. Louis and East St. Louis at the same rate, the 20 cents bridge charge being absorbed in the through rate. It declares that the two cities are one common commercial center, and that the railroads voluntarily have removed the extra bridge charge on traffic originating outside the 100-mile zone.

The brief explains the manner in which the railroads abolished the bridge charge on long hauls, showing that until 1908, the rate to East St. Louis was 116 per cent of the Chicago rate, and to St. Louis 117 per cent of the Chicago rate. The railroads changed this to make the rate to both places 117 per cent of the Chicago rate, thus raising the East St. Louis rate to the St. Louis rate.

The reason for the arbitrary charge is declared in the brief to be due to the lack of competition, the brief stating:

"The real reason for the existence of the arbitrary complained of is the self-same reason which accounts for many unjust discriminations and practices against communities and individuals, the lack of competition. It was the competition of the Chicago & Alton in hauling its west-bound traffic from East St. Louis over its bridge at Louisiana, Mo., in competition with the Western lines at St. Louis which compelled the same rate from both sides of the river on westbound freight.

Competition Ends on East Side.

"It was also competition between carriers on both sides of the river serving the South, Southwest and Southeast that abolished the bridge arbitrary to and from those territories. The history of the fluctuating rates on coal from the Illinois fields to East St. Louis evidences active and bona fide competition in that traffic up to East St. Louis. From that point, however, to St. Louis, there is no competition whatsoever. The amount of the bridge arbitrary being as fixed and unalterable as the laws of the Medes and Persians.

"The underlying cause for the injustice against St. Louis in the matter of rates on the one commodity most vital to its industrial growth, coal, and against which it has fought for many years, is due to the fact that these carriers, the proprietary lines, are competitors up to the east bank of the river and partners from the east bank to the west bank.

"These individual roads may sacrifice their revenues up to East St. Louis by hauling coal to that point for non-compensatory rates, yes, even, as some of them show, below the actual movement cost, yet the revenues of this octopus they have created, with its strangle-hold on the very throat of St. Louis, must be most carefully and tenderly guarded.

"If each proprietary line on the East Side had its own independent bridge across the river and its own terminals in St. Louis, there would be no question of an arbitrary, because in such case competition would not end on the East Side and the cost of the terminal service would be absorbed in the through rate.

McKinley Rate 10 Cents.

"The only independent bridge across the river at this point is the McKinley bridge, built, owned and maintained by this one trolley system, whereas the Eads and Merchants bridges are owned and maintained by 15 great interstate trunk lines. The arbitrary on the former bridge on coal is 10 cents; on the latter 20 cents. If the McKinley trolley system can by itself maintain and operate its bridge and such terminals as it has on the west side under an arbitrary of 10 cents, it is somewhat peculiar to find that these 15 trunk lines are obliged to assess an arbitrary of 20 cents on similar traffic in order to enable them to jointly maintain their two bridges and joint terminals."

The brief shows from the evidence that the revenue per ton per mile on the short haul of coal to East St. Louis is 16 mills. On this traffic the bridge charge is not absorbed. The average earnings per ton per mile on traffic from Kentucky mines, on which the bridge charge is absorbed, is 5.05 mills. The brief shows that the railroads absorb the bridge charge on traffic which yields only 5.05 mills, but refuse to absorb it on traffic which yields 16 mills, or more than three times as much.

The brief cites many instances of other cities occupying the same relative position as St. Louis and East St. Louis, and shows that in such cases the railroad freight rates are the same to both, although in the case of St. Louis there is a 20-cent per ton discrimination against St. Louis.

The brief is concluded with a statement that the railroads can easily solve the difficulty and remove the arbitrary bridge charge by rearranging the grouping of the mines and making a different rate for mines near by than for mines far away. Under the present system the same freight rate is charged if the haul is 70 miles as if it is only 10 miles.

The attorneys representing the Post-Dispatch, the Business Men's League, the city of St. Louis, coal shippers, the city of East St. Louis and the many railroads hauling coal from the Illinois fields will depart for Washington Wednesday afternoon to present their oral arguments.

Prescription That Soon Knocks Rheumatism

The only logical treatment for rheumatism is through the blood. The poisons that settle in muscles, joints and back, causing severe pain, must be dissolved and expelled from the system or there can be no relief. This prescription from a noted doctor is said to be working wonders all over the country. Hundreds of the worst cases were cured by it here last winter. "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." Results come the first day. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take some patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original, one-ounce, sealed, yellow package. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical laboratories of Chicago.—ADV.

CALLS WIRELESS THEORY OF EXPLOSIONS ABSURD

British Radio Expert Says Waves Have Not Enough Strength to Cause Disasters.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—"It is absurd," was the comment today of Prof. Henry Eccles of University College, an eminent radio expert, when shown the suggestion made by a Paris engineer, M. Duroquier, that the explosions on board the steamship Volturno, the French battleship Liberte and in the Universal Colliery near Cardiff, were due to wireless waves.

"I wish it were true," Prof. Eccles added. "It would mean a tremendous increase in the power and usefulness of wireless waves if we could obtain such results. As it is, wireless waves are only sufficient in strength to move the most delicate instruments. They have not nearly enough energy to enable us to write with them."

Recent Reports Show, Most Sickness Comes From Stopped-Up, Weak, Inactive Kidneys

Recent Reports Show Hundreds Suffer With Kidney Troubles and Don't Know It.

There are scores of nervous, tired, run-down people throughout the country, suffering with pains in the back and sides, dizzy spells and weaknesses of the bladder, who fail to realize the seriousness of their troubles until such conditions as chronic rheumatism, bladder troubles, dropsy, diabetes or even Bright's disease result.

All this is due to weak, inactive kidneys. The kidneys are the filters of the blood, and no one can be well and healthy unless the kidneys work properly.

If you suffer with such symptoms, don't negelect yourself another day and run the risk of serious complications. Secure an original package of the new discovery, Croxone, which costs but a trifle, and commence its use at once. When you have taken a few doses, you will be surprised how differently you will feel.

Croxone overcomes the worst cases of kidney, bladder trouble, and rheumatism, because it removes the cause. It cleans out the kidneys, and makes them filter out all the poisonous waste matter and uric acid, that lodge in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; soothes and heals the bladder, and quickly relieves you of all your misery.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth like it. It matters not how old you are or how long you have suffered, it is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

You can secure an original package of Croxone from any first-class druggist. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if it fails to give the desired results the very first time you use it.—ADV.

BRIDGE TROLLEY STATION TO BE OPENED SATURDAY

Train Shed 180 Feet in Length Will Protect Passengers From Weather.

LARGE WAITING ROOM

Restaurant Is Located on Second Floor With Barber Shop in Basement.

The new trolley station built by the Terminal Railroad Association, at the entrance to Eads Bridge at Third street and Washington avenue, will be open for traffic next Saturday.

The new station is for the exclusive use of the trolley traffic. Passengers taking the trains on the Eads and Merchants tracks use the railroad station, which is entered about 200 yards east of the trolley building.

The building has a frontage of 36½ feet by a depth of 95.8 feet, is two stories high, with a large basement, and the train shed directly behind is 180 feet in length, permitting the storing of a number of cars at one time without interfering with traffic.

There is an umbrella type of shed, constructed of metal and glass, to protect passengers from the weather while boarding or leaving the cars. The building is constructed of red brick, with terra cotta trimmings, and is fireproof. A canopy of art metal and glass extends along the front of the building, sheltering the entire width of the sidewalk.

The first floor will be used as the waiting room. It is 54 feet in length and has a width of 35 feet. There are also a ticket office and rest rooms on this floor.

The entire second floor will be used for the restaurant and kitchen, and a barber shop will occupy the basement.

The station will be brilliantly illuminated and will be in keeping with the "great white way" effect on the entire length of the bridge roadway, produced by the new lighting system which was recently installed.

BRIG.-GEN. FUNSTEN TO RELIEVE TASKER H. BLISS

Maj.-Gen. Wetherspoon Probable Successor of Gen. Leonard Wood.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Brigadier-General Funsten, who has gone to take command of the maneuver camp at Texas City, probably will take command of the Southern Department when Brigadier-General Tasker H. Bliss is relieved in April, to come to Washington, when he is expected to become Assistant Chief of Staff of the Army.

Major-General W. W. Wetherspoon probably will become Chief of Staff when Major-General Leonard Wood retires to take command of the Department of the East. Gen. Wetherspoon will be retired for age next November, and it generally is believed Gen. Bliss then will become Chief of Staff of the Army, and that Brigadier-General Liggett will be his assistant.

TELLS BRITONS AMERICA LABORS IN ARTS OF PEACE

NEW CASTLE, England, Feb. 7.—Walter H. Page, United States Ambassador, today visited Armstrong's great shipbuilding yards and armament factories at Elswick. Later in a speech at a luncheon given by the Lord Mayor, Mr. Page said:

"There are no armament factories in the new world equal to the Elswick works. While America has establishments equal to Elswick in size, they all are engaged in electrical manufactures or in the making of locomotives or machinery connected with the arts of peace. They do not make those great instruments of destruction. Their industries are all examples of the productive dollar."

PLANS NEW RADIUM LAW

Senate Has Bill to Control Mining and Land Purchase.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Another radium bill to encourage exploration for the ore was introduced today by Senator Walsh. The Government would have the first right to buy ores found on private lands as well as the public domain. Private lands, unworked for their deposits, might be taken over by the Government.

Some of the House bill provisions for a reducing plant in the West were included in the new measure.

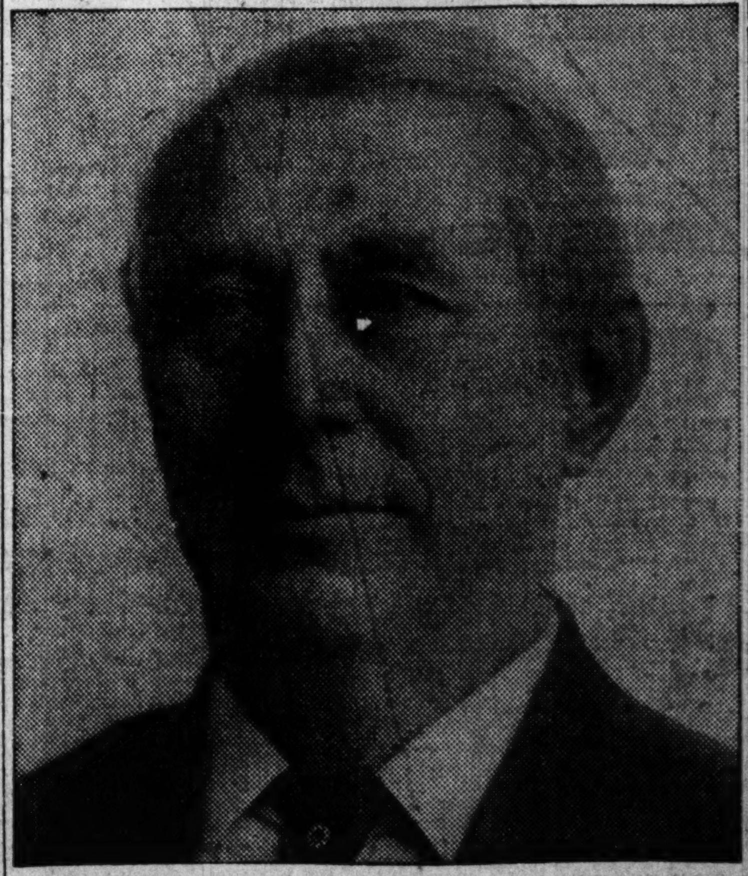
A VETERAN DRUGGIST TELLS FACTS ABOUT PERUNA.



Mr. L. A. Richardson, Marine, Illinois, writes: "I have been engaged in the retail drug business here for the past forty years. During this time I have seen many patent medicines come into use, flourish for one or two years and then gradually disappear. There are very few of these remedies that possess enough real merit to insure them long life.

"Peruna has always been a good seller with us, with a marked increase from year to year. The change in the formula some years ago, by the addition of the slightly laxative properties, has made it a reliable remedy for constipation and for colds. If taken hourly in teaspoonful doses by adults it will break up the worst cold in two or three days' time. I take pleasure in urging my brother druggists to recommend it for these two ailments."

Mr. Richardson's credit rating in the Hayes Druggists' Directory is "A," which means high, the very best.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.—ADV.

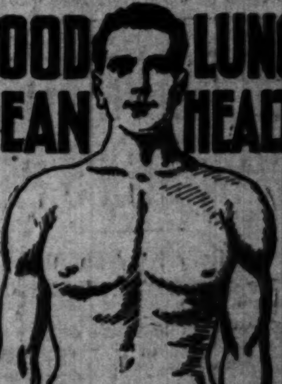
GOOD LUNGS MEAN HEALTH



ARE THEY WEAK OR PAINFUL?

Do your lungs ever bleed?
Do you have night sweats?
Have you pains in chest and sides?
Do you spit yellow and black matter?
Are you continually hawking and coughing?
Do you have pains under your shoulder blades?

THESE ARE REGARDED SYMPTOMS OF LUNG TROUBLE.

You should take immediate steps to check the progress of these symptoms. The longer you allow them to advance and develop, the more deep-seated and serious your condition becomes.

We Stand Ready to Prove to You absolutely that Lung Germine, the German Treatment, has cured completely and permanently case after case of Chronic Bronchitis, Catarrh of the Lungs, Catarrh of the Bronchial Tubes and other lung troubles. Many sufferers who had lost all hope and who had been given up by physicians have been permanently cured by Lung Germine. If your lungs are merely weak and the disease has not yet manifested itself, you can prevent its development, you can build up your lungs and system to their normal strength and capacity. Lung Germine has cured advanced Bronchial Troubles and the patients remain strong and in splendid health today.

Let Us Send You the Proof—Proof That Will Convince Any Judge or Jury on Earth. We will gladly send you the proof of many remarkable cures, also a FREE TRIAL of Lung Germine, together with our new 40-page book (in colors) on the treatment and care of Tuberculosis and lung trouble.

JUST SEND YOUR NAME

IMPEACHMENT TRIAL OF SULZER COST $235,000

Attorney Who Opposed Former Governor Received $60,000 From State.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Vouchers of counsel and managers of the Sulzer impeachment trial, aggregating $150,000, were filed here today, bringing the total expense of that proceeding to $235,000, with a number of bills still unadjusted.

Former Judge Irving G. Vann of the State Court of Appeals declined to receive any compensation for services performed as one of Gov. Sulzer's counsel, on the ground that at the same time he was in the State's employ in another capacity. The payments agreed upon today comprise $60,000 for the attorneys in charge of the case against Gov. Sulzer, divided as follows:

Former Senator Edgar T. Brackett and John B. Stanchfield, $15,000 each; former Judge Alton B. Parker, $10,000; Isidor J. Kresel and Eugene Lamb Richards, $7500 each. Counsel for Mr. Sulzer received these amounts: Former Judge D. Cady Herrick and Louis Marshall, $10,500 each; Harvey D. Hinman, $5000; Austen G. Fox, $5000.

WARNING IS ISSUED AGAINST RADIUM QUACKS

New York Health Department Says Interest Aroused by Treatment Will Be Utilized Dishonestly.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The New York City Department of Health today issued a warning against quacks who might seek to take advantage of the popular interest aroused by recent experiments with radium in the treatment of cancer. In its report the department says:

"In view of the popular furor which the radium treatment of cancer has excited in this country, it seems advisable to sound a note of warning. According to the best authorities, the radium treatment of cancer is as yet a matter of experiment.

"There is every reason to believe that the popular interest aroused in the radium treatment of cancer will be utilized by a large number of dishonest money-getting establishments conducted by individuals with little or no radium, and who have no knowledge of its use. The great danger, of course, in all these 'cures,' is the valuable time which may be wasted, thus frequently dissipating all chances of cure by surgical means."

HENRY C. WHITE IS DEAD

Leader in Municipal Reforms Was Friend of Presidents.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 7.—Henry C. White, a prominent lawyer and politician, died here today, aged 58 years. He was a graduate of Yale and was widely known for his interest in municipal reform.

It was at White's home in Edwards street, in 1908, that Col. Roosevelt, then President, met Taft for a conference over matters relating to the Republican national convention. White was a close friend of both and as Taft was attending a meeting of the Yale Corporation at the time, he brought Roosevelt and Taft together to discuss certain matters on which they held divergent views.

ITALY'S PROTEST HEARD

Senate Awaits Word From President on Immigration Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Italy's protest against the new immigration bill's provision to place American surgeons upon emigrant ships was before the Senate committee today, awaiting the result of conferences with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan.

Representative Burnett, author of the bill, thinks the provision one of the most valuable, but should the Senate, at the wish of the administration, strike it out, the House probably will not insist upon it. Leaders thought the object could be accomplished in other ways.

TUG SAVES 2 FROM LAKE

Fishermen Rescued From Ice Pack After Launch Stalls.

INDIANA HARBOR, Ind., Feb. 7.—Two fisherman whose gasoline launch broke down in Lake Michigan, several miles off shore today, were rescued from the ice pack by a wrecking tug. The men are Edward and Adolph Larsen.

The South Chicago fire tug Illinois also went to the rescue and helped the wrecking tug smash a way through the heaped up drift ice to this harbor.

MOOSERS TO BE HEARD

Committee Will Present Views on Trade Commission Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Herbert Knox Smith, former Commissioner of Corporations; Wm. Draper Lewis, dean of the law school of the University of Pennsylvania, and Donald Reichberg will present the Progressive party's views on the Interstate Trade Commission bill before a House committee next Wednesday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Frederick W. Vanderbilt, his wife and their guests, the Duke and Duchess of Manchester, who were shipwrecked when the Vanderbilt yacht Warrior went aground, arrived here today on the United Fruit liner Almirante, which a dense fog held off quarantine. A tug brought the party to Forty-second street.

SENATE ORDERS DEEPER INQUIRY IN NEW HAVEN LOOTING

Resolution Directs Interstate Commerce Commission to Find Out Who Invested Railroad Funds and Whether They Can Be Punished as Criminals.

LODGE BRINGS UP THE FRISCO SCANDAL

Declares He Is Informed Speyer & Co., Soon Before Crash, Sold Securities to French Investors Who Regard Deal as a Swindle.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Senator Norris' resolution, directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to continue its investigation of New Haven Railroad affairs, was passed today by the Senate, in a modified form.

The modification was to specify that the commission need not duplicate any of its previous work and leaving it to the discretion of the commission whether its previous investigation had developed all the information it desired. Commissioner Prouty, who made the first investigation, recently declared he could see little to be gained by further work by the commission, but that something might be brought out by a committee of Congress.

Punishment of Guilty Asked.

This information is called for by the resolution:

"What became of the funds of the New Haven invested in various enterprises and corporations mentioned in the recent report of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

"Whether the person or persons authorizing investment of those funds and the person or persons receiving the benefit are liable to punishment under existing laws.

"Whether, under existing law, these funds can be recovered on behalf of the stockholders of said company.

"What legislation, if any, is necessary to prevent the recurrence of similar transactions?"

Attorney-General McReynolds takes the view that any prosecutions for financial operations of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway must come under the State laws, not Federal statutes, according to a statement in the Senate by Mr. Newlands of Nevada. The Attorney-General's position was reported during the debate upon the Norris resolution.

Lodge Assails Frisco Deals.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa, discussing the New Haven resolution, referred to the financial operations which involved the officials of the Frisco Railroad in a scandal that was investigated by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which made a report to the Senate severely censuring the promoters. Senator Kenyon spoke of the floating of securities of the Frisco shortly before the railroad was plunged into a receivership.

Senator Lodge, speaking of this loan, said:

"On the point that the Senator from Iowa has just raised, it seems to me that it should be a subject which ought to be investigated. I believe it was Speyer & Co. who sent the circular and apparently had the loan. I do not know how much of that loan was placed abroad, but a large part of it was certainly placed in Paris. In that circular Speyer & Co. state that their commissions were very modest, but if I have been correctly informed, and what I have heard comes from the other side of the water, the loan of the San Francisco company was largely placed in Paris.

"The condition of the road was pretty well known in this country. It was not easy to place it on the New York market or any other large American market. The load therefore was taken to Paris. As I understand, and if I am wrong an investigation will correct me, all the leading Paris bankers were induced to take up the loan and endeavored to sell the securities by receiving a very large commission, which I have heard stated was as high as 7½ per cent.

"The loan was put out in that way. The bankers took it up, incited to do so by the great commissions that were paid to them and a large part of the loan at least was placed in that way in France.

"Regarded as a Swindle."

"Within two or three months, I do not know just how soon after the placing of the loan, but within a very short time, the railroad went into bankruptcy and those people abroad found themselves the victims of what they regarded as a simple swindle."

"I should like to ask the Senator who were the losers in that transaction. Who were those people?" asked Senator Kenyon.

Senator Lodge: "They were the investors in France, the bankers of Paris, the great bankers of Paris being all substantially, as I have been informed, en-

TUNING FORK IS USED TO DIAGNOSE DISEASE

Enlargements of Organs Shown by the Vibrations, London Physician Says.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Dr. James Cantlie's application of the tuning fork to the diagnosis and cure of disease is attracting widespread attention in medical circles. He found that in certain cases it was extremely difficult with the stethoscope to obtain accurate knowledge of the enlargement of organs such as the liver, spleen, stomach and heart, more especially where the enlargement was accompanied by an affection of the neighboring tissues.

He discovered that if the tuning fork was set vibrating with the shaft placed against the body walls moved about, a note varying with the density of the organ situated immediately beneath was transmitted to the stethoscope. In this way, he says, the limits of the liver can be gauged with almost hair-breadth precision.

Dr. Cantlie in certain cases compared the results of the tuning fork method with those obtained by X-rays. He found the former absolutely accurate. He believes the method valuable in diagnosing broken ribs and bones generally.

MAN, WHIPPING HORSE, IS KICKED; HIS LEG BROKEN

Driver, Punishing Animal for Starting to Run, Is Injured Through Dash Board.

Christ Burkhardt, a driver for the Superior Laundry Co., who lives at 1414A South Twelfth street, was kicked by a horse he was driving last night and his leg was broken.

Burkhardt stopped the wagon at the corner of Spring and Chouteau avenues and was climbing down when the horses started to run. He regained his seat and, after bringing them to a stop, began to wield the whip in punishment. One of the horses retaliated by kicking through the dashboard and striking the driver on the leg. Burkhardt was taken to the city hospital, where it was found that the shin bone had been fractured.

Sculptor to Show St. Louis Memorial in Berlin.

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—Next week Berlin residents will have an opportunity to see Prof. Wandschneider's memorial for Carl Schurz, Emil Preetorius and Carl Daenzer, which shortly will be transferred to St. Louis.

The figure, which is called "Naked Truth," has just come out of its castings and will be exhibited here two weeks previous to shipment for unveiling in June. Prof. Wandschneider also has been commissioned by Mrs. Lehmann of Chicago to make a statue for a fountain to be erected at her childhood home, Tetrow, in Mecklenburg.

ANCIENT COLISEUM USED

Paris Plans Largest Outdoor Theater on Old Site.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—The city authorities have started afresh the excavation of the arena of the coliseum that was built by the Roman Emperor Hadrian in the second century. It was larger than the Roman Coliseum, and was near the outskirts of the present city. An excavation was started in 1870, but the work was stopped by the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war. It is proposed to make it the largest outdoor theater in the world.

9 AMERICANS DIE IN DEATH TRAP SET BY MEXICAN BANDIT

Passenger Train Carrying 50 Persons Runs Into Tunnel to Which Castillo Set Fire.

MANY COFFINS ASKED FOR

El Paso Investigator Finds Bodies Strewn Along Bore Where They Were Suffocated.

By Associated Press.

JUAREZ, Feb. 7. — Nine Americans and forty or fifty Mexicans, whose fate has been a mystery since the destruction of the Cumbre Tunnel last Wednesday, were suffocated. This information was received this evening at the headquarters of the Mexico Northwestern Railroad. The tragedy is laid at the doors of Maximo Castillo, the bandit leader.

A special train carrying 20 Americans led by W. J. Farragut of the Mexico Northwestern Railroad, 50 coffins and a rescue outfit, left here tonight for the scene.

Departure of the rescue train was delayed by a telegram from Secretary of State Bryan to American Consul Edwards demanding that a train of soldiers be dispatched ahead to prevent an attack by Castillo on the Americans. The Consul's order was acecded to at once by Gen. Benavides, and the task of getting together another train was begun. It will carry 300 rebel soldiers.

The exact number of persons aboard the passenger train, which consisted of one first-class, two second-class coaches, a baggage and express car and a freight car, is not known. First reports put the number at 35, while a request for coffins asked for 75.

Herr Unable to Count the Dead.

This evidently was an estimate, however, as the searching party led by Dr. F. C. Herr of Madera was unable to penetrate far enough into the tunnel to count the dead. These, it is expected, will be found strewn along the poisonous reaches of the tunnel, where they fell in attempting to escape.

Dr. Herr reached a body within 300 feet of the north entrance to the tunnel, and it was that of Juan Fernandez, rear brakeman of the train. As the passenger did not stop until within a few hundred feet of the freight train with which Castillo had set fire to the tunnel seven hours before, Fernandez must have staggered and crawled nearly three-quarters of a mile before he succumbed to the fumes. In his trail it is believed the others will be found, unless there was a stampede in the train to escape, and some were crushed in the attempt to crowd through the narrow aisles and doors.

Castillo Sets Death Trap.

Railroad men here and in El Paso are furious at Castillo's act. Tuesday 22 of Castillo's men were captured and executed by the Constitutionalists, and the next day, apparently in revenge, Castillo captured the freight train, ran it into the south end of the tunnel about 300 feet and there set fire to it.

The passenger train entered the death trap from the north unsuspectingly, probably traveling at its usual rate of about 15 miles an hour. When the engineer discovered the trap it was too late. Just what his actions were will be known only after an examination of the locomotive has been made.

Castillo's failure to send back warnings of his act is regarded as the most cruel and murderous act of his career of outlawry.

The missing Americans, all employes of the railroad, are:

M. J. Gilmartin, superintendent of the Chihuahua division; Bernard Schofield, superintendent of terminals at Juarez; Lee Williams, assistant manager of commissary; H. F. Marder, express agent; E. J. McCutcheon, engineer; J. E. Webster, conductor; Edward Morris, road master; Thomas Kelly, a conductor, and James Burgess, the latter three traveling as passengers. Gilmartin came here recently from Buffalo. Bernard Schofield came here from Brazil, Ind., and was taking his first trip over the road. Burgess was to have left the train at Cumbre station, but for some reason did not do so.

BOY, 8, HIT BY AUTO; SKULL IS FRACTURED

George Rutherford, 8-year-old son of Mrs. Amanda Rutherford, a widow living at 2441 South Third street, was run down and probably fatally injured by an auto owned by Daniel Doerr of 3120 Bent avenue, and driven by Doerr's son, Harry, 19 years old, at Broadway, between Barton and Victor streets, yesterday at 6 p. m.

Young Rutherford, on his way home, started to cross Broadway as Doerr approached in his machine. Before Doerr could stop his car, it had struck the youth. The boy was picked up unconscious and removed to his home, where physicians discovered he had a fractured skull and severe contusions of the head.

Doerr, who declared the accident was unavoidable, was arrested.

GIRL KILLS WIFE OF MAN SHE LOVED, THEN KILLS SELF

"She Refused to Get Divorce," Says Newark Inn-Keeper's Daughter.

PAIR ESTRANGED OVER HER

Slayer Takes Poison When With Man She Loved After Police Released Them.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Miss Hazel Herdman, hardly 21 years old, was the veiled girl who shot and killed Mrs. Charles Manning in her mother's home at 219 Warren street, Newark, N. J., Friday night, and this afternoon she died in the Mountainside Hospital at Montclair, after taking poison. She told those who gathered about her deathbed that she loved Manning, who was separated from his wife and who was the father of her 1½-year-old boy. She said she had begged Mrs. Manning to divorce her husband and hoped that Manning might get a divorce, but both wishes had proved vain.

Before taking bichloride of mercury in a quantity to have killed half a dozen human beings, Hazel Herdman wrote a short note to Manning, which she handed to him as he found her just before he took her to the hospital.

Asks Man to Care for Baby.

In the missive, which was carefully written on a folded sheet of heavy note paper, she bade him good-by with these words:

"Dear Charlie—This is my last letter. I am going to kill myself. I shot Mrs. Manning because of my love for you. Take good care of our baby. Good-by. "HAZEL."

Manning, in tears, handed the note to Dr. William Hareson at the Mountainside Hospital after he had taken the girl there and learned there no hope of saving her life.

The girl's confession in part was:

"Yes, I shot Mrs. Manning. I was in love with Charles Manning and wanted to marry him. His wife stood in my way and I shot her. I know I am going to die and I will confess. I have also a letter in which I have written something about it.

"I first met Manning two years ago and loved him from the start. I often went away with him and have been with him almost all the time since I left home two years ago. My father made me go back home once, but I left again and after awhile I went to live with my aunt. But wherever I was I always met Manning.

No Grounds for Divorce.

"I wanted him to get a divorce and many times asked him to do so. But he said he could not. He told me that he had hired detectives to watch his wife, but they could find nothing against her. Then I went to Mrs. Manning myself. I asked her if she would not get a divorce, but she refused to do so, and turned me away. Then I decided to kill her."

Manning and his wife had been separated since 1910. The wife worked hard for her living, first in a millinery shop and later in a bakery and was largely the support of her mother.

Manning remained in Montclair and for the last two years had been with Miss Herdman steadily. Because of this Miss Herdman's father refused to permit her to live in his home.

Through the settlement of the estate of her father, Mrs. Manning received last Monday a check for $2400. Under the New Jersey law, unless Mrs. Manning left a will, which it is not believed she did, her husband will inherit the $2400, which was her share of the estate. The Mannings had no children.

Miss Herdman, an innkeeper's daughter, took the poison in a candy store in Bloomfield, N. J., where she had gone with Manning after they had been released early today from the custody of the police. Although the authorities had suspected Miss Herdman of the crime, witnesses to the shooting, the murdered woman's mother, sister and niece, were unable to identify her as the veiled woman who fired the fatal shot.

The shooting last night was deliberate. Admitted to the house, the girl fired three shots at Mrs. Manning as she was lighting the gas to receive her.

Manning, a garage owner, is in custody of the police, who say he admitted he was the father of Miss Herdman's baby. The estrangement of the Mannings is said to have been due to Manning's affair with Miss Herdman.

Manning was questioned for two hours tonight at police headquarters. He denied any knowledge that Miss Hardman intended to shoot his wife, or that he was an accessory in any way. He also declared he never had seen the revolver with which the murder was done before he saw it in the possession of the police. After the questioning he was locked in a cell, although no charge had been made.

JEZEBEL A DEVIL, 'SOME SPORT,' SAYS PASTOR IN PULPIT

'Jezzie' Wore Clothes for Whole Family, Revivalist Tells a Congregation.

'TANGO' PRAYER TO BAAL

Evangelist Tells Pittsburg About Elijah in Highly Expressive Language.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 7.—"How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God follow Him, but if Baal, then follow him; and the people answered not a word."—Kings 1, xvii, 21.

From this text the Rev. Melville Trotter, a Michigan evangelist, delivered a sermon here today calculated to make the Rev. Billy Sunday, who is also conducting a revival here, "sit up and take notice." Said the Rev. Mr. Trotter:

"Ahab was King, that is, he was supposed to be, but he was married to Jezebel, and she was a devil. She wore almost all the clothes for the family. Israel was never in worse shape than she was at this time. Baal was the god, and there were 400 prophets living on easy street.

"The Goddess Asteroth had 450 prophets that lived at Jezebel's table. Jezzie was some sport, believe me. One is enough for the folk in Pittsburg—she had 450. The Lord put that bunch to the bad by getting hold of Elijah, a big fellow who stalked into the King's palace one day and said, "There'll be no more rain or dew till I say so." And he beat it.

Watch for the Mules.

"Three years and a half he stayed away and God took care of him, then he came back. Obediah was called into Ahab's palace this day and Ahab said to him, 'You go off to the West and I'll go to the East and see if we can find some water to keep the mules alive.' Ahab couldn't bear the thought of losing his mules. A mule is a great comfort to a man, if Jezebel is his wife. Oh, you mule!

"When Obediah saw him, this big man stalking along the road, he recognized him, fell on his face and said, 'Art thou my Lord, Elijah?' 'I'm it. Go tell Ahab I'm here.'

"'Do you want to get me put out of business? Don't you know if I should go now and tell them you're here the Lord would spirit you away and I'd get it where "Nellie wore the beads?"'

"'No,' he said. 'I'll promise you that I will see him.' And when Ahab came up and jumped off his mule, he said: 'Art thou he that troubleth Israel?' Elijah said 'No, it's you and your old dirty sins and your old crooked dad.'"

Prayers to Baal.

Here followed the Rev. Mr. Trotter's description of Elijah's proposal to call down fire from Heaven, allowing the folowers of Baal also to call on their god of fire.

"All day long," the revivalist continued, "they called on their god, who never answered them a word. About noontime Elijah grew sarcastic and said: 'He's a god all right only perhaps he was sleeping or he may be entertainig company; maybe he's out motoring, and has blown out a tire; call a little louder. That tango stunt you're doing doesn't seem to attract his attention.'

"Elijah turned and said: 'Grab that bunch and take them down to the brook and kill 'em! Not a one escaped."

MEDICINE FOR HER TEDDY BEAR POISONS A GIRL

Child Swallows Solution Containing Arsenic While She Is Playing Doctor.

In order to set an example for her teddy bear, Helen Buzard, 6 years old, of 3834 Delmar avenue, who was pretending to give the toy a dose of medicine for an imaginary illness, yesterday afternoon swallowed a tablespoonful of a solution containing arsenic.

She fell asleep for two hours and awoke very ill. Dr. Arthur H. Bradley was called and had her sent to the city hospital. He thought she might recover, as the solution was a diluted one, and the child had mixed it with water.

Her mother, Mrs. Bertha Hurburt, went downtown in the afternoon, leaving the child in charge of Miss Veri Thompson, a young woman living in the house. She saw the girl playing "doctor" with the teddy bear and trying to make it swallow a mixture in a glass. Helen explained that it was her own medicane, prescribed by Dr. Bradley. Miss Thompson took it away, not knowing that Helen had already swallowed some of it.

The child has been ill with nervous trouble, and Dr. Bradley prescribed an arsenic solution of which three drops, diluted with water, were a dose.

ST. LOUISAN SUES ST. JOSEPH WIDOW FOR JILTING HIM

Insurance Man Brings Breach-of-Promise Action Against Rich St. Joseph Woman.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 7.—Daniel Goodman, a St. Louis insurance agent, with offices at 30 De Menil Building, brought suit here today, against Mrs. Ophelia Wirt, a St. Joseph widow, alleging breach of promise. Goodman seeks judgment for $3774.20. Three thousand dollars is for heart balm. The balance covers a statement of expenses of his courtship with Mrs. Wirt, in which he itemizes an engagement ring, wedding ring, expenses of visits to the widow and cost of his unused wedding outfit.

Mrs. Wirt is 50 years old, the same as the plaintiff, and is comely. She is possessed of considerable means in residence property here and a farm in Iowa, which she inherited at her husband's death several years ago. Goodman says he entered into correspondence with her while he was living in New York, in answer to a newspaper advertisement. At the widow's solicitation that he be nearer her, he gave up employment in New York and removed to St. Louis, at a loss in salary of $100 a year, which he includes in his itemized statement of damages. He also demands $100 a year for the next three years, in anticipation of loss of salary.

Goodman alleges that Mrs. Wirt consented to marry him April 21 last and he quotes extensively from letters purporting to have been received from her to substantiate this. Mrs. Wirt refuses to discuss the affair and neither admits nor denies that there was an engagement. Goodman says he is still ready and willing to keep his part of the compact.

Goodman could not be located at his office yesterday and it was said there his home address was not known, as he had moved recently.

TRAINS CALLED BY MACHINE AT UNION STATION

Men Shout Into Telephone and Eight Phonograph-Like Devices Carry Sound.

"A-a-awl abo-o-ard for Chicago, San Antonio, Seattle, Savannah, Des Moines, Medicine Hat and Tuckahoe! Tr-hack number tw-henty! The X., Y. & Z. is now ready!"

Proclamations of this kind were heard in the Union Station waiting rooms last night, not from beneath the caps of uniformed train callers, but from the spreading horns of eight intruments resembling parlor phonographs. All the instruments were saying the same thing at once, but they were turned in different directions, and the sound to each hearer was as one voice.

City people, as well as rural tourists, stopped to wonder at the new-fangled announcers, and some remarked that it was a clever machine, but they hated to see the train callers lose their jobs in the middle of the winter.

They needn't have worried. The train callers were right on the job, doing their best to make the experiment a success. They were doing the calling, after all, and the instrument was merely giving the call a better circulation than it used to get. For the device was operated, not by phonograph records, but by the direct use of the human voice, transmitted over a wire.

The callers were in an office back of the ticket office, shouting into a telephone instrument. Station employes who knew the working of the new plan, listened intently, and divided into partisans of the two callers, Clarence Henry and Phil Hoesli, who, like rival Carusos, were striving each to produce the stronger and clearer tone as they alternately called the trains.

Station Master Clifford said if the experiment was judged to be successful, the new instrument would be installed in the Midway as well as indoors, and that the same plan might be used in calling the arrival of trains at the gates. The machine is a Chicago device.

MRS. ROBERTS, WHO KILLED HUSBAND, IS FOUND NOT GUILTY

Woman, for Whom Plea of Temporary Insanity Was Made, Weeps in Arms of Aged Father and Daughters, and When Spectators Cheer Verdict Room Is Cleared.

JURY, OUT 3 HOURS, TAKES 3 BALLOTS

Octogenarian, Mother of Slain Husband, Is an Interesting Witness, Saying Charge That Roberts Mistreated Child Was Proved False.

A verdict of not guilty was returned at 11:30 o'clock last night by the jury in the trial of Mrs. Emily C. Roberts for the murder of her husband, William P. Roberts, March 25 last, at the home of his son, William Jr., 2403 North Market street.

The reading of the words, "We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty," was the signal for an emotional outburst among relatives of Mrs. Roberts, in which she joined, and which spread to a crowd of about 100 persons, some of them women, who had been daily attendants at the trial and who remained in the courtroom until the jury's return. When the spectators began to cheer officials cleared the courtroom.

Mrs. Roberts flung herself weeping into the arms of her aged father, William C. Raines, and then embraced her daughters, Mrs. Birdie Healey and Mrs. Violet Brinkman, the testimony of the former of whom as to her mistreatment while a child by her father was considered to have had strong influence with the jury. Mrs. Roberts thanked the jurors individually and tearfully expressed her gratitude to her attorney, Charles P. Johnson.

Temporary Insanity Was Plea.

Mrs. Roberts, who shot and killed her husband from behind after she said he had taunted her for not being young and had bragged to her, in the presence of their daughter-in-law, of his association with other women, was tried on a charge of murder in the second degree. The theory of the defense was that she committed the crime while temporary insane, that she was at the time irresponsible and therefore innocent, and that she since has recovered from her insanity.

The jury was instructed that it could find her guilty, and in that case she could be sentenced to any term between 10 years and life; or find her not guilty, by reason of insanity from which she since has recovered; or not guilty because she was insane at the time and was still insane. In the last case, her commitment to an institution would rest with the court.

By omitting to make any comment upon the defendant's present sanity, the jury tacitly accepted the contention of the defense that, while Mrs. Roberts was insane when the murder was committed, she since has recovered. After receiving the congratulations of her friends, she departed with her daughters for her home.

The foreman of the jury, Frank P. Fisher of 5702 Vernon avenue, stated that the jurors, before beginning deliberations, had agreed not to reveal how the voting on the ballots stood, or the reasons which actuated them in reaching a verdict. He said that only three ballots were taken, and that an hour of discussion preceded the first one.

The case was given to the jurymen at 7 o'clock. They went to dinner, returning to the Municipal Courts Building at 8 o'clock. Judge Jones and court officials remained in the courtrom to await the verdict.

Final Session Most Eventful.

Yesterday's session of the trial was perhaps the most eventful of any of the five days. The principal witnesses were Robert's mother, Mrs. Ella Allfriend, 84 years old, of 925 Chambers street, who testified bitterly against her daughter-in-law; Harry H. Roberts, nephew of the man killed, who told of the family feud which had arisen over the trial; and Drs. W. M. Hoge and Sidney I. Schwab, alienists for the defense and the State respectively.

A hypothetical question, nearly 3000 words long, was put to Dr. Hoge by Charles P. Johnson, attorney for Mrs. Roberts. It embodied the charges of cruelty and unfaithfulness which have been made against Roberts, in the course of the trial, by a number of witnesses.

The physician was asked to state whether, after 38 years of married life, in which she had six times been a mother, and had reared five children; and in which her husband had shockingly mistreated their daughter between the ages of 6 and 13; and in which he had repeatedly driven

CONFEREES LIKELY TO RECOMMEND AN A. - M. COMPROMISE

Joint Committee Expects to Report to Municipal Assembly Tuesday, Urging 2½ or 4-Mile Bridge Approach, Under Reduced Bond Issue.

MANY OBJECTIONS TO SUCH A SCHEME

Route Would Not Be Accessible to Railroads Entering From North and Might Conflict With Drainage Plans.

The five Alton & Mississippi approach advocates on the Joint Conference Committee of six, which will meet behind closed doors at 3 p. m. Monday, say they expect to reach an agreement in time to report a compromise Tuesday to the Council and House of Delegates.

It is the opinion of the conferees that the short A. & M. approach, either to the point at which it reaches grade, two and one-half miles from the free bridge pier, or to the bluffs, about four miles, will be recommended. The shortest plan is estimated to cost $1,500,000 and the construction to the bluffs about $1,750,000. The 21-mile approach to the Madison County line, contemplated in the late House of Delegates amendments to the Hines bill, was estimated to cost $3,400,000, which, with the unconstructed highway approach in East St. Louis, costing $775,000, would have necessitated a bond issue of $4,250,000.

Randall Outlines Program.

Councilman Randall, who voted for the Hines bill providing a $2,750,000 bond issue for the construction of the Reber and the highway approaches, outlined his program as a conferee to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

"I think the conference will be limited to a consideration of a shortened Alton & Mississippi approach," said Randall, "and it will be my aim to recommend the cheapest possible approach along this line that will serve the purpose of the bridge. Estimates furnished me by Mr. Haberman last summer show that the approach can be constructed for nearly three miles to a point this side of the bluffs for less than $1,500,000. I hope and believe that the conferees will arrive at a unanimous agreement, and if they do, I think the Council and House of Delegates will adopt the report."

When asked if he thought the public would vote bonds under the plan he had outlined, Councilman Randall replied: "I hope so, but I don't think anyone is able to tell in advance. I know the people ought to, and if we recommend a cheaper approach that will be as good or better than the Reber approach, I do not know why they shouldn't vote bonds to complete the bridge."

Councilman Fletcher expressed himself as favoring a compromise that would result in the least costly plan that would embody the A. & M. approach. Fletcher said he calculated the recommendation of the A. & M. line to grade south of East St. Louis would reduce the size of the necessary bond issue, including the highway approach cost, to $3,250,000. He expects to invite President Kinsey of the Board of Public Improvements to supply the city's estimates of cost Monday afternoon.

"Surprise in Store for Public."

Delegates Scully, Gallagher and Hall, the three conferees of the lower branch, are among the stanchest supporters of the A. & M. plan, and say they will concur in any reasonable modification of the 21-mile approach that the Council members suggest. Delegate Hall hinted after his appointment that a surprise was in store for the public, but would not explain further than to say the conference would reveal something that the public had not heard before.

Councilman Herrmann, the only member of the conference who has opposed the A. & M. approach and favored the Hines bill without amendments, said he had nothing to say in advance of the conference as to what he would suggest by way of compromise.

The objections likely to be made against the proposed bob-tailed Alton & Mississippi approach are:

That the approach could not be constructed to the point where it would reach grade in Snag Lake for anything like the figures suggested by the Council conferees.

That the proposed approach would be inaccessible to railroads entering East St. Louis from the north side of the city, and inconvenient to every railroad other than the Illinois Central.

The bob-tailed approach would be at least a mile longer than the Reber approach, which, with the highway approach, would cost, according to estimates, $2,750,000.

It was estimated that the construction cost of the A. & M. approach with a 21-mile belt line would be $3,400,000. The greater part of this cost would be in the approach itself.

Embankment Said to Be Planned.

It is reported that the conferees will recommend that the approach, outside of the limits of East St. Louis, shall be simply an embankment, with concrete retaining walls. As the approach will be carried at an elevation of approximately 20 feet above grade for a distance of two miles, where it intersects the Iron Mountain Railroad, the construction of an embankment approach would be exceedingly costly.

The territory through which the embankment would be constructed is within the East St. Louis levee district, which is to be drained in the immediate future. An embankment thrown directly across the sloughs and low, mashy districts south of East St. Louis would interfere with the drainage scheme, and probably bring St. Louis into conflict with the Drainage Board, which has control of the work.

Association Once Opposed to the Reber Approach Now For It

THE Harney Heights Improvement Association, which has in the past opposed the Reber approach bond issues to complete the free bridge, because of the 50-year Southern Traction franchise on the bridge, voted at its February meeting to indorse the Hines bill providing for a bond issue of $2,750,000, and the Hines bill to reduce the traction franchise to 25 years. A resolution opposing the $4,250,000 or $7,000,000 Alton & Mississippi approach plans was adopted by the association members, and a notice was directed to Mayor Kiel.

The following organizations recently have approved the Reber approach to the free bridge and opposed the Alton & Mississippi grab:

gaged in placing these bonds."

Senator Kenyon: "And receiving a large commission?"

Senator Lodge: "Receiving a large commission for doing so. They had no difficulty in placing them because their constituency was wholly ignorant and relied on them."

Senator Clarke of Wyoming: "Does not the fact that they exacted very large commissions evidently show that they were acquainted with the character of the securities?"

Senator Lodge: "I think that would be quite a reasonable inference but certainly they were paid a large commission for doing it and they did it."

Senator Kenyon: The American bankers at least were acquainted with the character of the security, as the commission has so stated in its report.

Senator Lodge: The commission states that but the commission does not go into the transaction abroad. The result of that was to give a worse blow to American credit and the standing of American business and American securities abroad than we have ever received.

American Credit Injured.

"These facts have come to me and have been told to me on what I believe to be good authority. As I said, they come from direction of people who were victims in Paris, and I think that that is something which ought to be known. We cannot probably do anything about it here in the way of prosecution, but at least it should be known what methods have been employed in the placing of a loan abroad whose results have injured the good name of the United States and the American credit throughout Europe."

Senator Oliver: I will ask the Senator here if this firm of Speyer & Co. is not the authorized fiscal agent of the United States in London?

Senator Lodge: Yes, they are, and they have been made so since the 4th of March, appointed by the President.

Senator Townsend: When was that?

Senator Oliver: On the first day of May, 1913.

Senator Toppitt: I should like to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania whether that appointment was before or after the failure of the Frisco Railroad.

Shows How Crash Followed Sales.

Senator Oliver: I think it was before the failure.

Senator Lodge: It was before the appointment of receivers.

"I find in the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission as to the San Francisco railroad that the receiver was applied for on May 27, 1913. The Frisco road sold to Speyer & Co. in New York shortly before receivers were appointed $3,000,000 of its five per cent bonds.

"These bonds were sold to the French investors on April 24, 1913, May 2, 1913, May 10, 1913, May 14, 1913 and on May 27, 1913 the receivers were applied for.

FRANCIS AN A. & M. SUPPORTER; WARD FOR REBER ROUTE

It Cast 1271 Votes For Proposition in August, 1912, and 1019 Against It.

CITIZENS GIVE VIEWS

Business Men Declare Sentiment Is Overwhelmingly for $2,750,000 Bond Issue.

The Post-Dispatch will print from day to day maps of the city's 28 wards that voters all over town may know who their respective Delegates are and whether their views on the free bridge question are represented or misrepresented in the House.

In the House of Delegates the Ninth Ward is represented by J. J. Francis, Democrat, who has a saloon at the southeast corner of Sidney street and Broadway. Francis is among the 23 obstructionists standing solid for the A. & M. grab.

In August, 1912, in this ward, 1271 votes were cast at the special election for the bond issue providing for the Reber approach, with 1019 against it; in the following November, at the general election when various amendments were voted on and scratched, the vote on the measure was 1454 for and 1693 against. That the proposition failed to carry at that time was due to the fact that the general election ballot contained several constitutional amendments and in their eagerness to vote "no" on some of them the voters made a clean sweep and in most cases voted "no" on all amendments simply to be sure they were voting right. This was the case in other wards.

William Kaiser, Democratic City Committeeman of the Ninth Ward, said: "I think Delegate Francis is making a mistake. He ought to change his tactics and fall in line. Everybody wants the free bridge completed. The demand is city-wide. There is only one approach, and that's the Reber to a certainty."

Sentiment for Reber Approach.

A leading business man of the Ninth Ward is John Strobel, who conducts a large retail grocery at 2526 South Broadway. He is a Republican.

"I talk a great deal," he said, "with many leading people in this ward who come into my store. All of them, myself included, are for the Reber approach and for a quick completion of the bridge. There is hardly a Republican in my ward with whom I have conversed who has not expressed himself in favor of the Hines bill. Of course, we know that Mr. Francis is opposed to this, but why he is, it is difficult to tell. If he would half way respect the wishes of his constituents he would swing into line with us and permit the bond issue to be submitted as early as possible.

Dr. J. E. Doll, Republican, a physician who resides at 2523 South Broadway, said: "In my practice in this ward I meet with many of our best business men. In nearly every instance I have found them strongly in favor of the Reber approach. Of course, I am a professional man and take only the average interest in politics, still I have asked myself why Francis, our delegate, should be taking the stand he is when he must know that the majority of the voters in the ward are opposed to his attitude in the matter."

George Schneider, Republican, of 2429 South Broadway, a harness manufacturer, is another Ninth Ward business man favoring the Reber approach.

"The Reber route is ours, bought and paid for," he said. "It is the place to build the East Side approach upon. I am not the only man in this ward who thinks this, either. We want the bridge completed and as rapidly as possible. Francis may know what he is doing, but whatever it is, it is not what is wanted by the business men of this ward."

Francis Opposes Voters' Wishes.

Herman H. Stuessel of 2401 South Broadway, a druggist and a Democrat, said:

"I do not side with the views of Francis, at all. I am strongly in favor of the Reber approach. It is the cheapest and the best of any of the propositions and easily the most feasible. I am a Democrat and here in the store I have had many conferences with Democrats. To a man they think as I do—that the bridge should be completed, and that there is apparently some sort of 'combine' in the House that is causing all this unnecessary delay. This is the belief of every man I have talked to who favors the Reber route."

Joseph A. Helderle of the firm of Wacker & Helderle, well-known funeral directors at 2331 South Broadway, said:

"Sure, I'm for the Reber approach, and it is my belief that most of the leading citizens of this ward are for it. Getting down to a close business proposition, the Reber route is the only route.

"Just what Francis means by his attitude in standing out for the A. & M. approach is beyond me. I know that he does not represent the views of the voters in this ward, and there the matter must rest."

William Troll, the City Jailer, formerly was the Republican committeeman from the Ninth. While a voter in this ward, Troll lives in the city jail. Troll is a warm advocate of the Reber approach, and believes the bridge should be completed without further delay.

"The House is only wasting time," he said, "in standing out for the A. & M. approach." Should it be submitted to the people to vote on, it would be snowed under. The better thinking voters in my ward are for the Reber approach, and the fight is going to be kept up till the matter is submitted to a general vote.

"Our Delegate, Francis, is no doubt honest in the stand he is taking, but even at that I am positive he is not in any way representing the views of the bigger part of his constituency."

Delegates' Criticisms of the Reber Approach Knocked Out

Maxime Reber, former President of the Board of Public Improvements, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that the statement made by members of the House of Delegates that he had repudiated the Reber approach was an absolute falsehood. Several members of the House of Delegates, who are supporting with much enthusiasm the Alton & Mississippi grab, have declared Reber also had stated that the A. & M. was an ideal approach.

"THE statement," said Reber, "that I had repudiated the city's approach, or had suggested that any other approach was in any respect comparable to it from the standpoint of desirability, is wholly false. I have never, at any time, stated that the Alton & Mississippi approach was desirable.

"I recall that at a public hearing I attended on some bridge question the subject of certain facilities for handling traffic on the east side was brought up. I remarked at that time that such facilities as had been suggested could not be provided except by a belt line railroad, owned by the city. But at the same time I advised the members of the conference that the city of St. Louis had no power to own and construct a belt line in Illinois, and could not do so without obtaining permission from the State of Missouri, from Congress and the State of Illinois. This is the statement that has probably been twisted into an alleged indorsement of the Alton & Mississippi scheme.

"The located approach is desirable from every standpoint. It would be carried as an elevated structure over virtually all of the paper streets that exist in the southern part of East St. Louis, and there would be no grade crossings.

"Everybody familiar with the route of the city's approach knows that it passes through a district which is little more than a group of small farms. There are no made streets in the territory occupied by the approach.

"The people who are making these criticisms must be extremely hard up for arguments to bolster up their cause. Anybody who is being misled about the facts can quickly find out the truth by communicating with me."

East St. Louis Entirely Satisfied With Plans

Another objection that is being urged against the Reber approach by Delegate James J. Gallagher, leader of the Democratic majority, is that East St. Louis would exercise an undesirable police power over it.

Thomas L. Fekete Jr., City Attorney of East St. Louis, said yesterday that East St. Louis was entirely satisfied with the Reber approach, and was eager to see the bridge completed.

"As to the police powers of East St. Louis over the free bridge they would be the same as over the Eads Bridge," said Fekete. "Nobody has ever heard of East St. Louis interfering with the operation of the Eads Bridge.

"The attitude of East St. Louis toward the free bridge was shown by the fact that it vacated all streets desired by St. Louis for the Reber approach, and granted all the ordinances necessary for the crossing of streets.

"We feel in East St. Louis that the free bridge will benefit this city as much as it will St. Louis. We cannot understand why anybody would raise the point that East St. Louis would interfere with the bridge, or hamper St. Louis in the operation of it. I can see no likelihood of any police powers being exercised by East St. Louis that would be detrimental to the bridge in any respect."

City officials of East St. Louis are opposed to any other than the Reber approach, for the reason, they hold, that St. Louis has exhausted its powers of condemnation, and could not acquire another approach.

They are opposed to the Alton & Mississippi approach, they say, because it would discriminate against that city by causing trains to be operated around East St. Louis, instead of through it. The railroads now entering East St. Louis are bound under their grants, they assert, to pass through that city. The railroads could not use an approach that did not pass through the city, the officials declare.

Mrs. Roberts Found Not Guilty of the Murder of Husband

her and the children from the house, sometimes into the midwinter cold; and when she had lately been consulting a physician for what he pronounced to be hysteria; when, after hearing her husband's boasts of his exploits with other and younger women, she shot him in the back of the head and killed him—whether the physician thought she was suffering from a form of hysterical insanity.

Dr. Hoge replied that he did think so. Questioned by Circuit Attorney Harvey, he said he based his answer on the assumption that the circumstances set forth in the question were facts. He said he had not made an examination of Mrs. Roberts.

Not Insane, Says Dr. Schwab.

Dr. Schwab, testifying for the State, replied to the same hypothetical question by saying he did not think the woman was insane. He said an intelligent answer could not be based merely on the question, even if every statement in it were true, but that an examination was necessary. He said he examined Mrs. Roberts at the city hospital the day after the killing, and that he could find no symptom of insanity.

Mrs. Allfriend, Roberts' mother, though bent and white-haired, spoke with vigor and showed the strongest feeling against her daughter-in-law. She said her son was a good man, not guilty of the offenses against their daughter which his wife charged to him. For years, she said, the wife had nagged and abused him and had accused him of associating with other women. She had even charged Mrs. Allfriend, the aged witness declared, with arranging meetings between Roberts and young women at her home. She told of seeing Mrs. Roberts beat Roberts with an umbrella, and hearing her use bad language toward him. When there were deaths in the family, she said, Mrs. Roberts quarreled with the relatives, and when Harry Roberts, William's brother died, she kept William from attending the funeral.

"My son often came to me and put his arms around me and wept," said Mrs. Allfriend, "saying he didn't know what to do about his wife; that he couldn't get along with her. On the morning of the killing my son came to my house, and she followed him there and called him vile names and hit him with her umbrella."

She said that, when he had been accused of misconduct toward his child, she had questioned the little girl, and had been told by her that the charge was not true, but that her mother had told her to say it was true. This daughter is Mrs. Birdie Healey.

Selden P. Spencer, former Circuit Judge, who tried Roberts' divorce suit in 1899, and dismissed his petition and his wife's cross-bill, testified that he questioned the child at the time, and satisfied himself the story was not true.

Circuit Attorney Harvey told the jury, in his final plea, that its place was not to exercise sympathy—that the matter of sympathy rested with the Judge and with the pardoning officials. He contended that the legal definition of second-degree murder—murder in the heat of passion—covered the case.

Attorney Johnson, for the defense, made an intensely earnest portrayal of the woman's married life, with the work she had done in home-building and the hardships and abuse to which her husband had subjected her, and cited the fact that her children were standing by her in the trial. He dwelt on the testimony of Mrs. Ada Roberts, wife of William P. Roberts Jr. and chief witness of the shooting.

While Johnson was relating this Mrs. Roberts fainted, as she had twice before done during the trial. The lawyer did not stop his talk, and she was revived without being taken from the courtroom, by the efforts of Mrs. Johnson and of Mrs. Roberts' father, William C. Raines, 75 years old, of Shelbyville, Mo. Raines had been in attendance throughout the trial.

ANDERSON, UNDER NEW POLICY, HOLDS UP CAFE LICENSES

Excise Commissioner Demands That Petitions Have Names of Two-Thirds of Property Owners.

A new policy of compelling the owners of saloons and cafes whose "atmosphere" is not approved by Excise Commissioner Anderson to obtain the signatures of two-thirds, instead of a majority, of the taxpaying property owners in the block, was announced yesterday by Anderson. Under the law, he may at his discretion issue a license upon a majority petition, but if he refuses to do so, he may be compelled to issue the license only by the presentation of a two-thirds petition. The new system is described as "local option by city blocks."

The Hofbrau, Cambridge Court, the Pines, Deck's and the Congress are named as being among several downtown saloons of "undesirable atmosphere" which will be forced to close their doors Wednesday, when their licenses expire, unless they are able to present mandatory petitions.

Two Petitions Rejected.

Petitions having only a majority of the eligible signatures have been recently rejected when presented by Joseph Deck, proprietor of Deck's cafe, 112 North Sixth street, and by Joseph W. Duffy, owner of the Congress Bar at 117 North Sixth street. An amended petiton was filed Friday by Deck, but has not yet been examined by the Excise Commissioner. Duffy has employed two men to canvass the property owners of his block for the purpose of obtaining the necessary signatures.

By "undesirable atmosphere," Anderson told a reporter last night, he means such a reputation as to lead him to the conclusion that the saloon in question is not conducive to the general happiness and prosperity of the community. He admitted that he did not recall any police compaints against the saloons and cafes named.

"I do not wish to assume the responsibility for issuing licenses to saloons of this kind," said he. "By requiring the owners to furnish mandatory petitions I put the responsibility up to the taxpayers in the block."

Saloon Men's Business Drops.

In connection with this added difficulty in obtaining licenses, a wail is going up among many saloon keepers both in the downtown and residence districts that their business is not what it used to be. Anderson added that he believes it to be a fact that the custom of business men of entertaining their customers and associates in saloons is becoming a thing of the past. The Liggett & Myer Tobacco Co., he pointed out, was able not long ago to prevent a nearby saloon keeper from renewing his license by refusing to sign his petition. The company held that a saloon so near would be a dangerous temptation to its employes.

He cited the Steel Trust, which recently offered its employes an increase of salary conditioned upon their becoming total abstainers, and declared that the Ford Automobile Co. gives the preference among its workers to those who do not drink.

A saloon keeper drawing most of his customers from the vicinity of the Merchants' Exchange, quit business recently, declaring that the decline of the vogue which entertaining in saloons once had among business men had made it impossible for him to meet expenses.

"Movies" Encroach Upon Bars.

A number of saloon keepers in the residence districts complain that the "poor men's clubs" nowadays are not the saloons but the movies, and that the inroads of the latter are making the saloon business unprofitable.

Where many men used to go to a saloon after supper to pass a pleasant evening with their friends, they now, it is pointed out, take their families to the picture show.

For several months Anderson has required all new applicants for saloon licenses to present mandatory petitions instead of the majority petitions which were once adequate. His new policy is an extension of this policy to existing saloons the existence of which he believes should be placed under more drastic conditions.

During his 12 months in office Anderson has revoked 67 licenses that have not been restored, or almost twice as many as were revoked during the four years before by three of his predecessors in office put together.

LIEUTENANT'S BRIDE DIES

Champaign (Ill.) Girl Succumbs Near Manila.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Feb. 7.—Word reached here today of the death of the wife of Lieut. S. W. Rucker, near Manila.

She was formerly Miss Edith Hatch of Champaign, and their marriage at San Francisco last summer followed a race across the country to beat an army order sending him to the Philippines.

TRAIN RUNS DOWN A FORMER JUDGE; INJURY IS FATAL

W. S. Louden, Ex-Revenue Collector at East St. Louis, Hurt in Terminal Yards.

Walter S. Louden of Waterloo, Ill., former Judge of the Illinois Court of Claims under Gov. John R. Tanner and later Internal Revenue Collector for the East St. Louis district, was run down by a Terminal freight train in the East St. Louis yards at 7 o'clock last night and fatally injured.

Louden bought out the M. & O. Milk Co., with offices at Eighteenth and Market streets, in St. Louis, a month ago. He left the office and boarded train No. 6 on the Clover Leaf line, which left Union Station at 5:23 p. m., getting off at the Relay Depot in East St. Louis. Walking over the tracks at the grade crossing, he was knocked down and run over by the freight drag. His left arm was severed at the shoulder, the left foot was mashed, both shoulder blades were fractured and doctors at the Marietta Hospital, where he was taken after the accident, said that he would not live through the night.

When he regained consciousness he called for his life-long friend, former Congressman W. A. Rodenberg.

Louden is the father of three children by his first wife and of a 3-months-old baby by his second wife, who was Miss Sue Davis, a stenographer in the office of Edward Troutman, until Louden married her 18 months ago.

Louden has been a delegate to all State and national Republican conventions for years and was considered a political power through the Southern counties of Illinois.

BONAPARTE GIVES VIEWS OF THE NEW ANTI-TRUST PLANS

Former Attorney-General Says Holding Companies Already Are Prohibited Under the Sherman Law, Therefore This Clause Will Be No Improvement.

INDORSES REGULATION OF R. R. SECURITIES

Says People Have Received News of This Plan With Pleasure and Relief—Sees Promise in the Proposed Trade Commission.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 7.—In a signed statement, former Attorney-General Bonaparte, discussing President Wilson's trust program, says:

"The President's proposal specifically to forbid the formation of so-called holding companies resembles the suggested prohibition of interlocking directorates."

Mr. Bonaparte says that it is settled beyond dispute that a holding company constitutes "a combination in restraint of trade," under the terms of the Sherman anti-trust law. The organization of such a company is held further to create a trust, rendered unlawful under that statute, in the Northern Securities case.

"Ever since this decision the existence of a holding company has been regarded by the bar as virtually a "badge" of intended monopolization under the second section of the act," says Mr. Bonaparte. "It will do harm to nobody in a declaratory statute the settled rule of law thus established, but this will, for practical purposes, leave the solution of the trust problem as far off as ever.

Approves Trade Board Plan.

There is no more to be said in favor of the proposed trade commission, recommended as a substitute for or expansion of the present bureau of corporations, he said. Indeed he thinks he sees in this suggestion the germ of a real and radical remedy for the evils and dangers lurking in the gigantic development of our agencies of big business. As now presented, however, the remedy proposed is hardly more than embryonic.

Under the present law the Bureau of Corporations can communicate information only to the President, and not even to a committee of the House or Senate, while the trade commission, according to Mr. Bonaparte's view, would constitute practically a nation-wide grand jury.

Moreover, the commission apparently is expected to instruct the officers of corporations engaged in interstate foreign commerce as to what they can do under the terms of the law. Had it been in existence when these controlling the Steel Trust asked President Roosevelt whether they could lawfully acquire control of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co., their question would have been addressed to and answered by the Commission.

There is no doubt that the duties of the commission will be delicate and will demand excellent judgment on the part of its members; neither is there any doubt that the exercise of its power may give rise to litigation of uncertain outcome, and, probably, a serious consequence.

This proposal of the President, if adopted, assuredly will modify the existing situation, although just how far it is hard to say; but only if or when the powers and duties of his suggested trade commission shall be so developed as to become analogous to those now vested in the Interstate Commerce Commission as to interstate carriers by rail, will there be a reasonable hope, in Bonaparte's opinion, that we are approaching a solution of the problem presented by the trusts.

Regulation of Securities Approved.

Bonaparte finds that the President's recommendation that the Interstate Commerce Commission be given power to superintend and regulate the financial operations of railroads has been received by the public, as the President predicted, with relief and approval. He adds:

"It need be but a short step to extend the same beneficent control to all forms of big business, when licensed to engage in interstate or foreign commerce, and when we shall have a President, sustained by a dominant party, in hearty sympathy with the policy implied in such a step there will be some ground for a reasonable hope that a permanent solution of the trust problem is close at hand."

FINDS ANNA HELD'S $2000 COMB; PAWNS IT FOR $25

Woman Gives It to Daughter Who Wears It to Factory Thinking It Worthless.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Walking through Thirty-ninth street on New Year's day, Mrs. Marie Fucciano saw a hair comb on the sidewalk. She gave it to her daughter, Rosie, a worker in a paper box factory, remarking:

"It must be worth at least 49 cents, Rosie."

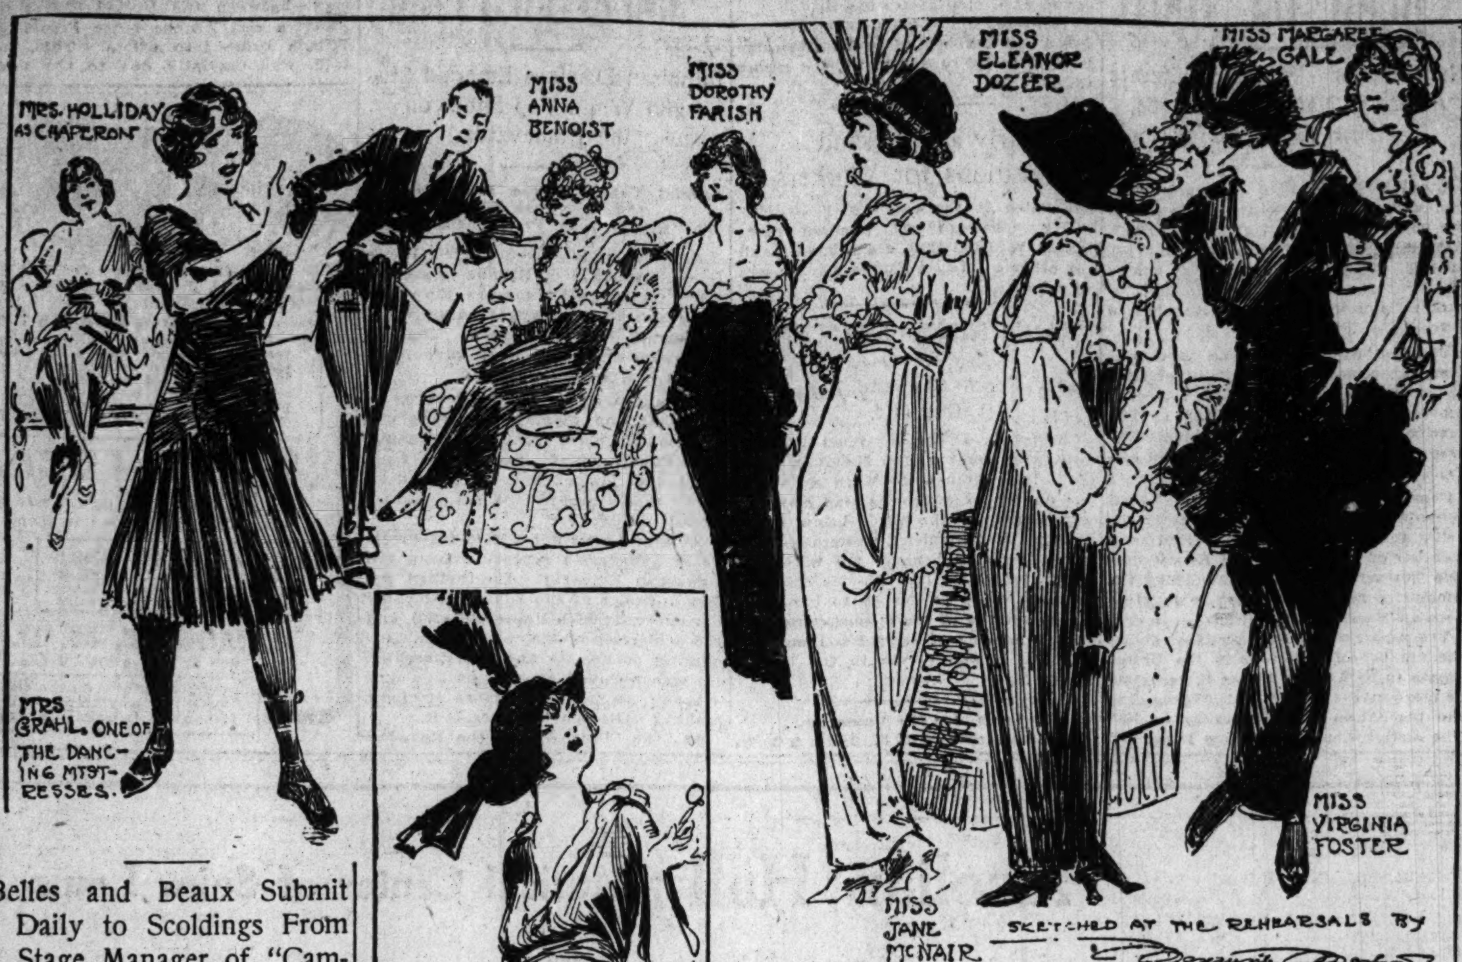
Next day the girl wore the comb to the factory. The other girl workers found in it what looked to be real diamonds and pearls. Feb. 4 a member of the family took it to a pawn shop.

"What will you give me for the comb?" the shop keeper was asked.

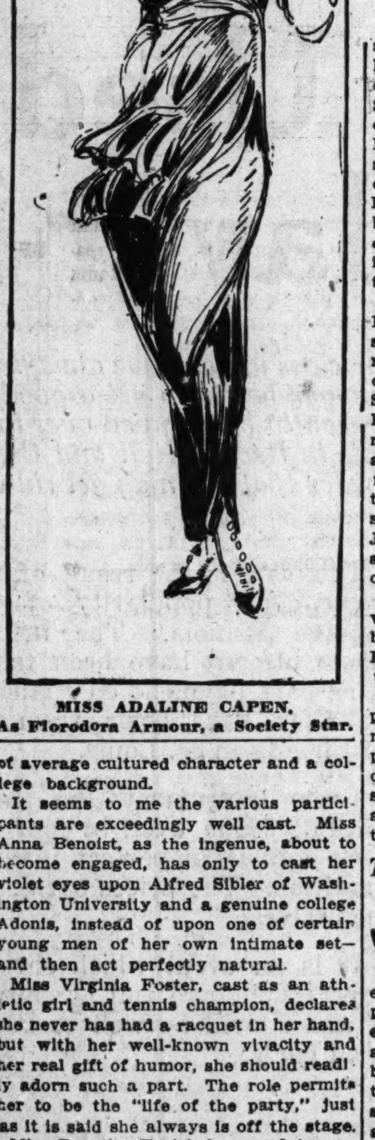
"Twenty-five dollars," he replied at once, and he handed out the money. Then the pawnbroker discovered that he had a comb which had been lost by Anna Held, the actress. He communicated with the police and the comb was identified. It is valued at $2000.

Society Is Toiling at Rehearsals for Charity Play

Gayest Winter Season Brought to an Abrupt Close



SKETCHED AT THE REHEARSALS BY Marguerite Martyn



MISS ADALINE CAPEN,
As Florodora Armour, a Society Star.

Belles and Beaux Submit Daily to Scoldings From Stage Manager of "Campus Mouser," Which Will Be Presented by Children's Hospital Auxiliary—200 Actors in Cast.

By Marguerite Martyn.

WHO would have believed any power sufficient to force to so sudden a close the gayest, maddest, most furiously whirling season St Louis society has ever known?

As it is, society, not just "one's own smart little set," as The Poor Little Rich Girl's mother would have said, but everybody else's own smart little set is doing nothing except prepare for the great three days' engagement of Campus Mouser for the benefit of the Children's Hospital, at the Odeon, the evenings of Feb. 19 and 20 and the afternoon of Saturday, the 21st.

There are 200 actors in the cast, so you will see that a good part of society can do little save attend rehearsals every waking hour. It is said that beaux and belles who have refused to become interested in the great project, which it is hoped will enable the completion of the country home for little invalids so generously started by Mrs. Graham, are taking themselves off to summer climes rather than face the icy scorn of society's hosts here at home. And there have been instances, those of Miss Anna Benoist and Miss Adaline Capen, for example, where recipients of the most tempting invitations to the Southland have resisted them and remained at home to serve sweet charity.

The lady straight from gay Paris, who, earlier in the season, commented caustically upon the relative downhill speed of St. Louis society and predicted dire calamity if society did not call a halt in its mad career, please take notice, and admit the day is saved.

Elite Must Submit to Stage Manager's Scoldings

AND when I say pomp and vanity are being renounced, I mean literally that. Permitted a peep behind the barred doors of the Buckingham Hotel parlors and a dancing school ballroom, which are given over to the rehearsals every afternoon and evening, I found groups of the fairest, most fortune-favored among the city's socially elect submitting humbly to the commands, the corrections, the scoldings of a stage manager who is no exception to the rule of severity in those quarters.

Miss Eleanor Dozier, the two Misses Damerons, Miss Kathleen McBride, Miss Nannie Limberger, Miss Jane McNair, Miss Helen Lane and Miss Elise Boeckler, all petted and pampered daughters of fortune, could not have been striving more seriously for positions in the front row of a chorus if they had been so many of the stage-struck waifs who are known to haunt the offices of theatrical agencies. Why must stage managers be always such severe taskmasters? I was led to wonder as I observed Miss Grace Serrish, author, producer and general trainer and stage manager of "The Campus Mouser."

Having all society to draw from, that is, debutantes, juniors, high school boys and girls, the young married set, and some seasoned beaux and belles, it should not be difficult to people a play of average cultured character and a college background.

It seems to me the various participants are exceedingly well cast. Miss Anna Benoist, as the ingenue, about to become engaged, has only to cast her violet eyes upon Alfred Sibler of Washington University and a genuine college Adonis, instead of upon one of certain young men of her own intimate set—and then act perfectly natural.

Miss Virginia Foster, cast as an athletic girl and tennis champion, declares she never has had a racquet in her hand, but with her well-known vivacity and her real gift of humor, she should readily adorn such a part. The role permits her to be the "life of the party," just as it is said she always is off the stage.

Miss Dorothy Farish has need to employ only her natural attractiveness to become Susie Smart, another ingenue.

Miss Capen Wears a Monocle in Her Part

AND Miss Capen as Floradora Armour, a society star! Well, if wearing gorgeous raiment were all there is to that part, Miss Capen is already a living replica of a drawing by Driau, the most ultra of the most extreme of the most of the fashion-plate artists. But she is expected to be a blase society star and how she is to affect the stiffness, hauteur and ennui without an instant's sacrifice of her long, loose, lissome lines I shan't attempt to tell. You'll have to take my word for it that she does it. Perhaps the monocle does the trick.

If Miss Margaret Gale were a real suffragette perhaps she wouldn't have the heart to put as much real comedy into her part as she does. She performs a most ludicrous perception of one. The scholarly Miss Bertha Bates as Rose Marie Research will only be working a little overtime. Miss Minnie Potter as Prof. Catty, really the title role, is a born actress, they say. She doesn't even need to be regular at rehearsals, it seems. At least I didn't see her there.

James Drummond and Will La Beaume, with leading parts, are seasoned actors about whom no fears need be harbored. How Charles, otherwise Chappie Ziebig, and Mr. Sihler will acquit themselves in a lightning change to petticoats remains to be seen. They were having a painful time getting their voices filed down to passable falsetto and they haven't even tried the hobble skirt and other things as yet. Mrs. Julius Walsh is to be called upon as a last hope of fitting young Sihler out with a gown of sufficient length.

Ollie Anderson, Will Stribling, Hayward Niedringhaus and Jack Lionberger, known in the play as "The Heartbreakers' Union," will not have to do much acting, "they say."

The speaking parts to carry on the plot are not the biggest part of the musical show as you may well suppose, But even the requisites of a chorus, show girls, broilers, ponies, song and dance specialties, sister acts, etc., are easily recruited from the ranks of society.

Tango Chorus Must Even Rehearse Parts

The tango chorus by such experts as Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kaufmann, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson Potter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Mauran, Mrs. Allen T. West, Mrs. Hugh McK. Jones, Mrs. George Tiffany, Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer Jr., Mrs. Arthur Shepley, Messrs. James T. Drummond, Carl Langenberg, John T. Davis, Lynn Secord, William B. Cole and Andrew McCreery, led by Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus and Charles Zeibig, should settle once and for all the much disputed question of what is and what is not tango, and you'd think the "young married set" would scarcely need to rehearse the tango. Yet they find excuse for doing it whenever they can sandwich in an hour between other duties.

The hesitation chorus which the debutantes have chosen as their part of the program, will include Misses Frances and Katherein Dameron, Eleanor Dozier, Margaret Drew, Dorothy Haydel, Helen Lane, Ann Lionberger, Catherine McCreery, Jane McNair, Enid Simpkins, Elise Boeckler, Madge Adams. And they will dance with Jack Lionberger, Andrew McCreery, Ray Prewitt, Tom McKittrick, Boyle Rodes, Wm. Stribling, Burgoyne Wilson, Lacy Love, Clarence King, Brooks Knight and Wyatt Brodix.

Let's see! Pittsburg used to brag about a million-dollar chorus. One can't help wondering how much this one would figure up. But that is beside the point.

In the parasol chorus an interesting forecast of next season's buds is essayed. They are going to be a refreshing picture in themselves in white muslin frocks with green coaties, parasols and Dolly Castle caps. I wonder how many of those caps the girls will wear out posing before the mirrors before the show really comes off. A good many, to judge by the attention given them at the rehearsal.

Soldan and Central High Furnish Talent

THEN there are choruses recruited from Soldan and Central High schools and from Mary Institute, and other features and specialties drawn into requisition wherever especial talent is to be discovered in society. And there are a lot of people with parlor tricks of an order more than acceptable during these dolorous years of the professional theater. Why, then, should Miss Gerrish emerge from each rehearsal looking as if she had passed through some terrible ordeal? She demanded what was at first thought an exorbitant price for her services. Only after wiring inquiries to other cities where she has put on her play and receiving the extravagant assurances of its success everywhere, did the hospital board decide in the extremity of their need to undertake so large a venture.

But anyone observing Miss Garrish at work heartily admits she earns her money. She furthermore, regardless of the previous condition of NO servitude, is getting all the work there is out of her company. She doesn't hesitate to apply the verbal lash and, surprising as it may seem, her orders are accepted with meekness and humility.

Perhaps it isn't all so bad as that. Of course, there are compensations even in the life of real chorus girls. Almost every rehearsal ends in a frolic of dancing and more dancing, and out at the Buckingham, where the principals rehearse, there is always someone planning refreshments of some sort after rehearsal. One moment of the rehearsal shouldn't be a serious trial at least for Mr. Zeibig. Disguised for the moment as the chaperon lady, he is required to kiss all the girls. But would you believe it, Miss Garrish has to get very stern and commanding and shout:

"Now, Mr. Zeibig, you must not seem to be afraid of them."

And whirling upon the girls, she admonishes them:

"And, girls, you must not shrink from him."

Strange, how it seems to be so difficult to be just natural on the stage.

MARIE LLOYD ADMITTED

But English Actress Must Leave Country March 1.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Marie Lloyd, English actress, who was held up at Vancouver, British Columbia, by the immigration authorities and ordered deported, charged with being an immoral character, was allowed admittance into the United States by Commissioner-General of Immigration Caminetti today.

Miss Lloyd is under bond of $1500, furnished by the Orpheum Theater Co. of Seattle, Wash., to leave this country just as soon as she completes her present theatrical contract, which expires March 1.

IMPRISONED DOCTOR DEBATES ON CRIME WITH ALLENDER

Harry Krelleberg Tells Chief He Was Created as Warning to Users of Opiates.

CALLS WAGNER A SINNER

Quotes De Quincy to Show Drug Habit Is Incurable and Is Held as Forger.

Dr. Harry Krelleberg, 31 years old, formerly of 6301 Delmar boulevard, a highly educated physician, who studied in Europe, and who was imprisoned for passing numerous worthless checks in St. Louis, debated on crime from a scientific viewpoint with Chief of Detectives Allender as the two sat with reporters in the Chief's office yesterday. He declared that all criminals are not bad men, and that the large majority of them are driven to crime either by the use of drugs or by circumstances.

Referring to the philosophy of Cicero—that every man on earth is created for a specific purpose—Dr. Krelleberg declared his belief that he was created to set a bad example for other men as a warning against the use of opiates.

Chief Allender said that ever since he had held his position in the department, he had made a standing offer of a medal, a suit of clothes or a diamond ring to him who could produce a case in which a man had been actually driven by circumstances to commit crime.

"That's the regular policeman's idea," was Dr. Krelleberg's response.

Calls Wagner a Drug Habituate.

Chief Allender told his prisoner the medal would be his if he could cite a single instance where a man was not actually responsible for his crime.

"What about Richard Wagner, generally regarded as the world's greatest music master?" asked Dr. Krelleberg. "If you have read authentic records of Wagner's life, you must well know that he used opiates and, whenever under their influence, committed unpardonable sins."

"Why didn't he quit?" asked the Chief.

"Because the drug habit is incurable," responded the prisoner.

Dr. Krelleberg then referred to the essays of De Quincey, particularly to his "Confessions of an Opium Eater," in which the author analyzes the opium habit and declares it incurable.

Dr. Krelleberg said he spent a year taking treatment under Prof. Buehlo, a surgeon, in Berlin, hypnotism being the basis of the treatment, but without success. Hypnotism, he said, as an avenue for cure, was only a hope.

Says Offenders Help Others.

Chief Allender asked him why offenders, if driven to an act by drugs or circumstances, did not do good as well as evil—why a forger did not give some of the money, fraudulently obtained, to charity.

Dr. Krelleberg at once cited the case of the forger, Hemenway of Portland, Ore., who forged a check for $250, then gave the money to a widowed mother and her destitute children.

He declared he wrote an article on drugs which appeared in the American Journal of Medicine in 1908; that a percentage of the world's physicians and surgeons were addicted to the use of opiates, which, he said, buoyed up their nerves.

"If it were not for my wife and baby, I would not be alive now," said Dr. Krelleberg.

He did not directly deny that he meant he would commit suicide.

Dr. Krelleberg was graduated from Missouri University, where he first learned the use of drugs while studying medicine and surgery. His brother, he said, was an Assistant District Attorney in New York and his father owner of a theater in Portland, Ore. He afterwards studied medicine in Berlin.

Dr. Krelleberg told a story of going to the Bank of England in London and representing himself to be president of the Oregon bank, in an effort to get money on fraudulent checks, but was arrested and sent to an asylum. He said he was liberated from an asylum in Oregon through the efforts of his relatives.

PRESIDENT WILL TAKE UP PANAMA TOLLS IN MESSAGE

As Soon as He Makes Known Opposition to Exemption Repeal Will Be Undertaken.

"PARTY PLANK MISTAKE"

Adamson Says "Subsidy" Provision Went Into Platform Without Majority's Knowledge.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Within the next 10 days President Wilson may deliver to Congress a message urging an immediate repeal of that section of the Panama Canal bill which exempts American coastwise steamers from payment of tolls. The President is considering the subject.

In the event he decides to ask Congress for immediate action it is probable he will take occasion to discuss the entire problem. He is expected to lay before Congress the circumstances which surrounded the canal question when the first treaty was consummated with Great Britain and to follow the happenings that led up to the tangle.

Just as soon as President Wilson lays his desires before Congress Chairman Adamson of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce will start the legislative machinery that is expected to result in a repeal of the exemption clause.

Adamson Explains Situation.

Judge Adamson today issued this statement outlining his views upon the subject:

"I am not at all troubled about the cry that repealing the exemption violates the Democratic platform. A subsidy is not a cardinal doctrine of the Democratic party. In fact, that exemption is a contradictory interjection into an anti-subsidy plank in the platform that is utterly void. The method of its insertion in the platform is generally understood among well-informed people. Under general idea of approving what a Democratic Congress had done certain members of the House and Senate who were on that committee were permitted to interject that political provision on the idea that they were asserting approval of what Democrats in Congress had done, when, in fact, a majority of more than twenty Democrats in the House voted against that exemption.

"If the people insist on that exemption as a binding provision in the platform it would be a good case to try the referendum. Before honest, unflinching Democrats can be bound by a subsidy provision it ought to be shown that the members of the convention know that it was in there and that the members at least understood and approved it. I have never seen a member of that convention, outside of two or three gentlemen, who knew it was in there before it was promulgated, and I am informed that a large majority of the Platform Committee are opposed to the exemption.

"It is void for two further reasons that is in contravention of a treaty and the divine law as well as the doctrine and tradition of the Democratic party against taking the property of one party or the public and giving it to special interests."

Takes Issue With Bryan.

Secretary Bryan has been quoted as saying that Senator O'Gorman and Representative Boussard of Louisiana were responsible for that section of the Baltimore platform which places the Democratic party on record in favor of exempting American coastwise steamers.

He is quoted further as saying that the section went in without his knowledge. Representative Broussard today told friends that Bryan could not have been quoted correctly because the assertion is not true. He said Bryan was thoroughly familiar with every section of the platform before it was completed and that he was satisfied with the Panama Canal section.

O'HARA WON'T DINE WITH ANTI-SULLIVAN FORCES

Lieutenant-Governor of Illinois Says He Expects to Announce Senatorial Candidacy Later.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Lieutenant-Governor Barratt O'Hara and James C. McShane today formally declined to participate in the anti-Sullivan banquet at Springfield Monday night. The announcement was made by W. C. Niebuhr, in executive charge of the Chicago headquarters of the Wilson-Bryan League.

O'Hara said he expects to announce his senatorial candidacy later and that he would "present an issue which would not fit in with the policy of the league." McShane said there is a mistaken notion in the minds of some that Roger C. Sullivan will get the "so-called 'Irish vote.'"

The anti-Sullivan round-up will be the active beginning of the Democratic fight in Illinois.

Folk Opposed to Sullivan, Tells Why He Won't Attend Meeting.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—In a statement today explaining his declination of an invitation to attend an "anti-Sullivan" meeting in Springfield, Ill., Solicitor Folk of the State Department, said his action was without significance so far as the administration was concerned, but declared that "if I lived in Illinois I would not be for Mr. Sullivan, and, of course [illegible] not for him."

Folk's statement explained he had declined because of the length of time required to fill the engagement.

Woman Frozen in Concordia.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 7.—Mrs. Mabel T. Pfaff, 30 years old, was frozen to death at Concordia. Temporarily out of her mind, the woman sought shelter in the barn of her father's home. Her body was found late today.

MAN BURNED AND HOUSE DAMAGED BY ENGINE EXPLOSION

Watchman, 76, Knocked Down and Scalded; Locomotive Crew Bruised.

The overheated crownsheet of the boiler of a Wabash switch engine blew out, with a terrific report, at Second and Angelica streets at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, letting a stream of boiling water and steam escape and hurling fragments of iron through the sides of nearby houses.

James Callahan, 76 years old, of 4141 Pleasant street, a watchman, who was sitting inside his shanty at the crossing, was knocked down and burned on the face and neck by a splash of hot water. He was treated at the city dispensary and sent home.

John F. Murray of 4137 Greenlea place, the engineer, and his fireman, John Garner of 712 Pope avenue, jumped from the cab and suffered slight bruises and burns. They declined medical treatment and went home.

On the first floor of a two-story frame house at 120 Angelica street were Henry Stelton and his wife and mother, negroes. A piece of iron crashed through the wall and passed over their heads. Another fragment went through the window of a room upstairs, in which George Braxton and his wife, negroes, were seated. None of them were hurt. All the windows in the house were broken.

A big cinder from the firebox broke through a window of W. H. Harvey's saloon at 4100 North Second street, 100 feet away, and hit the bar near where Al Carroll, the bartender, and a customer were standing.

The crownsheet is the plate between the firebox and the boiler. The engine was damaged to the extent of only $250, and was hauled away, with its string of cars, by another locomotive.

Fall on Ice Breaks Thigh Bone.

As Tony Barbravitch, an Austrian, 35 years old, who lives at 1811 South Third street, stepped from the rear door at his home last night, he fell on the ice in the yard, breaking his thigh bone. He was taken to the city hospital.

HOW THIN PEOPLE CAN PUT ON FLESH

A New Discovery

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Omit the flesh cream rub-ons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of those a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay-there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come 40 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson Co., Weipert Drug Co., Raboteau, Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and all other druggists in St. Louis and vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.—ADV.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

Stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp—At Once

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need) apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you value your hair, you should get rid of dandruff at once, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it.—ADV.

"Gets-It" for Corn On Your Piggy-Wiggies!

Quit Puttering With Corns. Use This Sure, New-Plan Corn Cure.

A few drops of "GETS-IT," the biggest seller in the world today of any corn remedy, is enough to spell positive doom to the fiercest corn that ever cemented itself to a toe.

These little toes had "GETS-IT"

These little toes had none.

It's good-bye to Johnnie. You apply "GETS-IT" in two seconds—no fussing with plasters that don't stay put, with salves that make corns "pull" and make the toe beefy and raw, with knives, scissors, razors and diggers that make corns grow faster and that may cause blood poison from corn-cutting and corn-bleeding. "GETS-IT" shrivels up corns, they come right off. That's the new principle. It's just common sense. No more corn-pains. "GETS-IT" is safe, and never hurts the flesh. Get rid of corns and callouses.

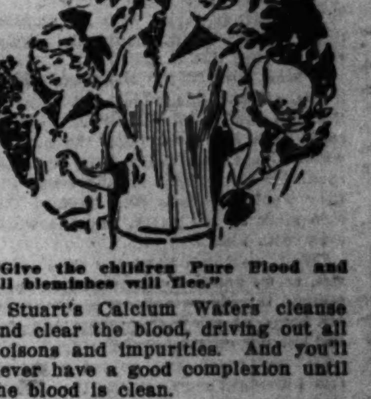
Pimples and Children

All Mothers Should Carefully Watch for Pimples and Use Stuart's Calcium Wafers the Instant They Appear.

The blood of children changes at a certain period of their life. It is then that their beauty is ofttimes made or marred, the health established or shattered.

Every mother knows this important period and should keep the blood of her children as fresh and as pure as possible.



"Give the children Pure Blood and all blemishes will flee."

Stuart's Calcium Wafers cleanse and clear the blood, driving out all poisons and impurities. And you'll never have a good complexion until the blood is clean.

These little wafers may be used with perfect freedom. Science knows no more powerful blood cleanser. They are entirely free from harmful drugs and opiates. Your doctor prescribes these hundreds of times a year.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers go right into your blood. Their purifying, beneficial effect upon the blood is felt throughout the body, not in a year or a month, but in a few days. You feel better all over because your blood, the life-giving fluid, is doing its work properly.

No matter how bad your complexion is, Stuart's Calcium Wafers will work wonders with it. You can get these little wonder-workers at your druggist's for 50 cents a package.—ADV.

RESCUER TELLS OF THRILLS IN SAVING VANDERBILT PARTY

Mrs. Vanderbilt and Duchess of Manchester Cool in Spite of Peril.

THEY REACH NEW YORK

Current Ran Like Millrace as Boats Tried to Reach Yacht.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The big United Fruit Co. liner Almirante today brought to New York the five shipwrecked passengers of the Frederick W. Vanderbilt steam yacht Warrior, which went ashore on the coast of Colombia Jan. 27. The five are Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt and their guests, the Duke and Duchess of Manchester and Lord Falconer, eldest son of the Earl of Kintore. None of the party would see reporters, but Chief Officer Edwards described the rescue by his ship:

"When we got to the scene in response to a wireless the Fruitera was standing by. That ship started her boat first. and I followed in our No. 3 lifeboat with six men and the boatswain. As soon as we got in toward the breakers I found we were due for a livelier time than I had anticipated, for, although the sea was comparatively smooth on the Warrior's port side, the current from the Magdalena River was running about five knots alongside, and we couldn't make any headway against it.

First Boat Is Upset.

"The Fruitera's boat went in first, but miscalculated and went slap into the surf astern of the Warrior. She disappeared under a big comber, and I thought it was all over with her crew, but the current, after having upset them, carried the boat, with the men kicking in the water around it, clear of the breakers again, and we were able to run down and haul them all aboard.

"But by the time we had the last of them in our boat the current and the sea had carried us about two miles leeward of the Warrior, and we had no more chance of getting back against it than he had of swimming up Niagara. Luckily the Fruitera had spotted our plight and she ran down to leeward of us.

"I finally got alongside the Fruitera and put her own men back aboard her again. They were too much used up after their struggle in the water to be of any use to us, and it was the luckiest thing I ever saw that we didn't lose any of them.

"Then, at my request, the captain of the Fruitera took us up about a half mile to windward of the Warrior where we cast off, figuring that from that point we could set ourselves alongside. We miscalculated the first time, and, though my men rowed until their tongues hung out, we were swept past under her stern just near enough to make out the crew and the ladies watching us from her deck.

"The second time, though, the Fruitera towed us up to windward and so close inshore she didn't miss much of going aground herself, and this time we came broadside on the Warrior's port quarter as neat as you please.

Current Ran Like Millrace.

"Once alongside, we were in comparatively smooth water, though the current was running like a millrace.

"I was already for some excitement in transferring the ladies, but both the Duchess and Mrs. Vanderbilt were as calm as a May morning. We got the whole five aboard in a jiffy and had room for the balance of the crew. But they wouldn't come. The captain said he'd stick by the yacht, and the whole crew with him.

"Well, we didn't have any time to argue, so we finally compromised on three seamen to help us pull off and then we got some of the ladies' hand baggage and set out on the return trip.

"It was touch and go for a second and I thought sure as fate the current was going to put us slap into the breakers. But my fellows rowed like fiends and we just skinned through and soon we had the whole party safe and sound on the Almirante's deck."

All the officers of the Almirante join with Edwards in praising the coolness of the entire Vanderbilt party, and particularly of the manner in which the Duchess of Manchester and Mrs. Vanderbilt withstood their trying experiences.

DEFIES FAMILY AND WEDS

Miss Louise Carey, Baltimore Society Girl, Marries Doctor.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Feb. 7.—Defying her family and friends, Miss Louise Carey, a rich society girl, daughter of Francis King Carey of Baltimore, was married this afternoon at Ronceverte, a village in this county, to Dr. Joshua Rosell of Baltimore, after two clergymen at Lewisburg had refused to perform the ceremony.

Miss Shearn, a trained nurse, who has been the companion of Miss Carey in her retirement here, while suffering from nervousness, was the witness.

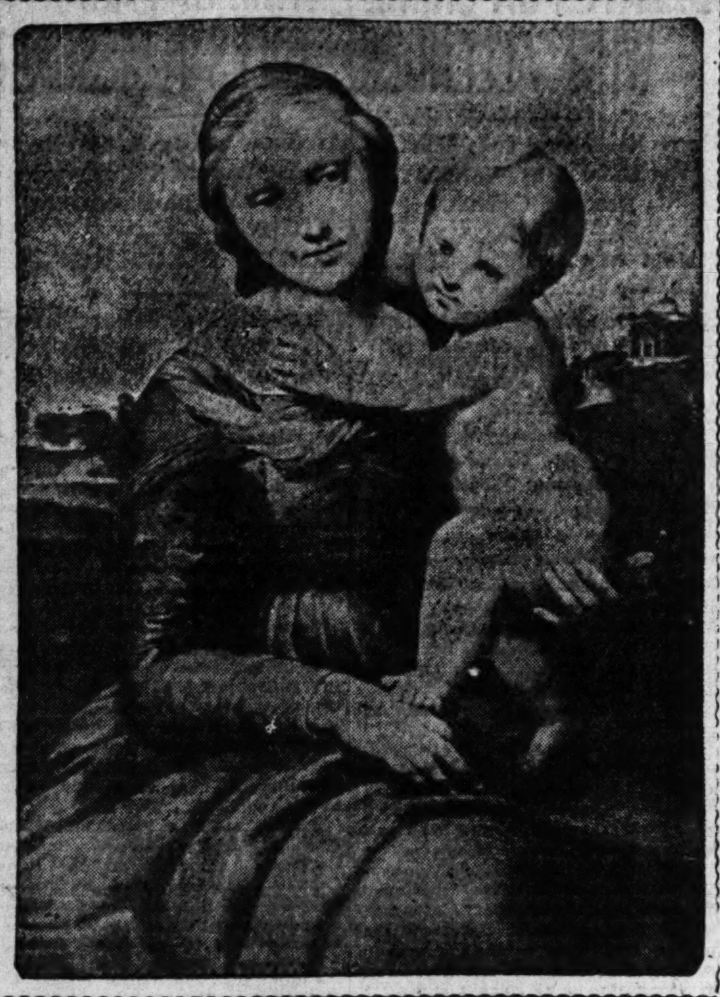
Painting Which Has Been Sold to an American for $700,000



'COWPER MADONNA' BY RAPHAEL, SOLD; BRINGS $700,000

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—P. A. B. Widener of Philadelphia, by paying more than $700,000, has added to his collection of paintings the famous "Cowper Madonna," sometimes known as the "Panshanger Raphael," which was brought to this country by the Duveen brothers last fall. It was purchased in London. The price Widener paid for the painting is the largest ever recorded in this country for a work in oils.

The picture was bought from the Cowper collection, and they gave out the purchase price at that time as more than $500,000. There have been rumors of the sale of the picture to an American at prices ranging up to $1,000,000 for several days. These rumors started with the arrival of the picture by the White Star liner Olympic on Jan. 21, but were denied by the Duveens.

Neither Benjamin nor Joseph Duveen would give the exact figure at which the painting has been sold, but they admitted that $700,000 was very near the figure.

Other paintings which have been bought by art collectors here at high prices are:

"The Mill," by Rembrandt, purchased by P. A. B. Widener for $500,000.

"Portrait of the Duke of Olivares," by Velasquez, purchased by Mrs. Collis P. Huntington for $400,000.

"Portrait of Self, Wife and Child," by Franz Hals, purchased by Duveen Bros. for $400,000.

"St. Roch," by Rubens, purchased by Andrew Carnegie for $300,000.

"Portrait of the Hon. Anne E. Duncombe," by Gainsborough, purchased by H. C. Frick for $400,000.

"A Merchant," by Rembrandt, purchased by H. C. Frick, for $250,000.

The famous little Raphael Madonna acquired by Widener measures only 24 inches by 17 and is one of three painted about 1505 in Florence, during the first flush of Raphael's enthusiasm for new masters and in the first flowering of his most gracious and delicate manner.

CROWD IN COURT APPLAUDS DEATH VERDICT FOR NEGRO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Feb. 7.—Otis Shaver, a negro, was found guilty tonight and sentenced to death by a jury for attacking Mrs. Mary Gamble, an aged white woman, on Jan. 19. Shaver's guilt was agreed upon within two minutes after the jury left the courtroom at 4:40 o'clock this afternoon, but one juror protested against capital punishment until 7:55, when an agreement was reached and a verdict returned.

Judge Foard will pass sentence next week.

A crowd of men waited in the courtroom while the jury deliberated, and when the verdict was read they applauded. When court adjourned the men departed quietly.

Hundreds of grim, determined men had attended the trial for three days.

The jam was so great this afternoon that, after the courtroom was filled, Deputy Sheriffs guarded the doors and prevented entrance of others. Officers had expressed fear of an attempted lynching in case of a verdict without the death penalty.

From six to 12 deputies surrounded Shaver throughout his trial. As he was escorted from the courtroom this afternoon, when the case was given to the jury, a woman arose suddenly and struck him.

Shaver was alleged to have attacked Mrs. Gamble while she was alone in her home after breaking down a door and threatening her with a revolver.

Number of Wholly Illiterate Adults a National Disgrace, House Report Says.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—"The proportion of the wholly illiterate adults among the population of the United States is a national disgrace which can be very quickly eliminated," declared a unanimous report today from the House Education Committee on the Lever bill to investigate illiteracy.

The bill, which carries no appropriation, authorizes the Commission of Education to co-operate with a concerted movement involving field and clerical service with the states, individuals and associations "to obliterate the stain and reproach of illiteracy."

Commissioner Claxton of the Federal Bureau of Education has expressed the belief that illiteracy could be cut to a fraction of 1 per cent, and Representative Towner of Iowa, in submitting the committee report, predicted it would be accomplished with little delay.

The report of the Commissioner shows the number of illiterates in the United States to be 3,184,954 whites 10 years old or more at the census of 1910, exceeding the population of the country in 1800. The distribution ranges from 17 per 1000 people in Iowa to 290 per 1000 in Louisiana. In the South, the report adds, the percentage is highest in the rural districts, and in the North it is highest in the cities. Boston has 24,468 illiterates over 10 years old.

"There are 2,273,603 illiterate males of 21 years and over in the United States," the report pointed out, "or enough to determine any national election at any period of United States history."

France, by quick, concerted action, reduced its number of adult illiterates from 45 in 100 to five in 100, the report adds.

SENATOR LEWIS' COLORFUL ATTIRE IMPRESSES PARIS

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1914, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois impressed the Rue de la Paix more than any American who has appeared since the season of fashion opened. The experts on dress for men have mentioned him with flattery.

He appeared on the boulevards in the afternoon, displaying a huge emerald on his shirt front, with a mauve silk handkerchief protruding from his breast pocket, and the most delicate white-topped patent leather shoes.

Senator Lewis got a card for President Poincare's reception from the American Embassy. He thrilled the functionaries of the Elysee Palace by the enormity of his emerald stud, and the perfection of his color scheme, including socks, tie and handkerchief. He was received royally, as in a dull season he was the most brilliant looking caller on the President.

At the luncheon of the Noonday Club, Senator Lewis was asked to make a speech. He got up and requested that all the doors be closed. The servants were sent out of the room, because he said he had an important secret message to deliver.

Then he clearly suggested that he was in France on a personal mission from President Wilson. He said he had found an unfortunate estrangement between the United States of America and France since President Wilson came into office. This, he said, was partially due to the new tariff. He declared that some changes would be made, but, in the meantime, there was a threat of a lack of harmony in the future dealings of the two nations.

The report of the speech was used as a basis of an alarmist article in several New York and foreign newspapers. The publication caused much amusement among the French and American diplomatic personages here, as they were informed that Senator Lewis was not in Paris on any official mission.

Aeolian Hall—Musical Center of Saint Louis

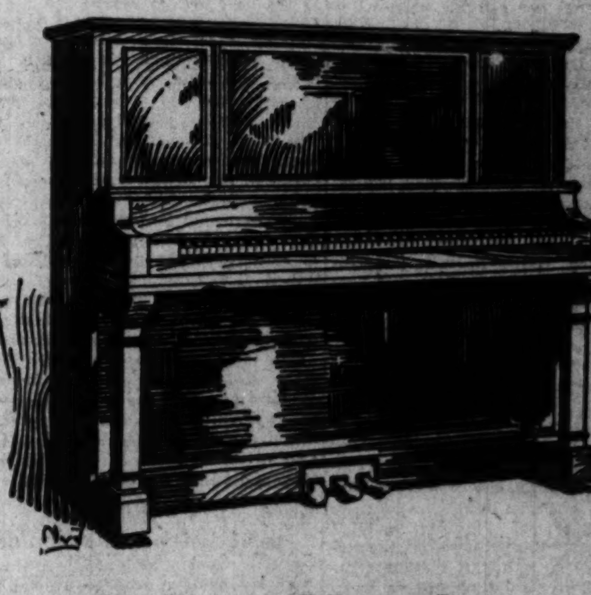
Sale of Used Pianos and Player-Pianos

These instruments are of the same class which have always been offered at Aeolian Hall. They are good, dependable used pianos. It is always better to get a good used piano than a cheap new one. A whole floor of Aeolian Hall has just recently been given over to Steinway pianos exclusively. This has forced us to put these used instruments in Recital Hall and they have been priced very much below anything previously offered here in order that we may get rid of all of them quickly.

This sale is the result of the tremendous popularity of the genuine Pianola. The instruments offered have been taken in as part payment on Pianolas and they have come from the best homes in St. Louis.

Each instrument has been carefully gone over by our experts and is in perfect playing condition. The prices speak for themselves.

It is an event which shrewd buyers will take full advantage of and it will be well to be on hand early.



Smith & Barnes Player-Piano
Worth New, $550
Now $235

This is an example of the sort of instruments offered in this sale. It has been put in perfect playing condition, possesses a sweet tone, responsive action and will give years of good service. The price at which we offer it is but a fraction of what it originally cost. It is a real bargain.

Vose & Sons Upright
Worth New, $345
Now $105

The makers of this instrument are well known. This instrument is in good condition and will give splendid satisfaction. This is a fair example of the sort of value which we are able to offer in used instruments at this time.

Any Piano Below for . $75

We would not have you believe that for $75 you can get an instrument that is almost new. The instruments which we offer at this time for $75 are, however, positively the greatest bargains we have ever known. Do not let the low price deter you from examining them.

C. A. A. PADDLERS DEFEAT M. A. C.; NEW RELAY MARK

Chicago Natators Hang Up Tank Record in Beating Whitaker's Quartet.

How M. A. C. Swimmers Were Beaten by C. A. A.

POINTS were scored only by the winners in the meet between the M. A. C. and C. A. A. swimmers last night. First place counted one point in all events but the relay, which scored two. The polo match didn't figure in the point competition. Summary:

50 yards—Lichter (C. A. A.), first; Heath (M. A. C.), second. Time, 25 4-5s.

100 yards—Hussach (C. A. A.), first; Laubis (M. A. C.), second. Time, 1m.

Plunge for distance—Lichter (C. A. A.), first; Richardson (M. A. C.), second.

200 yards breaststroke—Goessling (M. A. C.), first; Taylor (C. A. A.), second. Time, 2m. 52 1-5s.

220-yard swim—Heath (M. A. C.), first; White (C. A. A.), second. Time, 2m. 42 3-5s.

Relay—C. A. A. (Harless, Buck, Raleigh, Hussack), first; M. A. C. (Heath, Hall, Murphy, Stuerman), second. Time, 1h. 54m. (new M. A. C. tank record.)

Fancy diving—Heyn (C. A. C.), 283 points, first; Bauer (M. A. C.), 254 points, second.

Final score—C. A. A., 6; M. A. C., 2.

The Missouri Athletic Club swimming team met with its first reverse of the season in the dual meet with the Chicago Athletic Association paddlers in the club tank last night. The Chicagoans, coming down with an excellent aquatic reputation, easily defeated the locals, 6 to 2.

The alien natators started out like they would make a clean sweep, as the plunge for distance, 50-yard dash and 100-yard swim went to the visitors before the Cherry Diamond had registered a point. However, the reliable August Goessling won the 200-yard breast-stroke in easy fashion and aroused local hopes. This event was followed by the 220-yard dash, an exciting race, which was won by the St. Louisans. This win gave the M. A. C. team a good chance in the meet, as the score was now 3—3 in favor of Chicago.

Bauer Beaten in Dive.

With the fancy diving event the next o be contested and Elmer Bauer, the Western A. A. U. champion, performing for the locals, it was expected that he score would come to a tie. Both livers did splendid and the final outome was in doubt until the total points vere tallied. The count gave Heyn of he visitors the advantage and consequently all chances of winning the meet vere dismissed by the Missourians. However, there still was a chance to le the score if the relay was annexed, s this event counted two points.

This race was also lost by Whitaker's boys, the visitors breaking the tank record in winning the event. Such speedy swimming as was shown by the Chicago paddlers has not been seen in this city for some time. The combination of Hussach, Harless, Buck and Rawleigh easily outclassed the pick of the local raternity, winning by a close half ength. Incidently, the stars of the respective squads, Heath and Hussach, net in this event, and the latter proved o be the superior.

ichardson Loses Plunge.

Coach Whitaker has but one alibi to ffer for the defeat, namely, the poor ondition of Plunger Richardson. Richardson is also a Western A. A. U. champ n his specialty, and generally flirts with he 75 mark. But he has been ill for everal weeks and has not entered the vater since the Illinois meet, in which e easily outdistanced his opponent.

The water soccer game, which was a ovelty brought down by the visitors, vas won by the Washington avenue eam by the score of 2—1. Laubis and igel were the point-getters for the M. A. C., while Buck tallied for the losers.

Wear and Davis Win From Chicago Racquet Players

Locals Lose in Singles

National Champions Take Four of Five Sets From C. Glidden Osborne and George Thorne—Arthur Wear, Clarence King and Allen West Beaten.

By W. J. O'Connor.

RACQUET representatives of the University Club of Chicago won three matches in singles, but suffered a crushing defeat in doubles when they tackled the national champions, Joe Wear and Dwight Davis, at the Racquet Club yesterday afternoon.

Playing against C. Glidden Osborne and G. A. Thorne of Chicago, Wear and Davis trepsed through an easy victory, taking four of the five sets. The match was the best four in seven.

It was the first competitive appearance of Wear and Davis since they won, in New York two weeks ago, the national title from G. Richmond Fearing and Hugh Scott of Boston. The local champions wore their crown becomingly and, although meeting in the Chicago pair a team that only recently gave Payne Whitney and Monte Waterbury of New York a scare, they won going away. The scores were 15—11, 15—6, 15—10, 3—15 and 15—12.

Considerable money changed hands on the match, the odds being 10—6 on the local champions.

Three Defeats in Singles.

Local players could do little in the singles which preceded the joust in doubles. Allen T. West of St. Louis lost in straight sets, 15—4, 15—10 and 15—3, to Howard Lynn in the opening match, while Arthur Y. Wear yielded to Charles Pike of Chicago, 15—6, 15—10 and 15—5. In the last clash at singles, Clarence King gave Homer Dixon of the alien team a run, but finally lost, 15—12, 15—7, 10—15 and 15—8.

Interest centered chiefly in the appearance of the national champions. In Thorne and Osborne they had worthy rivals, Thorne being a seasoned performer, while Osborne, although a novice, is probably the most promising beginner in the game today. Osborne is a big man—he played a guard at Harvard—with powerful shoulders, arms and wrist. His volleys are terrific and he moves about with much agility for a man of his size.

Osborne's Volleys Win.

Early in the match Wear and Davis found it wise to avoid Mr. Osborne. In the first set, the champions were leading, 12—2, before Osborne got going. He then broke up Wear's deceptive serve by volleying before the ball took the side wall. His returns had such speed that he checked the locals while he and his partner ran up 11 points, but eventually lost, 15—11.

Defective service by Thorne made the second set easy for the locals, Thorne had three service faults in this set and as points can be scored only on the serve, this proved costly. This set was won, 15—6, by the champions, Wear playing a particularly brilliant game.

Wear continued his sensational shooting in the third set and with four service aces won rather handily, 15—10. Joe focused the play on Thorne, who found difficulty gauging the caroms in the right court.

Osborn broke loose in the fourth set and pounded out a rather hollow victory, 15—3. It was all Osborne in this set and there was a ripple of discontent in the gallery, populated entirely by local folks. Davis seemed to tire, but as was proved later, he probably only was resting up.

However, Osborne, now thoroughly acquainted with the court, started the fifth and what proved the decisive set, as though he meant to win. Chiefly through his volleying, the locals were trailing love-7 at one stage of the set. Then Davis picked up 2 points after Wear had a service fault, while on his next serve Wear settled down and acquired 5 points on his hand. That squared the count and thereafter the champions were always in command of the situation. They won this set, 15—12.

Another Match Monday.

It was the consensus of opinion that in Osborne Chicago has a coming champion. He hits hard with a follow through, making his game a decidedly dangerous one to combat. However, he's not the fleet actor that Joe Wear is, and the local star's ability to cover court probably makes him a more valuable man now than Osborne ever will be. Wear is here, there and yon. He plays all the time to win, and has a troublesome service; but most of all, he has speed, which is essential. He was the brightest spot in the whole day's play.

The score, counting 1 point for singles and 2 for doubles, now is 3—2 in favor of Chicago. A match in singles between Thorne and Davis will be played Monday. The best the local club can get is a draw.

$35 Worth of Racquets Smashed in One Match

RACQUETS isn't a game for a poor man's son. The English pastime, so sparingly played, dips deeply into one's purse, as the price of a racquet is $5, while the balls sell for 7 cents each. In the match between Wear and Davis and Osborne and Thorne yesterday afternoon, three racquets were smashed and four others were so badly "bent" that they had to be replaced. That represented an outlay of $35 for "clubs" alone.

Approximately 50 balls were used, each costing 7 cents. The supply of balls was almost unlimited, as Professional Frank Lafforgue toted a gunny sack full into the balcony before the match began. The ball is about the size of a regulation handball.

Peanuts Schieberl Gets Chance to Show His Class Against Kayo Mars

"PEANUTS" SCHIEBERL, the Rock Island featherweight, seems to be climbing in the estimation of Cincinnati writers, one of whom describes him as being the "next best featherweight to Kilbane and Mars." On his showing here Schieberl will have to make up a world of ground to be entitled to that honor.

Schieberl is matched to fight Knockout Mars at Cincinnati, Monday. That should settle the matter conclusively, as Mars has been taking care of all his opponents with the exception of Kilbane.

Manuel Vieira, another "Mex" who has broken into the game, is in search of a bout before any local club. Vieira is unknown here, but dispatches have been giving him favorable mention of late. He owns victories over Johnny Creely at Cincinnati and Indianapolis, and one over Schieberl at Milwaukee.

Union Bars Fred Welsh.

The Boxers' Union is indignant at Freddie Welsh now. They insist on putting him out of the Order of Legitimate 133-pounders. Welsh has earned the displeasure of the organization by declining to weigh under 135 pounds at 3 p. m. for any short fights. He is making his own terms because he is a drawing card, just as Ritchie, Kilbane and every other good boxer able to get away with it has done before him.

O. RELLER, LOCAL BOY, WINS DASH IN BOSTON MEET

Cornell Star Shows Heels to Alvah Meyer in 40-Yard Invitation Event.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—Oliver Reller of St. Louis, running in the colors of Cornell University, tonight easily won the 40-yard dash in the annual games of the Boston A. A., defeating Alvah Meyer of the Irish-American A. C. of New York. His time was 3 3-5s.

Winning the Hunter mile race, the feature event, Abel Kiviat tonight secured for his club, the Irish-American A. C. of New York, permanent possession of the trophy, which has been the object of competition for four years. The little New Yorker ran a heady race and won after he had allowed Oscar F. Hedlund of the Boston Athletic Association, the only other man who owned a leg on the cup, to lead for 12 laps. Then Kiviat forged to the front and finished strong. His time was 4m. 28s.

Kolehmainen Drops Out.

Hannes Kolehmainen, the famous clubmate of Kiviat, was forced to quit the three-mile run which William J. Kremer of Yonkers, N. Y., won in 14 minutes 43 2-5 seconds, establishing a new record for the track. Kolehmainen was in distress when he dropped out after two and one-fourth miles.

A special match race at 390 yards between Donald F. Lippincott of the University of Pennsylvania and Thomas Halpin of Boston A. A. lost interest after Lippincott fell on the first lap. Halpin won without great effort in 57 seconds.

More than 400 athletes were entered for the games. Every large college in the East except Princeton was represented, and leading athletic clubs sent their stars. Champions abounded, the titleholders including those with honors gained in Olympic, national, intercollegiate, sectional and interscholastic competition. Summary:

40-yards dash: Won by A. O. Reller, Cornell; second, A. T. Meyer, Irish-American A. C.; third, B. F. Bowzer, Syracuse. Time, 4 3-5s.

Relay race (1560 yards). Massachusetts Institute of Technology defeated Dartmouth. Time, 3m. 8 4-5s.

Three-mile run: Won by W. J. Kramer, Long Island A. C.; second, Harry J. Smith, Bronx Church House; third, C. Horne, Haverhill. Time, 14m. 43 2-5s (a new track record).

16-pound shot put, handicap: Won by L. A. Whitney, Dartmouth (8 inches), 47 feet ¼ inch; second, J. C. Lawlor, Irish-American A. C. of Boston (3 inches), 47 feet; third, W. C. Maxfield, unattached (8 feet 10 inches), 45 feet 5¼ inches.

Hunter mile: Won by Abel R. Kiviat, Irish-American A. C. of New York; second, Oscar F. Hedlund, Boston A. C.; third, W. F. Gordon, Yonkers, N. Y. Time, 4m. 28s.

One-mile relay—Harvard (Tower, Biddle, Capper, Barron) defeated Cornell (Leads, Irish, Caldwell, Starr). Time, 3m. 6 1-5s. (A new world's indoor record, displacing time of Boston A. A team—Burns, Gram, Merrihew, Halpin—made last year.)

Special 390-yard match race—Thomas J. Halpin, Boston A. A., defeated Donald F. Lippincott, University of Pennsylvania. Time, 57s.

Running high jump (handicap)—Won by Harry Barwise, Boston A. A. (scratch), 6 ft. 2 in.; second, H. Morrison, Cornell, (2½ ft.), 6 ft. 1½ in.; third, J. O. Johnstone, Harvard (scratch), 6 ft. 1 in.

1000-yard run (handicap), won by P. L. McGrath, Boston A. A. (30 yards); second, J. Dumphry, Holy Cross (26 yards), third, M. A. Kanaly, unattached (50 yards). Time 2m. 21 1-5s.

45-yard hurdles, won by P. L. Brady, Columbia; second, W. H. Meanix, Boston A. A.; third, E. Pritchard, Irish-American A. C., New York. Time, 6:15s.

Three standing jumps, handicap, won by Leo Goehring, Mohawk A. C. (six inches), 31 feet 6½ inches; second, Ben Adams, New York A. C. (scratch), 33 feet 8½ inches; third, E. L. Leames, Bronx House (7 inches), 33 feet 4 inches.

600 yards run, handicap, won by V. M. Wilkies, Yale (six yards); second, F. Lagay, Dartmouth (10 yards); third J. Halfenstein, Brookline (19 yards). Time 1m. 16-45s.

Relay Races.

Holy Cross defeated Georgetown. Time, 3m 9 3-5s.

Williams defeated Wesleyan. Time, 3m. 14 1-5s.

Brown defeated Amherst. Time, 3m. 12 2-5s.

University of Pennsylvania vs. Dartmouth (3120 yards). Won by Dartmouth (Riley, Tucker, Granger, Marceau); Pennsylvania (Kelly, Bacon, Cross, Meredith). Time, 7m. 10 2-5s.

Relay race (3120 yards). Boston A. A. (Mahoney, Greene, Hedlund, Holmes), defeated Irish-American A. C. New York (Hirschen, Kelly, Riley, Sheppard). Time, 7m. 10 2-5s.

Relay race, (3120 yards) Harvard (Stone, Abbott, Bingham, Capper) defeated Yale (Scotten, Bayne, Brown, Smith). Time, 7m. 8 1-5s. (A new dual relay record).

What is a magnate?

A magnate is one who or that which attracts money.

What is an umpire?

An umpire is whatever the fans choose to call him.

What is a rooter?

A rooter is one who goes to the game to see the home team win?

What does the rooter do, if the home team doesn't win?

Ask the umpire.

What is a rain check?

A rain check is a sort of talisman, attached to the admission ticket. If it clouds up you hold the rain check between the thumb and forefinger and repeat the words: "Rain, rain, go away; don't butt in and spoil the play."

What does the rooter do if the rain check doesn't check the rain?

He hurls epithets at the umpire.

Does the umpire like this?

Oh, yes. His contract specifically states that 25 per cent of his salary is for umpiring and 75 per cent for receiving epithets.

What is a score card?

A score card is a piece of pasteboard containing the names of the players and where they will play if they don't change their minds.

What is the score card issued for?

Five cents.

Hawaiian Featherweight May Appear Here in Bout With Local 122-Pounder

Joe Burke, the St. Louis heavyweight, who is back in the city after a campaign in Great Britain and Australia, has wired for a protege of his, Manuel Vieira, a featherweight boxer, now in Oakland, Cal., to join him in St. Louis, where he expects to arrange a suitable bout or two.

Vieira is hailed as the Pacific Coast featherweight champion in coast papers and appears to be a promising 122-pound boy. However, Vieira is not a Mexican, but a Portuguese, born in Lapochoe, Hawaii. He is nearly 21 years of age and can do the ringside feather limit.

Vieira began fighting in 1910. Up to 1913 Vieira had lost eight times in 54 battles. Since then Vieira took a flyer East, meeting and defeating Johnny Creeley, "Peanuts" Schieberl and other good ones, according to Burke.

FRED MURPHY, YALE '10, TO COACH NORTHWESTERN

CHICAGO. Feb. 7.—Fred J. Murphy, Yale 1910, today was appointed football coach at Northwestern University, to succeed Denis Grady. Murphy lives in New York City, and has assisted for several years in coaching at Yale. He was field coach in 1911, and has been advisory coach since that time. He will report at Northwestern March 19. His contract is for three years.

Murphy in 1905 played left halfback at Andover. For three years he played right halfback at Yale. He was also a member of the Yale basket-ball and baseball teams. He was captain of the Yale baseball team in 1909, and won the intercollegiate championship for his team.

GOULD AND HUHN LOSE COURT TENNIS DOUBLES

PHILADELPHIA. Feb. 7.—Jay Gould of New York and W. H. T. Huhn, the national court tennis doubles champions, were defeated here today, in a special match with Joshua Crane and G. R. Fearing of Boston by three sets to one. The scores were 6—5, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3. Gould and Huhn recently defeated Crane and Fearing in Boston.

CAMBRIDGE SOCCER MEN DEFEAT OXFORD ELEVEN

LONDON. Feb. 7.—The Cambridge University eleven beat the Oxford team by two goals to one in the annual Intervarsity Association football match played today at Queen's Club.

CENTRAL QUINTET WHIPS M'KINLEY AND ASSUMES LEAD

Red and Black Team Breaks Tie for First Place by Score of 26—22.

Interscholastic basket ball teams inaugurated the third and last round of play of the current season at Louisiana Hall last night, when the Central five defeated McKinley in the feature game of the evening, 26—22, and assumed the lead in the league race. The contestants in the other game, Soldan and Yeatman, were also on an even basis, the fives fighting to get out of the cellar position. The West Enders proved to be the stronger and won, 24 to 21.

Although the South Siders had previously won two contests from Coach Cullen's squad, the red and black players came back with a vengeance. The game started with a rush and before three minutes were up McKinley had a three-point lead, gained through the free throwing of French. The Central forwards soon hit their stride and tied up matters. A period of five minutes was then taken up in defensive work by both sides, neither team scoring. However, when the Central artillery got going, a half dozen points were annexed by that team. The score at the end of the first half was 11 to 10. The scoring of the quintets came through entirely different mediums, McKinley relying on fouls, while Central benefited by field goals.

French Is Subdued.

The second half opened with a Central rush, that team increasing its lead by several points. Martens shone in the scoring department by making -12 tallies. Towards the end of the period the Crimson squad took a brace, but were unable to overcome the lead which their opponents had rolled up. Nies, Central guard, held French, the scoring sensation of the league, to a single field goal, thus shattering a record.

The opening contest between Yeatman and Soldan was none the less interesting, inasmuch as the game was closely contested throughout. Yeatman, as usual, started like a house afire, and annexed the lead. Shanley, the big center, did the most of the scoring, netting four goals in the opening half. Krause also showed up well in this period, for the North Enders. The Soldan players who held the main role were Ruel and Smedley. The score at the end of the first half was 16 to 11, in favor of Yeatman. Soldan, after a short confab, entered the court, and immediately cut down the lead.

DIXIE OUTLAWS WOULD JOIN HANDS WITH FEDS

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 7.—William C. Bacon, president of the newly formed Dixie Baseball League, said today that if the Southern League did not recognize the Dixie League, arrangements had been made to join hands with the Federal League, widening the latter's scope.

"We are going to play ball," said President Bacon. "It may be impossible for us to do it in 1914, but we will be there in 1915 with clubs in all the principal Southern cities and an affiliation with the Federal League."

President Kavanaugh of the Southern League said today he would not recognize the Dixie League except as an outlaw organization.

Peters Wins Skating Title.

Terrill Peters last night defeated a field of five in the final heat of the Mississippi Valley skating championships at the San Souci rink, covering a mile in 3m. 11 2-5s. H. Mobney was second and Ray O'Neill third. Terrill Peters, with Rodney Peters, will represent St. Louis in international speed contests at Detroit, March 10.

Fed Circuit May Suffer Invasion by Minor League

Ban Johnson Plans to Put Toledo Team Where It Will Harass Outlaws.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Establishment of a third organized baseball club in Chicago will be a question before the joint meeting of the National and American Leagues in New York, Feb. 12, it was made known today.

It was said that Charles Weeghman, backer of the Chicago Federals, would buy the St. Paul Association club, if its franchise could be transferred to Chicago. These reports persisted, in spite of denials by both Weeghman and James A. Gilmore, president of the Federals.

Ban Johnson is said to be in favor of bringing the St. Pauls here, while Murphy is against it, it is said. According to the reports Johnson also wants to move the Toledo Association club to a city where it will be in competition with a Federal club.

While Gilmore insisted today that there was no question of Toronto remaining in the Federal League other Federal League officials here for the meeting today persisted in favoring the dropping of the Canadian city. Weeghman is one of these and it is understod that the question will be voted on today.

Piker Quint Is Outclassed by Kansas U. 41-11

Edmunds' Men Able to Score Only Three Points in First Half of Match.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Feb. 7.—Washington University was completely outclassed in a one-sided basket ball game with Kansas here tonight. The score was 41—11 in the Jayhawkers' favor, this being their second conquest.

Only three points were scored by the St. Louis men in the first half, when French threw a basket and Berryhill scored one free throw out of the four he tried.

During the second half the visitors played a more consistent game and scored eight points. The Washington men were at a disadvantage in the height and weight of their opponents and this fact made a great difference in the final result. Time after time their long throws were intercepted by the lengthy Jayhawkers and the ball sent back to the Kansas goal.

Close guarding by Greenlees and Dunmire the Kansas guards, kept the Washington men from scoring many times and they were forced to try wild throws from the center of the court.

Barry played a star game for the St. Louis five and kept the wonderful Van der Vries from accumulating his customary number of points. In the second half Berryhill made two difficult successful throws for baskets. Modisette and French each scored one in the latter part of the half. The game was exceptionally free from fouls, less than 15 being made by both teams during the game.

Wood Wins From Queal.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—A. E. Wood of Toronto, holder of the 15-mile running record, won the 12-mile international professional indoor race at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory today in 1h. 4m. 25 1-5s. James Fitzgerald of Australia finished second. W. N. Queal of Alexandria Bay, N. Y., led Crooks of Fall River, Mass., and George H. Hooley of Newark, N. J., finished as named.

Penn State Grapplers Beat Middies.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 7.—Pennsylvania State won a wrestling match from the Naval Academy this afternoon by 13 points to 5, its grapplers securing two clean falls and three decisions on form and aggressiveness. The Midshipmen won a fall and a decision, falls scoring three points and decisions two. Lam of State dismayed the navy contingent by throwing Howe, the big football guard, in 2m. 20s., the shortest bout of the match.

Gunboat Smith Wants $15,000.

WEEGHMAN FAILS TO OUST TORONTO FROM FED CIRCUIT

Canadian City Upheld by President Gilmore After Bitter Fight in Chicago.

Eddie Lennox Signed by St. Louis Federals

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.

EDDIE LENNOX, once a member of the Brooklyn club where he played third base and later with Louisville, today was signed to a Federal League contract. He will play with the St. Louis club, it was announced here, having opened negotiations with Mordecai Brown some time ago.

Another player whose signed contract soon will be in the hands of Mordecai Brown is Pitcher Cy Marshall of the Philadelphia National League team. Marshall is on his way to Chicago to sign up. He has accepted terms.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—The Federal League survived another crisis today. A protracted legislative meeting of its magnates resulted, after a sharp discussion, in the announcement that Toronto would retain its franchise despite the efforts of a considerable faction, led, it was reported, by Charles Weeghman, the Chicago backer, to substitute Cleveland for the Canadian city.

The League will be about evenly divided on the question of the transfer, but President Gilmore, who returned from Toronto this morning, gave a report unexpectedly optimistic, and swung the rest of the conferees finally to his side.

Bramley Presents Option.

Cleveland's request for the franchise was presented by Fred Bramley, who showed an option on what was considered a desirable site. But the plea of Gilmore and the evidence shown by Barney Hepburn, the Toronto promoter, convinced the magnates that a change was not desirable.

It was said the magnates of the League at one time approached bitterness in their discussion, but finally it was agreed to submit to the will of the majority. Routine business, the magnates reported, kept the meeting in session late tonight.

In addition to the Chicago representatives and President Gilmore, there were Otto Stifel, Edward Steininger and Walter Frisch, St. Louis; C. C. Madison and A. F. Gordon, Kansas City; E. E. Gates, Indianapolis; W. E. Kerr, Pittsburg, and Ned Hanlon, Baltimore.

Mr. Murphy Says, Says He—

President Murphy of the Chicago Nationals was authority today for the statement that the installation of American Association teams in Chicago and Cleveland would be one of the steps taken by organized baseball in its war against the Federal League. This was scouted by Weeghman, who was supposed—as was the case in a previous story of the same sort—to have been induced to take over the St. Paul franchise in exchange for withdrawing from the Federals. The American League was said to be back of this measure, while Murphy declared positively he would not permit it.

Further information regarding the "war" came from other sources and tended to confirm an earlier story that the "organized" leagues would refrain from lawsuits.

Yankees to Mobilize Here.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Announcement of the spring training plans of the Yankees was made today. The advance guard will leave Feb. 12, when Coach Daily and Pitchers Keating and McHale will leave for St. Louis, where they will be joined by Caldwell, Ross, Criss and Schulz, all pitchers. The party will proceed to Hot Springs, Ark. There they will be joined by Catcher Reynolds and two weeks will be devoted to baths and road work. Manager Frank Chance will leave Los Angeles Feb. 26, going direct to the training camp at Houston, Tex.

RULES COMMITTEE PUTS 10-YARD FINE ON GROUNDED PASS

"PRO" COACH IS BENCHED

One of 13 Changes in Playing Code Bars Mentor From Side Lines During Game.

By Herbert Reed,
The Post-Dispatch Eastern Football Expert.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—In the face of any quantity of radical recommendations from both East and West, the Football Rules Committee, after a protracted session at the Martinique this afternoon, left the game about as it was last year.

There were 13 changes made that have a fairly important bearing on the rules, the most important of which was the imposition of a 10-yard penalty on a deliberately ground forward pass. This play was used last year by Notre Dame and the Army, and was employed three years ago by some of the smaller Eastern elevens, but escaped general notice at the time.

Next in importance was the change in the rules covering the activities of the coach in the course of the game. Under the revised rule he will not be allowed to walk up and down the side line, although he is still permitted to sit on the bench with the substitutes, whence he can direct the play, perhaps, quite as well as he could from a roving position.

There are many coaches who would prefer to watch the progress of the game from an elevated position.

E. K. Hall, chairman of the committee, seemed to consider the rule barring the coaches from pacing the side line as of prime importance, for he announced the changes in what he considered the order of their value, and this one was the first given out.

Ban on "Wheel Shift."

Another important change in the rules was that aimed at what has come to be known as the Harvard "wheel shift," in which the players cross in front of the ball and through the neutral zone.

This move has been barred. The chief complaint against the maneuver came from the South, where the play has been highly developed. This particular shift has led to a great deal of rough work, not all of which could be detected by the officials.

As a direct result of the safety made by O'Brien of Harvard in the Harvard-Yale game, the rule was changed so that hereafter when the ball, after a free kick, strikes the goal post and bounds back into the field of play, it shall go as a touchback. O'Brien's play was made from a kick-off, but the rule applies to any free kick.

Walter Camp's suggestion that the field judge be returned to the game resulted in a compromise. Hereafter there will be a field judge when the contending teams want such an official. He will have no specific duties and no authority, but will be an assistant to the referee and the umpire, and will work entirely under their direction. He will cover the field under the direction of his superiors—a sort of roving commission.

Committee Is Appointed.

A committee of three officials was appointed to work with the secretary. They are W. S. Langford of Trinity, W. N. Morice of Pennsylvania and N. A. Tuft of Brown. The central board of officials will consist of Dr. J. A. Babbitt of Haverford, chairman; Walter Camp of Yale, C. W. Savage of Oberlin, Parke H. Davis of Princeton, E. K. Hall of Dartmouth, Percy D. Haughton of Harvard, Harris G. Cope of Sewanee and Alonzo A. Stagg of Chicago.

Full discretion has been given to the official to penalize roughing the fullback. It is for him to determine whether the offending player has deliberately left his feet or whether the impetus gathered from his charge has carried him unintentionally into the fullback.

The kickout after a touchback was eliminated, and hereafter the touchback will be followed by a scrimmage.

The 10-yard penalty of the intentionally grounded forward pass will be measured from the spot where the ball was put in play.

When a player is out of bounds when the ball is snapped, his team, if in possession of the ball, will be penalized five yards.

The rule governing the choice of goal and kick-off was cleared up. Henceforth the team losing the toss when the winner takes the goal will be compelled to kick off.

Numbering Players Fail.

Considerable pressure was brought to bear on the committee to recommend numbering the players. The committee, however, decided that it would be well to wait another year before taking action. Some of the Western elevens are planning to number the backs and ends, principally for the benefit of the officials. Among the teams that have promised to make a trial of the number system are Dartmouth, Carlisle, Lehigh, Chicago, Cornell, Brown and Pennsylvania.

Nothing the committee did will materially affect the style of play, and the coaches in all sections of the country will be able to build up their game another year without material alterations. The committee believed that the rules were worth at least another year's trial without radical change.

George Foster Sanford sought to bring about an open meeting, and also made radical suggestions which would have put the game back to the early nineties. He was unsuccessful, but cheerful. The suggestion was made that the value of the goal from the field be reduced, but this, too, failed of adoption.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Now Then, Mr. Man, Make Good!

PHYSICAL tests as between man and woman have, in the past, been considered largely in the light of a joke. Man has occasionally been polite enough to get himself beaten at lawn tennis, golf and other sports; but in general the supposition is that woman's chance in competition with man is successful only in proportion to her opponent's gallantry.

This is NOT true of one sport, however. That is swimming. And it is not improbable, by any means, that A WOMAN WILL BE VICTOR IN THE MOST REMARKABLE ENDURANCE MATCH EVER MADE—to wit, "a finish swimming contest."

A Queer Match.

NEXT June, when the sea water less resembles a freezing mixture, Miss Rose Pitonof, a Boston girl, will swim against Harry Elionsky of New York, from Charleston Bridge to Boston Light, if both arrive there, they will start back for the bridge; thence, if both are still of sea-going efficiency, they'll hike back to the light. THIS WILL CONTINUE UNTIL ONE OR THE OTHER QUITS, EXHAUSTED!

The Supreme Test of Woman.

THIS event will call for more fortitude than a three-hour wrestling match, a 20-round prize fight or any other form of punishing sport known to modern times. The swim to Boston Light is one of the most difficult of American natatorial feats. Miss Pitonof accomplished it when she was 16 years old. She is known as a marvel of endurance and swimming ability.

Elionsky is equally well fitted for upholding the masculine end of this unique physical test. Manacled hand and foot, and harnessed to a boat containing seven passengers, he towed the boat and load from the Battery to Sandy Hook.

However, the test will prove little as indicating the relative physical abilities of the sexes. IT IS SIMPLY A STRUGGLE OF ABNORMALLY DEVELOPED INDIVIDUALS.

There, Now, Mr. Federal!

IF there is anything in the opinion of E. J. Hanlon, vice-president of the Western League, the Federal League is NOT going to be a major organization.

"It isn't the big leagues that should worry about the Feds," recites Mr. Hanlon, "it's the minors. The majors can spare a few bench-warmers and never miss them; but the loss of three or four players from a 'bush' club hurts almost fatally."

The inference plainly is that the Federals are recruiting largely from the third-rate leagues.

Well, why not? THAT'S WHERE THE MAJOR LEAGUERS ALL COME FROM.

The Case of George Sutton.

WHEN one recalls that George Sutton twice beat Willie Hoppe (once with an average of 100) the billiard follower is inclined to inquire why Sutton has only been able to annex one championship match from his rival in six tries.

The figures explain why Sutton is so inconsistent that he cannot rely on his own game.

Here are the championship match games played by Hoppe and Sutton, including that of Tuesday:

Dec. 18, 1906—George Sutton defeated W. F. Hoppe, 500 to 258, at Grand Central Palace, New York, averaging 26.32, with high run of 107.

March 27, 1908—W. F. Hoppe defeated G. Sutton, 500 to 272, at Madison Square, New York, averaging 20.83, with high run of 97.

Nov. 28, 1911—W. F. Hoppe defeated George Sutton, 500 to 266, at Madison Square, New York, averaging 22 16-22, with high run of 80. Sutton averaged 12 2-24.

Feb. 7, 1912—W. F. Hoppe defeated G. Sutton at Hotel Astor, 500 to 280, averaging 29 1-17, with high run of 96. Sutton averaged 16 8-17.

Feb. 5, 1913—W. F. Hoppe defeated George Sutton, 500 to 301, at Hotel Astor, New York, averaging 22 16-22, with high run of 117. Sutton averaged 14 7-21, with high run of 90.

Feb. 3, 1914—W. F. Hoppe defeated George Sutton, at New York, 500 to 226, 18.2 balk-line, averaging 29 7-17, with a high run of 96. Sutton averaged 13 5-17, high run 123.

Sutton Makes 100 Average.

IN addition, the men have played twice in championship tournament games, as before mentioned, Sutton winning in 1906 with an average of 100, and Hoppe winning once with an average of 29 7-17 (Sutton's average then was 8 12-17).

Such extremes show the inconsistent character of the big man's play; nor does his recent alibi of being "ill" or "too fat" account for his extremes of performance.

From an average of 100 to one of 8 12-17 is too big a gap to be bridged by excuses.

Hoppe Is Reliable.

THE averages of the men for match play, championship games, shows not only Hoppe's consistency but his true value. Under pressure he has fallen below 20 but once and has not surpassed 30—a variation which may be accounted for by ordinary "breaks" in luck and physical condition.

For the six matches with Sutton, Hoppe owns an average of over 23, while Sutton's performances averaged but 15.3—A MARGIN WHICH ACTUALLY REPRESENTS THE TOURNAMENT EFFICIENCY OF THE MEN.

Before Sutton can ever hold Hoppe safe, for any considerable number of points, say 1500, his temperament will have to change. A wonderful performer in private, he can not hold his execution in a public match.

Events for All Ages at Sunday School Meeting

Relay Races Are Scheduled for Every Division on the Program.

W. Cummings, chairman of the Athletic Committee of Sunday School Athletics, scheduled for March 7, at the Coliseum, has mapped out the events and the age limit for each of the four divisions into which the meet will be divided in order to give every boy an equal chance. Boys will compete against those of their own age and weight. The four divisions, with the events for each, are as follows:

(a) Juniors—For boys from 12 to 14 years, 6 months. Events—50-yard dash and a shuttle relay, six boys to run in the relay.

(b) Junior B.—For boys from 14 years 6 months, to 16 years 6 months. Events—50-yard dash, standing broad jump, 220-yard dash, relay race (four boys to a team, each one to run 110 yards).

(c) Intermediate—For boys from 16 years 6 months, to 18 years 6 months. Events—Running high jump, 50-yard dash, 600-yard run and relay race (four men on a team and each to run 220 yards).

(d) Seniors—Over 18 years 6 months. Events—Running high jump, 50-yard dash, 12-pound shotput and 1000 yards run. (This event will be open to intermediates), a relay race, 4 men to run.

Special Events Planned.

Three special events will be run off, a bicycle relay for boys in divisions A and B, each boy to ride one lap, get off his wheel and give to the next boy, three boys to a team.

A 50-yard dash for superintendents of schools and a fat men's race for men weighing over 175 pounds. In order to help the churches that have no gymnasiums in which to train their boys, Physical Director McLaughlin extends an invitation to all such churches to bring their team to the Central Y. M. C. A. on Saturday afternoon, between 1 and 3 o'clock for tryouts. Application must be made in advance.

On Saturday afternoon, Feb. 28, an elimination meet for divisions A, B and C will be held in the Coliseum.

Entry blanks and registration cards can be secured from either A. A. McLaughlin, Central Y. M. C. A., or R. R. Wadell, Church Federation Office, New Bank of Commerce Building.

Princeton Goes In for Soccer.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 7.—The Princeton authorities today accepted the invitation of the Intercollegiate Soccer League to become a member of that organization and the executive committee voted an appropriation with which to meet expenses.

Practice will commence within a fortnight in order to get the men in condition for the opening game, which will be in the early part of March.

Ritchie Going to Australia.

Snowy Baker, the Australian promoter, has reached an agreement with Champion Willie Ritchie in regard to a trip to Australia.

In the event of winning from Tommy Murphy in San Francisco in April, Ritchie has promised to make the trip to Sydney and engage in several bouts at Baker's Rushcutter's Bay Stadium for a guarantee of $50,000.

"We have not entered into a contract but have had an understanding," said Baker. "Ritchie will probably reach Sydney next June, and I expect to have three opponents ready for him. As far as I can judge at present he will be called upon to meet Young Saylor, the Indianapolis lightweight, and Herb McCoy, who, since Mehagan's defeat, ranks as the best lightweight we have. Possibly I will import another lightweight from this country, who will be Ritchie's third opponent. I intend to approach Joe Azevedo, the Oakland boxer, on the subject, but at that I may select some boy from one of the Eastern cities."

Baker will wait to see how the Petroskey-Clabby fight at Los Angeles comes out, and if Clabby wins will try to secure the Indianian for a series of bouts in Australia. Baker has in view a Clabby-Eddie McGoorty match for the world's middleweight championship.

Columbia Defeats Cornell Hockey Team.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Columbia's good defense and the fast work of Todd, the blue and white center, won for the New Yorkers in today's hockey game with Cornell. The score was 2 to 0. The game was played on a rink covered with two inches of slush. After 11 minutes of play, Center Todd of the Columbia team worked through the Cornell defense and shot the puck past Robbins for a goal. Seven minutes later Todd duplicated this performance. After 25 minutes of shoveling off the slush, the game was resumed.

A. A. U.'S BOXING RULES IGNORED IN AMATEUR BATTLES

Illegal Number of Rounds and 3-Minute Fourth Rounds Are Tolerated.

MEN ARE COUNTED OUT

Professional Tactics Are Permitted by Referees in Many Big Cities.

By Harry S. Sharpe,
Referee for the Future City A. C. and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

The Amateur Athletic Union claims jurisdiction over amateur boxing and provides a set of rules directing how this sport shall be conducted. It issues sanctions for the holding of amateur boxing tournaments and suspends or banishes boxers from participation in these tournaments who, having entered, fail to appear, or have accepted money for their exhibitions, or for unseemly conduct, etc.

The A. A. U. exacts a fee for issuance of a sanction and aids its treasury by a percentage of receipts derived from boxing. It probably receives more money from this branch of sport than from any other over which it claims jurisdiction. Boxers who take part in tournaments that are not "sanctioned" by the A. A. U. are outlawed. The A. A. U. is the court of last resort and there is no appeal from its mandates.

Exercising unlimited authority and handing down penalties that are severe, the A. A. U.'s interest in amateur boxing, nevertheless, appears to be particularly a pecuniary one rather than sporting. One is forced to this conclusion when it is observed what little attention is paid to deliberate violation of rules governing this branch of sport.

Attention of the parent body has been called many times to the fact that its rules are ignored in many localities, that they are misunderstood and misinterpreted, and that there is need of a general ruling governing the interpretation to be given certain sections of the code. These appeals have met with no response.

As a result, almost every locality where amateur boxing is encouraged has its own way of conducting tournaments and enforcing and interpreting the rules.

Local Boxers Handicapped.

Amateur boxers of St. Louis when performing in some other locality find themselves confronted with a different enforcement of the rules; and boxers coming from other localities here find themselves handicapped in like manner.

In some localities the A. A. U.'s rules are almost totally disregarded. A case in point occurred recently, when a team of boxers was sent by the Missouri Athletic Club, of this city, to participate in an intercity tournament given in Cleveland, O. Over there the boxers were obliged to box FOUR rounds in each bout, instead of THREE, as specified in Section 6 of the A. A. U.'s rules.

These rounds were of three minutes each, whereas the rules provide that an extra (or fourth) round shall be boxed only when the judges have failed to agree and the referee is unable to decide, AND THAT THIS EXTRA ROUND SHALL BE ONE OF TWO MINUTES.

The rules further provide that if a boxer is knocked down in the first or second rounds and is unable to immediately respond, or is too weak to properly protect himself, THE REFEREE SHALL HAVE POWER TO END THE ROUND. If this happens in the last (or third) round, it ends the bout.

However, in Cleveland and in some other places, local rules provide that the referee may end the first or second rounds, but must give the count of 10 a la Queensberry if a knockdown occurs in the third or fourth rounds.

Another variance of the rules is found in the construction placed by different referees with reference to the conduct of boxers when clinches occur. According to a ruling made by James E. Sullivan, representing the A. A. U. during the Olympic games held in this city during the World's Fair in 1904, neither boxer is permitted to strike when either is holding, but the judges are required to penalize the boxer responsible for the clinch.

The writer refereed the amateur boxing championships held as part of the Olympic games, and the foregoing instructions were laid down for his guidance as the A. A. U.'s official interpretation of the rules.

To the writer's knowledge this has never been changed. Notwithstanding, in Cleveland and some other localities the interpretation given IS THE SAME AS THAT UNDER THE QUEENSBERRY CODE GOVERNING PROFESSIONAL BOXING. That is, a contestant may continue to strike so long as he is doing no holding, regardless of what his opponent may be doing.

These inconsistencies could be easily remedied if the A. A. U. would give this branch of sport proper attention, but so long as it exercises jurisdiction for financial gain only, it is probable no changes will be made.

The rules governing amateur boxing are inadequate enough as they are written, but are made worse for lack of general enforcement and defined interpretation.

Millers Sign Three Men.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 7.—Three new members of the Minneapolis American Association team have just been signed for the 1914 season, according to President M. E. Cantillon, on his return today from an Eastern and Southern trip. The new men are G. H. Flagg, last season a catcher on the Kansas City Federal League club; Manes, first baseman with the Middleboro, Ky., team of the Appalachian League, and Woldring, a pitcher released late in 1913 by the Chicago Americans to the local club.

White Hope Who Averaged Fight Every Five Days

BATTLING LEVINSKY.

Levinsky Fought Once a Week for Nearly 5 Months

"White Hope" Makes Unparalleled Dash for the White Title.

In the effort to gain fame, money and a championship quickly, Battling Levinsky, formerly known as Barney Williams, is making pugilistic history down East. It's history of a sort without a precedent in the past, too.

Beginning his dash for a fight crown Aug. 28, Levinsky has battled seemingly a tireless campaign. Here are some of the things he has done:

Averaged one fight a week for nearly five months.

Fought seven fights in one month.

Fought 15 fights in 77 days, an average of one every five days.

Had the best of every fight but three, two of these draws, since Aug. 28.

Some place in history some fighter may have beaten this record, but it has never been put down in type before.

Here's Levinsky's performance—it ought to entitle him to what he asks, a bout with Gunboat Smith:

Aug. 28, 1913, won from Sailor White, 10 rounds at Atlantic A. A., Far Rockaway Beach.

Sept. 10, outpointed by McGoorty, 10 rounds, at St. Nicholas A. C., New York.

Sept. 17, won from Whitey Allen, 10 rounds, St. Nicholas A. C., New York.

Sept. 30, won from Jack Keating, 10 rounds, Atlantic Garden A. C., New York.

Nov. 20, made Eddie Hogan quit in seven rounds, Atlantic Garden A. C., New York.

Nov. 24, stopped Yank Gilbert in four rounds, Olympic A. C., New York.

Dec. 2, drew with Young Weinert, 10 rounds, Browns Gym, New York.

Dec. 9, won from Jim Flynn, 10 rounds, Atlantic Garden A. C., New York.

Dec. 22, won from Jim Coffey, 10 rounds, Garden A. C., New York.

Dec. 25, won from Jack Driscoll, 10 rounds, Irwing A. C., Brooklyn.

Jan. 1, knocked out Tom Daly in second round, Atlantic Garden A. C., New York.

Jan. 5, lost to Bob McAllister, 10 rounds, Garden A. C., New York.

Jan. 13, won from Porky Flynn, 10 rounds, National Sporting Club, New York.

Jan. 17, won from Jack Connors, 10 rounds, Sharkey A. C., New York.

Jan. 22, made Bob Kenny quit in third round, Keystone Club, Allentown, Pa.

Jan. 27, won from Soldier Kearns, 10 rounds, Atlantic Garden A. C., New York.

Jan. 31, won from Tony Ross, six rounds, National A. C., Philadelphia.

Feb. 6, won from Tom McMahon, 10 rounds, Empire A. C., New York.

Feb. 7, won from Jack Driscoll, Gowanus A. C., Brooklyn, N. Y.

1400-H. P. Engine in Motor Boat.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—A contract for the largest and strongest gasoline motor boat engine ever built was closed today by Commodore James A. Pugh, of Chicago, who ordered the building of an engine of 1400 horsepower. This motor will be installed in the Disturber IV, the new hydroplane racer with which Mr. Pugh hopes to bring to America the Harmsworth trophy, emblematic of the world's championship.

Local Boy to Head Tiger Five.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 7.—Milton Bernet, a St. Louis boy, was today elected basket ball captain at Missouri University. Taaffe, former captain, is ineligible under protested A. B. rules. Bernet is center and is serving his last year on the team.

"Forlorn Hope" Punch by Maher Put Choynski Out

Latter Had Fight Won

Irish Champion, Outclassed at Long-Range Fighting and Almost Through, Landed Uppercut That Brought Bout to an Abrupt End.

UNTOLD TALES OF THE RING

THIS is the sixth of a series by Robert Edgren on fights and fighters of the past and present, including stories that have never found their way into print. The series will be continued on these pages each Sunday.

By Robert Edgren,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.

WHEN Peter Maher was fighting he was a "broth of a lad," and no mistake. Peter, in his best form, tipped the beam at 172 pounds and had the hardest wallop in America. He was a splendidly proportioned fellow, with shoulders and arms like those of Fitzsimmons, a clean-lined body and good, shapely legs. Also Peter always wore a mustache. He'd rather have gone into the ring without his right leg than without that adornment. For Peter had ideas concerning what constituted manly beauty, and he lived up to them.

Away back in '96 Peter Maher was matched with Joe Choynski, who was little known in the East, but had quite a bit of reputation in the West and the Antipodes. Joe was a remarkably hard hitter and a very clever boxer. He weighed only 165 pounds, often less than that. But he carried his weight high. His legs were like those of Fitzsimmons and Corbett, skinny. About the waist he was built like a real heavyweight. His neck was as thick as that of a wrestler. Above that thick neck his face looked thin and narrow; and the effect was exaggerated by his long, blond hair, parted in the middle and allowed to fall over his ears and neck like the mane of a lion. Choynski had an intelligent face. He came of a scholarly family. His father was a rabbi, one brother a famous lawyer.

T. R. at the Ringside.

THE fight was held in the old Broadway A. C. The prowess of the men about to meet drew a great number of New York's most famous citizens. In a box close to the ringside sat Theodore Roosevelt, then President of the Board of Police Commissioners, later Governor of New York State and President of the United States. Mr. Roosevelt was a clever boxer himself and liked nothing better than seeing a good, fair, evenly contested glove contest. Among other famous men at the ringside were Senator Tim Sullivan, Edward Kearney, Charles Reed, the Dwyers, Andrew Miller and John Kelly, as well as scores of business and sporting men interested in boxing.

As Peter Maher, clad in a black sweater, entered the ring betting commissioners circulated through the crowd, offering 2 to 1 on the Irish champion. Choynski slipped in quietly, attracting less attention than the magnificent son of Erin, who, stripped to the buff, reminded the spectators of some splendid old Greek warrior in marble. Yet if one has thoughtfully compared the men, the look of keen intelligence in Choynski's face might have offset the power that showed in every rippling muscle of his antagonist and have changed the betting odds.

Maher Makes Impression.

IN the first round they felt each other out, and the ease with which Choynski slipped under a few powerful blows from Maher began to impress the crowd. Here was no novice, standing up like a wooden Indian to have his head punched.

In the second round Choynski leaped suddenly into full speed. He made the fight at long range, avoiding Maher's furious rushes and the blows that flew like lightning strokes, and jabbing him so hard that more than once Peter floundered and nearly lost his footing.

Soon Joe changed his attack and began whipping hard lefts into Peter's body, and in spite of his splendid condition Peter showed signs of distress. Through the third and fourth rounds the mixing was furious, yet Choynski, with cautious skill, managed to avoid Maher's hardest swings. Any one of these, landed on the right spot, would have ended the fight on the instant. In the third round Peter grazed Joe's chin with a left hook, dropping him to his knees, where he rested eight seconds before leaping up. Choynski dug into Peter's body harder than eve and more than evened the score.

The fifth round was a slasher, Choynski fought with greater caution, but without letting up in the pace he had set. The betting odds had switched around in his favor now. He looked all over a winner. And he felt like a winner. The end of the fifth saw Peter Maher staggering and puffing, while Choynski danced around and drove in his punches as deliberately as a workman hammering home bolt heads.

While Joe sat in his corner at the end of that round Mike Donovan slipped quickly around to his corner and whispered: "Go in and mix—you've got him. Mix it up and finish him before he comes back." Joe nodded.

Peter Seemed "All In."

NOW if there ever was a man who knew fighting, it's Mike Donovan. I'm just relating this little bit of inside play to show that even the wisest can't always tell what's coming next when the fists are flying. The sixth round opened with the betting men rushing around trying to cover, offering even money, then odds on the Californian, and with no takers. For it looked like Peter's finish.

Peter Maher came up a little wobbly, still puffing hard, but with a gleam of determination in his eye. And before the bell had stopped vibrating Joe was prancing lightly across the ring to get at him. Joe was taking the good advice. He was going to mix and finish it. Peter jabbed a hard one over to Joe's nose, and Choynski went diving into him with both hands going like piston rods.

Now at long range Choynski was a winner, but at mixing Maher was master. He landed terrific blows. Under their impact Choynski began to waver—to weaken. But he had that mixing idea in his head, and he stood in close and traded blow for blow. Maher began to reel sidewise. As he staggered dazed and all but in, he brought an uppercut clear from his knee. The glove struck with a thud under Choynski's chin. Down went Joe as if he'd been shot. Maher dropped his hands and looked down, dazed. Choynski took half the count and staggered up, only to drop to one knee for a few seconds more. Rising, he reeled aside, and Maher, who had a finishing punch as long as he was on his feet, stepped unsteadily in the same direction and swung his right upward to Joe's chin. The fight ended right there.

In the confusion Capt. Groh of the Mercer Street Station jumped into the ring. Up rose Commissioner Roosevelt. "I'm in charge here tonight; get out of that ring!" ordered the Commissioner. "There's no need of arresting those men. They've violated no law."

"One of the best contests I ever witnessed," said Mr. Roosevelt a moment later, very enthusiastically. "Boxing is a manly sport and should be encouraged."

Peter Maher, counting the winner's end, fully agreed with him.

O'Day Will Tell Rules Committee How to Stop the Intentional Pass

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—A rule limiting the catcher to a "box" 4 feet in width will be suggested by Umpire Henry O'Day, as a means of preventing the intentional base on balls. O'Day, who is one of the National League's representatives for the meeting, believes that a pitcher will have difficulty in "pitching out" and beyond the reach of the batsmen's club if the catcher is compelled to stand practically behind the plate.

O'Day will try to have enforced the rule that keeps a manager on the bench and limit protests on umpires' decisions to the field captains.

Navy Foilsmen Beat Harvard.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 7.—By six bouts to three, the Navy Academy foilsmen won from Harvard here this afternoon. Most of the bouts were very well contested, and five of them were decided by the margin of 1 point. Putnam and Damon of the visitors both proved good blades, but Ayles was in poor form. Capt. Haine and Glennon were the best men on the Navy team.

Cornell Five Defeats Yale.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Cornell showed something like true form in today's basket ball game with Yale, and moved up a peg in the Intercollegiate League, by defeating the Elis, 40 to 26. The Ithacans, who have been reorganized by Coach Sharpe in the last week, went at things with a rush, and Capt. Bert Halstead caged the first basket inside of six minutes. Cornell kept the lead throughout the first half, which ended with the score of 23 to 12 in their favor.

McGoorty Gets Decision Over Bradley; Saylor Beaten in Six Rounds

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—Private cables received here report that Eddie McGoorty, the American middleweight, won a decision in 20 rounds today over Pat Bradley of San Francisco, at Sydney, Australia. Young Saylor of Indianapolis, a lightweight, lost in the sixth round to Newhouse of Australia, at Brisbane, on a foul.

George Carpentier, the French middleweight and heavyweight champion, declined an offer to meet McGoorty in Australia April 6, because he said he has an offer to meet the American Kid McCoy in Paris March 14.

Wolgast Is Busy.

Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champion of the world, has accepted terms to fight Patsey Drouillard eight rounds before the Windsor Athletic Club (Windsor, Canada), on Feb. 18. Wolgast meets Tommy Gary at Cincinnati on Feb. 16 before the Queen City Athletic Club.

Wolgast is also matched to box 10 rounds or less on Feb. 27 in Milwaukee, but they don't know in which arena they are going to trade wallops.

White meets Jimmy Duffy in Buffalo Monday.

Jones has Wolgast signed with Johnny Dundee for a New York bout, but avers it will not interfere with the White match in any way.

RICKEY TO START SOUTH THIS WEEK WITH 27 BROWN

Big Squad of Rookies Will R port for Early Practice at St. Petersburg.

Having repeatedly won the tail-e championship of the American Leag the Browns, this season, will attem to shake off their hoodoo by starti for their training quarters on Frid the 13th day of February. Fourteen cruits will mobolize here under Mana Branch Rickey's command and entr for St. Petersburg, Fla., where t "heavy stuff" will be put on. Twel others will go direct to training qu ters.

Rickey, who is practically new to job, having had only a month's w at the arduous task last fall, h deemed it wise to get an early sta For that reason he will migrate Sou a week in advance of nearly all t other clubs.

Ten Pitchers in First Squad.

In the squad which will go to work week from tomorrow will be 10 pitc ers: Hamilton, Mitchell, Taylor, Bau gardner, Ashley, Witte, James, F man, Manning and Hoch; eight catc ers—Agnew, McAllester, Crossin, Ens roth, Jenkins, Clemens, Rogers and t veteran coach, Criger; three infielder Bold, Leary and Hemingway, and th outfielders — Rumler, Williams a Walker.

Charley Barrett, disguised as a sco and Doc Lawler, the eminent surge from Texas, will be excess bagga They are to assist Rickey and Cri with the minor details of getting t Browns ready for the evacuation of t place.

The second squad, which will start f St. Petersburg a week or 10 days la than the vanguard, will be made mostly of the prima donnas, such Shotten, Wallace, Austin, Bisland, Pr ident Hedges and others too numero to mention. When all hands have ported, including camp followers a scribes, the Brown party will total e actly 60, which is bigger than the a erage musical comedy troupe, but near as funny.

Who'll Help Mr. Rickey?

Whether Rickey will have any assista other than Criger and Barrett has not been determined. It was hinted at o time that a lieutenant for the local ma ger would be snared from the camp of Co nie Mack, but so far nothing has dev oped. That Rickey needs a few helne goes without saying. To handle a squ of 55 players is more than even a se soned tactician like C. Mack would care tackle.

There'll be an exodus of local magna today as Messrs. Hedges and Britton w start for New York, where they will a tend the joint meetings of the Americ and National League. The schedules, a ready drawn, will be adopted at this mee ing.

CUBS BOOK TWO GAMES WITH RICKEY'S TEA

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 7.—With 28 exhib tion games scheduled and 16 days set asi for practice in the southern camp, the pla for the sane training trip of the Cubs a practically complete. The St. Louis Brow will play the Cubs at Tampa Feb. 27 and 2 Other games have been arranged later. Eig days from now Manager Evers and his cre will be packing for the departure to Tamp Fla. They will leave one week from to morrow night and reach their destination tw days later.

In contrast to training trips of other year the Cubs will play exhibition games th are worth while, both as a means of dri and as a means of drawing crowds. Of th 28 games 11 are against American Leagu teams, 6 being booked against Connie Mack world's champions.

Baseball Tourists at Naples.

NAPLES, Feb. 7.—The baseball players o the New York club of the National Leag and the Chicago club of the Americ League arrived here today from Egypt o board the steamship Prinz Heinrich. The were greeted heartily by the local sporti clubs and the members of the Americ colony.

Wales Wins Rugby Match.

CARDIFF, Wales, Feb. 7.—The Wel fifteen today won the second match of th international Rugby football series, defea ing Scotland by 24 points to 5.

The first match of the series, played o January 17, was won by England, whi defeated Wales.

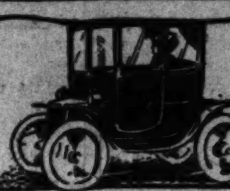
AUTOMOBILE NEWS



SPRING AUTO SHOW OPENS MONDAY AT THE COLISEUM

Seven Exhibits of High Class Gas Cars, Three Electric, Five Trucks and Accessories.

ROSES IN DECORATIONS

Newest 1914 Models, Several With Important Improvements, Will Be Featured.

EXHIBITORS AT THE SPRING AUTO SHOW

Gasoline Cars.

Henderson, Imperial, Speedwell, Cartercar, Havers Six, Pathfinder, Haynes.

Electric Cars.

Argo, Broc, Borland.

Commercial Cars.

Speedwell truck, Little Giant truck, Palmer truck, Menominee truck, Service truck.

The spring automobile show will open at the Coliseum in St. Louis, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock to last for a week, 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. each day. The management of the show promises an unusually attractive display of a number of cars of merit, none of which, with two exceptions, were shown at the fall show at Forest Park Highlands last October. The exhibitors have brought in the finest examples of the body work of their respective factories and this, with the new features in the mechanism of most of the cars, will give visitors to the show a view for the first time of some of the best cars built in the country.

The Coliseum has been decorated to approximate a beatiful spring scene. From the lobby to the dome of the great building long streamers of wild smilax have been strung and a large number of bay trees have been placed around the display spaces. In the center a large round floral bed has been filled with a profusion of roses and other blooming flowers. The barren spots have all been covered and the ceiling has been given a sky line effect. In each exhibit space will be potted plants and flowers.

The exhibits of gasoline cars will show only the latest of the 1914 models, some showing radical departures in design and construction and equipment. There will be a brave showing of the new light sixes by several of the exhibitors, but the fours will hold their own in the general make up of the show. There will be three interesting displays of electric cars made by the De Luxe Automobile Co.

In the commercial car display several lines of trucks and lighter delivery cars will be exhibited. In the display will be all sizes and styles of motor trucks and delivery cars, and this feature of the show will attract much attention from the heads of business houses who are seeking to adopt motor delivery.

In the accessory department of the show there will be exhibits of a number of automobile specialties, a full exhibit by one house of accessory lines and many novel pieces of equipment heretofore new to St. Louisans. In this department 17 accessory firms and manufacturers will exhibit.

The motor cycle exhibit will include the latest ideas in electric starting and lighting devices for motor cycles.

Falkenhainer's orchestra will give afternoon and evening concerts during the show. The Show Committee is M. L. Weber, chairman; P. H. Brockmann, A. H. Meyer and John Hurck. Frank Bishop is show manager.

The Motor Car Exhibitors.

Imperial Motor Car Co.: Imperial gas car.

Havers Motor Car Co., Port Huron, Mich., Havers six.

Carter Car Co.: Cartercar.

Auto Clearing House: Haynes car.

Pathfinder Motor Car Co.: Pathfinder four and six.

Corby Supply Co.: Little Giant truck.

Palmer-Meyer Motor Co.: Palmer trucks.

American Wedling Co.: Menominee and Service trucks.

BRINKMANN TO SELL THREE NEW TRUCKS

A deal announced Friday makes the George C. Brinkmann Motor Car Co. the largest handler of trucks in St. Louis. This deal was the closing of the contract to handle in St. Louis and surrounding territory the Mack, Saurer and Hewitt trucks, built by the International Motor Co. R. A. Hauer, who has handled these trucks for the factory in St. Louis, will be with the George C. Brinkmann Co. The company also has the selling agency for this territory for the Smith-Milwaukee and the Lippard-Stewart trucks.

MANY BUYERS OF MOTOR CARS ARE BEING PERSUADED

St. Louis Dealers Say Spring Business Is Surprising and 1914 Outlook Bright.

Automobile conditions were never better in St. Louis and the St. Louis territory than at this time. A sudden revival of interest among buyers of cars was noted the first of last week and dealers say that the promise is for the biggest year in point of sales ever known in this market.

Already many sales have been reported and salesmen for automobile concerns say that they have many prospects of people who have finally decided to buy in order to secure deliveries in time for early spring use, the general impression seeming to be that the spring season for touring will open early.

St. Louis has become an immense distributing point for motor cars. Half a dozen factory branches are located here, including the Ford, Locomobile, Buick, White, Studebaker, International Harvester Co., General Motor Truck Co. and others and each has a wide distributing territory which in some cases includes as faraway points as Louisiana and Texas and Oklahpma. Three factories, the Dorris, Moon and Mogul truck, are located here.

The buying season for automobiles, say the dealers, should be now, because there are few factories which, in the busy season, can make immediate deliveries of cars. This is particularly true of the better known lines of cars. When a man buys an automobile he begins to fret at once for delivery, but this he can seldom secure except in a pre-season time as now, so that wisdom would dictate that the time to buy is ahead of that season. That many buyers of cars have seen this light is indicated by the number of sales that are being made and the brisk inquiries which are being made in the salesrooms of practically every dealer in this market.

While it is true that there are 1,200,000 automobiles running on the streets and highways of the United States at this time, men at the manufacturing plants say that the demand has not nearly been met and in every instance they are preparing for heavier output than in previous years. This increase in demand is due in part to the constantly increasing desire of men of all stations in life to own a motor car and in part to the great improvements which are constantly being made in the roads of the entire country. This good road movement has reached an active stage in Missouri and Illinois.

Some Recent Sales.

The Ideal Motor Sales Co., distributers of the Meteor, delivered three touring cars last week to W. O. Stacey of Lancaster, Mo., their distributer in Schuyler, Putnam, Scotland and Adair counties; four-cylinder touring car to Dr. J. W. Hans, 3240 South Dakota st.

Frye Motor Car Co. delivered to William C. Foell, 4144 Beethoven av., a little six premier. To M. Bisbee, East St. Louis, a Paige "36;" H. Bockstruck, 3332 Red Bud avenue, 1500-lb. light delivery.; Thomas Cusack Co. a Paige 36 touring car; Alex. Schmidt, 2820 Geyer avenue, a 6-40 Premier. They also closed agencies for Paige cars with J. M. Greene, Metropolis, Ill., ten Paige touring cars; G. O. Oheim, Kimswick, five Paige "36's;" T. J. Williams, Moberly, Mo., ten cars.

The Johnson Automobile Co. reports sales of 20 cars the first week in February, as follows: N. O. Brown, one Moline touring car and one Empire touring car; W. G. Hunt, Brighton, Ill., Empire touring car; Schoepp & Karch, Mascoutah, Ill., Empire touring car; J. A. PLANT WORKS 10,000 MEN

This week more than 1000 workmen have been employed by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., at the factory, Akron, O., and the great plant is now running 24 hours a day to turn out the product required for the company's business for 1914. This week's addition to the working force brings the Goodyear factory army back to 6000 men, and the daily output of autmobile tires is increased by over 1000.

Goodyear business has jumped, in total sales, from $12,000,000 in 1911 to $33,000,000 in 1913. During that time various factory additions were built to accommodate the expansion, and the company now has a factory capable of housing 10,000 men and turning out $50,000,000 of product in a year.

WEBER IS BRISCOE AGENT

The new $750 Brisco car, built by Benjamin Briscoe of wide automobile fame and his associates, will be sold in St. Louis by the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., Nineteenth and Locust streets. The Briscoe is a real automobile with electric lights and starter and 100-inch wheel base and weighs 1700 pounds. The Weber Co also handles the Lozier, the Mitchell and the Briggs-Detroiter lines. Deliveries of the Brisco car are expected in April.

MARMON AGENTS HOLD ANNIVERSARY WEEK

Monday is the fifth anniversary of the Missouri Motor Car Co., distributors of the Marmon and Willys-Utility truck, and they will celebrate it by holding a "coming out" party for the newest Marmon model, the light six, known as model 41. The celebration will extend throughout the entire week and receptions will be held Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. Attractive invitations telling of the anniversary have been sent out to motor car owners and prospects in which the new model has been styled "The Season's Most Popular Debutante."

They are inaugurating an original idea in connection with their anniversary in that they plan to take the entire line of Marmon cars, which consists of five models, to the homes of those who are unable to attend the receptions at the showrooms.

The New Marmon is a light six-cylinder car of ample power and moderate size. Special attention has been paid to the design and the correct proportioning of weight and power. The electrical equipment for starting and lighting and all the manifold conveniences and luxuries known to motordom have been included. The car which will be displayed this week is direct from the New York show and is painted in Marmon blue in white striping, with left-hand drive, center control, and in spite of the fact that it has a wheel base of 132 inches its builders claim that it can turn in the same space that a car of 120 inches is able to. A notable feature is the lack of grease cups on springs and spring shackles. The manufacturers claim these springs are so constructed that they will automatically lubricate themselves one year without any attention from the owner.

ST. LOUIS ELECTRIC FIRMS CONSOLIDATE

By merger of the Detroit Electric Car Co. and the Electric Garage and Service Co., the latter company assumes the agency for the Detroit Electric and Buffalo electric truck and becomes one of the largest dealers in electric vehicles in St. Louis. These concerns occupy the largest electric garage and salesroom in St. Louis, located 5183-89 Delmar boulevard, and have facilities for taking care of over 300 electric cars.

New equipment, such as vacuum cleaners, additional wash racks, charging stations, system for checking mileage on cars in their care, have recently been installed. D. B. Blossom, formerly president of the Electric Garage and Service Co., is president of the new concern: W. F. Sigmund, formerly president of the Detroit Electric Car Co. of St. Louis. is vice-president and sales manager, while Milton Strauss is to be genral manager. This concern will distribute Detroit electrics, of which there are 147 in St. Louis, and Buffalo electric trucks

BARTLETT WILL SELL NEW UNIVERSAL CAR

H. W. Bartlett, who is familiarly known by his many friends in St. Louis as "Pop," has been made sales manager at the factory for the Universal Motor Co. of Washington, Pa., which is to manufacture the Universal car. This little car will sell for $475, f. o. b. the factory. It has an 18 horsepower motor of 4 cylinders, 28-inch wheels, 96-inch base, left-hand steer and center control, self-starter and electric lights with top and ventilating windshield and electric horn. The car is to be built only in roadster body for the present. It is expected that an agency will shortly be established in St. Louis. Mr. Bartlett will leave St. Louis for the factory in a few days to reside at Washington.

GOOD TIRE ADVICE

"Be considerate of your tires," urges L. Greenwald, chief of the service department of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., and adds suggestions for getting the most out of casings.

"In driving, do not run in car tracks or ruts. Keep tires inflated to the proper pressure. Use tires of right size for weight of machine, and of correct type for the rims with which the car is equipped.

"See that wheels are in perfect alignment. If a tire becomes worn from running on rough, rutty roads, reverse That is, turn the worn sides to the car. If cement flaps are used, turn those also.

"Repair all cuts at once. Do not start car suddenly, also avoid severe application of brakes. Carry spare tires and inner tubes. Keep oil and grease away from tires."

OVERLAND EXPERTS HERE

Six Overland salesmen and service experts have come to town to "clean up." They are to work with the Overland Automobile Co. of St. Louis, of which T. L. Hausmann is president, and they say that Overland is to be a household word before they quit St. Louis for other automobile markets. They are sent here by the Willys-Overland Co. of Toledo. They are to establish a better service department here so that Overland owners can be kept driving all the time. In the flying squadron from the factory are W. C. Wagner, F. E. Walbrink, L. S. Deane, J. S. Thornburg, W. E. Lewis and J. E. Zimmermann.

TRUCK AGENCY CLOSED

A contract for the agency for St. Louis and surrounding territory for the Atterbury truck has been closed by the Southern Auto and Machinery Co. The line is inclusive of several styles of chasses from a 1500-pound wagon to a 5-ton truck, with option of chain or worm drive. The deal was closed with the St. Louis company by F. C. Lindoerfer, sales manager of the Atterbury Motor Car Co. of Buffalo, N. Y.

MOTORISTS FIGHT DOUBLE TAX ON AUTOMOBILES

Case Pending in U. S. Supreme Court Protests Against License and Personal Property Taxation.

A country-wide protest against the "double tax" on self-propelled vehicles is accumulating as a result of the attitude of the American Automobile Association, and reflected in the procedure of its Legislative Board, in advising all affiliated State bodies to fight vigorously the payment of a registration fee for revenue purposes and the imposition of a personal property tax, to which is added in some cases an annual charge for operators' license and even a local wheel tax.

Motorists are greatly interested in the so-called "New Jersey test case," which the A. A. A. recently had its general counsel, Charles Thaddeus Terry, place on the docket of the United States Supreme Court and which it is expected may be argued before the year is ended, by ex-United States Attorney-General J. W. Griggs of Patterson, N. J., who had the case in charge for the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey during its progress through the State courts.

A decision from the highest court in the land would establish a ruling not likely to be dissented from by any State court. There has been a diversity of opinion in decisions thus far rendered by State courts in which the "double tax" has been passed upon. New Jersey and Connecticut have upheld the right of the commonwealth to exact a registration tax in addition to the owner of the vehicle being compelled to pay under the head of personal property. Mississippi's supreme court ruled that the "double tax" was unconstitutional and directed the return of the automobile registration fees. The A. A. A. State body in Ohio also obtained a favorable decision in the Court of Common Pleas in the case in which President C. C. Janes figured as the appellant. It so happens that Mr. Janes is also chairman of the A. A. A. Legislative Board, and in commenting on the matter he has the following to say:

"It is my opinion that the average automobile owner has no objection to paying a registration tax if it is in lieu of all other taxes and the money thus raised is expended for roads maintenance. True it is that we are for the time being discriminated against as a special class of road user, but we are of the opinion that the time is near at hand when practically all highway transport will be of the motor-driven variety. Hence, for the present, we may waive our rights in the premises in this regard; but we do not intend to pay twice, and we further believe that the money raised, no matter by what form, should find its way into the highway fund."

In California both the State Automobile Association and the Southern California club are contesting the double tax in the State courts, and in other parts of the country protests will soon be expressed in test cases.

PLANT IS TOLEDO'S PRIDE

Nearly every city can point with pride to some one of its industries, as being the chief center of attraction, and it is only natural that the favored one should be the business that gives employment to the greatest number of men.

In the city of Toledo it is the automobile industry that claims this honor. The big factories of the Willys-Overland Co. give employment to over 10,000 people and their yearly output of 50,000 cars places Toledo in the enviable position of being the second largest city in the world from an automobile production standpoint. This showing is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that the Willys-Overland Co. is the only concern manufacturing gasoline cars in Toledo.

There are many reasons why the city should be proud of the Overland company. In a few short years its president, John N. Willys, has built up an organization that is the wonder of the industry. He took the old Pope-Toledo factory, which had heretofore been a "white elephant," and by his untiring efforts transformed it into a prosperous, hustling automobile plant. This original building is still in existence, but is so surrounded by the big, modern Overland structures that are constantly being erected that it looks small in comparison.

PREMIER'S MOTOR SIMPLE

It was very interesting to hear the many leading engineers at the Chicago automobile show pass their comments on Weidely motor exhibited at the Premier booth.

These experts were frank to confess that Weideley has made a big advance in automobile engine construction. The point that particularly impressed them is that the Weidely motor in principle is exactly the same as the ordinary type of automobile engine.

Unlike the maker of rotary valve engines or the sleeve type engine, Weidely did not depart from established practice. His motor is an example in simplification, rather than a presentation of anything new in a mechanical way. In the Weidely motor valves are in the head, and great simplification results from this, both in the elimination of a number of parts and in the total weight of the motor. A single cam shaft operated by a single vertical shaft, does the work of 12 push rods and their attendant multiplicity of parts.

NEW YORKERS ENTER SPEEDWAY RACES

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 7.—New York promises to have as many if not more entries in the next 500-mile race on the local motor speedway than Detroit, if the plans of all the Gotham enthusiasts who are busy plotting competition at present materialize. Outside of Harry Grant in a Sunbeam, and J. B. Marquis in an Isotta, both chaperoned by William Ziegler, there loom in the offing Ray Gilhooley in another Italian car, and Ralph Joyce in a Delage. Against this quartet Detroit has only three Maxwells, now building, and a Keeton to offer, so that for intercity championship honors the "big burg" may yet win out.

Gilhooley, like Marquis, it is stated, is working over one of the Isottas that raced last year with such poor luck, due to their having been completed too late to permit of a final overhauling and testing in practice. Before the machine in question had thus reached the 60-mile mark, it had shook its gasoline tank loose from its moorings, breaking the feed line, and making further progress impossible.

Joyce is a comparatively minor personage in the speed game, but yet not without experience. With a car as fast as the Delage, he should cut ice in almost any kind of competition. Last year his proposed mount set a new European road racing record at Le Mans, averaging 76 miles an hour for almost a whole day's racing, and doing the last lap in 82.5 time, so that it must be figured on all the way.

URGES WINTER CARE

"Every member of your family and your driver should be instructed to use all possible care in driving during these winter months," says E. C. Tibbitts of the B. F. Goodrich Co., Akron, O.

"Only by constant watchfulness and in barring of every unnecessary risk can the chances of accidents be lowered. The avoidance of motor car accidents is to the interest of every car owner as a citizen.

"This winter weather brings dangerous street conditions. The danger of skidding is increased many times. It is well to have your brakes tested for uniformity and efficiency and to be sure that your tires are safe, so that you will always have your car under control.

"With all motorists thinking of safety first, and striving to have regard for the rights of others; and with the various manufacturers doing their utmost to build safety first into their products, there is bound to be beneficial results on account of this safety first crusade that will react favorably for the good of the tire industry."

WANT CONVICT WORK ON PUBLIC ROADS

A Federal "office of prisons" was recommended by E. Stagg Whitin, chairman of the Executive Board of the National Committee on Prison Labor, at a recent meeting in Washington of the woman's department of the National Civic Federation, at which Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and other prominent women were present.

The functions of this new bureau, as suggested by Dr. Whitin, would be to assist state, county and municipal administrations in the development of their prison systems along lines suggested by scientific development of the Federal prison system. In this work there would be cooperation with the Federal Office of Public Roads in promoting the construction of highways by convict labor. The bureau would also point out the possibilities for the convict in farm work when conducted according to the methods approved by the Department of Agriculture, and would show the opportunity for the use of convict labor in conservation and construction work as it is being developed by the Department of the Interior.

The office of prisons would stand against the exploitation of the convict, urging that his work afford him industrial training and that he receive a fair wage for a fair day's labor.

BUYERS SEEK STABILITY

W. S. Roberts, branch house manager for the J. I. Case T. M. Co., says that there will be more automobiles sold in 1914 than were sold in 1913. The manufacturers who have their factories well financed, adequately equipped and who have earned reputations for wholesome industrial and merchandising transactions need have no fear of a diminution in the market field. "In short," he said, "I believe that the desire to own automobiles is stronger now among the people than ever before and there are more people who can afford to own automobiles.

"Years of annual shows, wherein the makers have done their best to present their wares in an attractive manner, have educated the people—have made them 'motor wise.' They buy cars more intelligently than it was possible to buy several years ago. They look for the hidden values in the cars. They are sufficiently equipped with technical details to avoid the machines that do not tell their value upon close inspection.

"Furthermore, it has become almost an axiom with the buying public that one of the biggest assets the maker has is the stability, reliability and dependability of his name. The financial standing of a great automobile manufacturing organization now is like the hall-mark that a first-class jeweler places upon his output."

A Complete Car Every 3 Minutes

EVERY time the clock ticks off three minutes we complete an Overland car. That's 20 cars an hour—nearly 200 cars a day!

Scores of well-known factories right now are not shipping over 2 cars a day. Our shipments—200 a day!

Each day our entire daily production is shipped—not to branches to be stored away—but to our 3000 dealers in all parts of the world who, up to the present time, have not been able to get sufficient cars to fill the ever increasing and insistent demand.

During the last quarter, ending December 31st, we produced and delivered over 12,000 Overlands.

This established a new record.

In other words, we shipped more cars during the last quarter than during any other previous quarter since we have been in the automobile business.

Now note this—the quarter ending December 31st is the poorest and dullest quarter in the year. Yet despite this, and directly in the face of the slow season we broke every preceding sales record of, not only this quarter, but of any previous quarter during our existence.

The world at large seldom makes a mistake. If, year in and year out, public demand for Overlands increases by leaps and bounds, way beyond our annual capacity (now 50,000 cars) its indicative of how this car stands in the estimation of the buying and ever critical public.

Are you in the market for a car?

Have you examined the Overland value?

By examined, we don't mean a hasty meaningless demonstration nor a superfluous talk about dry technicalities. By examination we mean a strict comparison of every essential basic fact, such as the power of the motor, the size of the tires, the length of the wheelbase, the fineness of the equipment, the roominess and comfort of the tonneau, the completeness of the car—the finish—the appointments—the economy on gas and tires.

Make this kind of an examination and comparison with any $1200 car made and you'll find that in the $950 Overland you get practically everything any $1200 car can offer.

We do the largest business because we have always given more car for less money. Thus we have grown to be the world's largest producer of this type of car.

Follow the suggestion as outlined above and you'll not only save yourself considerable money, but what is more, you'll get a superior car in the bargain.

AUTO NEWS AND GOSSIP

Fred Eldrige, branch supervisor of the United States Tire Co., has been in St. Louis for a couple of weeks reorganizing the office practices of the company so as to make it an actual distributing branch which will work independently of the general offices, with a wide territory to handle. H. H. Hubbard is to remain manager of the increased business. Robert Doak, factory manager of service, has also been in St. Louis reorganizing the service department.

At the Chicago show C. C. Culbertson, office manager of the Moon Motor Car Co., closed contracts for 34 Moon cars, most of which were the Moon light six.

The Todd Auto and Rental Co. has received a Richmond 1914 four. It is similar in lines to the Richmond six, which has already been seen here.

T. V. Murphy has taken a position with the sales department of the Weber Motor Car Co. to sell Studebaker cars.

A Henderson car, equipped with the Harroun kerosene carburetor, will be a feature of the spring auto show in the exhibit of the De Luxe Auto Co.

T. J. Williams of Moberly, Mo., has been appointed sub-agent for the Paige car by the Frye Motor Car Co. of St. Louis, on a contract for 10 Paige cars.

The White Co. branch in St. Louis is thoroughly remodeling its salesrooms and service departments at 3429-24 Lindell avenue, and Manager H. M. Rosenberg says he expects to have as handsome a place as any in St. Louis.

Carl J. Simen, manager of the Studebaker distributing house in St. Louis, is making an extended trip to the various Studebaker agents and branches in the South and West.

Nelson S. Gottshall, general manager of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri, is at the St. Joseph automobile show and will be in charge of the Cole exhibit at the Kansas City show, which immediately follows.

Nothing quite so annoying as losing a bunch of keys. It is safe to say Post-Dispatch "Lost" Wants have returned wagon loads of keys to St. Louisans.

NEW COLE HOME ONE OF FINEST IN EQUIPMENT

Special Arrangements and Conveniences Provided for Owners and for Better Handling of Business.

The new Cole home at 1419 Locust street is the latest addition to St. Louis' rapidly enlarging "Auto Row." Under pressure of a sublease, made some time ago, the Cole Motor Co. moved last week from 4160 Olive street, where the firm had been located for nearly 10 years, to the new Locust street headquarters. Workmen have almost finished the interior decorating and completed the installation of the fixtures, so that Manager Nelson S. Gotshall's formal opening will be held Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

The building is one of the largest in the city, given over exclusively to the housing of an automobile sales company. It is a three-story steel and concrete structure, with a Locust street frontage of 68 feet and extending through to St Charles street. The property has a valuation of considerably over $125,000 and costs a rental of $8000 a year.

The architect, Guy C. Mariner, followed designs drawn by Manager Gotshall and the arrangement of the building is unusually convenient. The salesroom is 68 feet by 58 feet, with no pillars or supports in the entire room. The floor is finished in Italian marble. The walls are wainscoted with a 12-foot paneling done in silver gray oak. The ceiling is frescoed handsomely, and the fixtures are costly. Salesmen's desks range along the west wall and an information desk and the telephone exchanges are on the opposite side. Opening from the salesroom is a smaller clubroom for Cole runners' and also is used for a private salesroom.

In the rear of the first floor are the first aid service department, demonstrator garage, wash racks and shipping and receiving desks. Two entrances afford admittance to the building from St. Charles street, one to the first floor and the other to the eight-ton elevator. Gasoline, oil and air are easily accessible from either entrance.

The general offices, private offices of H. B. Graham and Mr. Gotshall are above the salesroom on the second floor. A passenger elevator runs to a spacious lobby, furnished with several huge lounging chairs, a big reading table and writing desk. The silver gray finish of the woodwork in the salesrooms has been used throughout.

In the rear, on the second floor, is the used car department, with storage room for new cars. The shops and stockroom occupy the third floor. Considerable new machinery has been installed and the shop equipment brought up-to-date in every way. The front room on the third floor has been reserved for the manufacture of pneumatic door operators, which the stockholders of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri are building.

There has been no expense spared in making the new building as complete as an automobile establishment could be, the idea of the management being to build for 50 years rather than for one.

The company now is distributing Cole motor cars in Oklahoma and Southern Illinois with a 500-car allotment for 1914.

SIXES VERSUS FOURS

In view of the many manufacturers who have abandoned the four-cylinder car in favor of the six for 1914 production, the action of the Lozier company in announcing a low-priced four for next year is causing comment. A wide difference of opinion seems to exist in the industry as to the merits of the two types of cars. As the Lozier company has commenced its seventh season of six-cylinder manufacture and has built fours for eight years past, the comments of President J. M. Gilbert have the weight of authority behind them.

"Entering upon what we confidently believe will be the best year in our history, we have decided to build both four and six cylinder cars," says Mr. Gilbert. "We have studied the American automobile situation from every standpoint. Taking nothing for granted, and disregarding the fact that many high-grade makers have abandoned their four-cylinder models, we carefully weighed the merits of each type of motor. That we believe a legitimate demand still exists for both sixes and fours is evidenced by the announcement of our manufacturing schedule for 1914.

"Without regard to which type of car they are manufacturing, practically all automobile makers are agreed upon certain phases of the industry. It is pretty definitely settled, for instance, that expensive yearly changes of models will have to cease. The high-grade car of today is a fairly satisfactory creation, and costly experiments with innovations of doubtful merit are being approached warily by conservative manufacturers. Strongly and accurately constructed cars, without excessive weight, and requiring the minimum of upkeep cost and service, are demanded by the present day buyer. 'Sell your cars to have them stay sold,' is a motto that every automobile manufacturer has come to recognize as a signboard on the path to permanent success."

PATHFINDER IN NEW HOME

The Pathfinder Automobile Co., agents in St. Louis and territory for the Pathfinder car, is installed in the former location of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri, 4160 Olive street. The Pathfinder Co. is a reorganization of the New York Motor Car Co. A. P. Singer is manager of the company, and D. M. Trombley, formerly with the Cole Co., is sales manager. C. C. Vaughan, also former Cole man, is in the sales department. The New York Motor Car Co. will continue business at 6417 Michigan avenue, with Edw. Ward as manager.

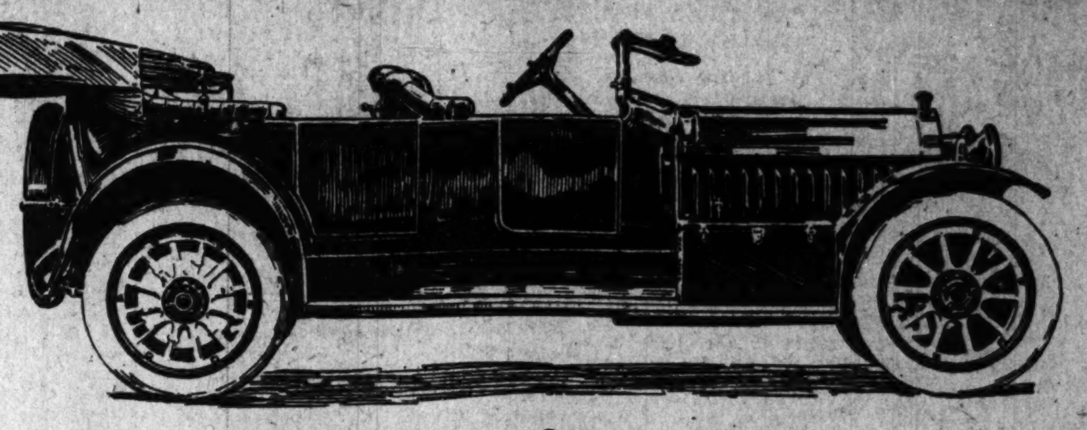
1914 MARMON
"The Easiest Riding Car In The World"



Announcing the
Marmon "Forty-One"

The Marmon "Forty-One" is a six-cylinder car of ample power, moderate size and reasonable price. Not only is it in all respects worthy of the Marmon name, but it is of such character that it should add to the world-wide prestige of builders famous for the quality of their motor cars. Certainly it is the finest example of their well-known skill in design and intelligent care in manufacture. A better car could not be built.

Marmon accuracy has become the ideal standard of shop practice in the automobile industry, just as the Marmon oiling system, the Marmon pressed steel axle housing, accessible differential and other features of Marmon design have become standard with many of the higher grade cars.

The Marmon "Forty-One" is not a hurried job either in design or construction. Nothing has been left to "inspiration," accident or guesswork. Logical design, gruelling tests and the most minute care have marked every stage of its growth to a completed car. Correct proportions of weight and power, selected and thrice-tested materials and the finest workmanship make it safe and reliable at the highest speeds and under the heaviest strains, and with intelligent handling it will give the best of service for years to come. The motor is a marvel of velvety smoothness and silent power. The last possibility of noise has been eliminated by having the cam shaft and valve tappets operated in circulating oil baths. This is but one of numerous new and minute refinements embodied in this model.

As a matter of course the electrical equipment for starting and lighting and all the manifold conveniences and luxuries known to motordom—and many that have been heretofore unknown—are found in this model and are the best that can be obtained. The final result is a remarkably easy riding, silent and beautiful car that will carry five passengers in comfort and luxury over any kind of roads and grades, that will throttle down to a crawl or go at a breathless speed without shifting gears, and a car that should be as good for many years in the future as it is today.

The Missouri Motor Car Company will celebrate its 5th Anniversary and also have a "Coming Out Party" for the New Marmon Light Six, or Model 41.

We will hold open house all week with receptions on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

Buying a New Car?

yes—they are mighty pretty, in glistening paint and polished metal, with their self-stoppers, licorice lights, and all that sort of thing.

Really Need To?

what's mostly wrong with the old one? Shabby—antiquated looking? Listen—if you'll look after the working parts—between us we'll bring it right up to the nineteen-fourteens in appearance and value.

We'll paint it—paint it right and that alone will add much to its looks. We'll build Fore Doors—if you have none; or make body changes; supply a one-man top; or re-cover the old one. Equip with Demountable Rims and furnish new up-to-date accessories.

Horns, Bumpers, Tire Carriers, Boxes, Wind Shields and what not.

Think it over—your old car is not worth much to trade in—by spending a little money it can be made very valuable—won't you let us demonstrate?

AUTO NEWS AND GOSSIP

Fred Eldrige, branch supervisor of the United States Tire Co., has been in St. Louis for a couple of weeks reorganizing the office practices of the company so as to make it an actual distributing branch which will work independently of the general offices, with a wide territory to handle. H. H. Hubbard is to remain manager of the increased business. Robert Doak, factory manager of service, has also been in St. Louis reorganizing the service department.

At the Chicago show C. C. Culbertson, office manager of the Moon Motor Car Co., closed contracts for 84 Moon cars, most of which were the Moon light six.

The Todd Auto and Rental Co. has received a Richmond 1914 four. It is similar in lines to the Richmond six, which has already been seen here.

T. V. Murphy has taken a position with the sales department of the Weber Motor Car Co. to sell Studebaker cars.

A Henderson car, equipped with the Harroun kerosene carburetor, will be a feature of the spring auto show in the exhibit of the De Luxe Auto Co.

T. J. Williams of Moberly, Mo., has been appointed sub-agent for the Paige car by the Frye Motor Car Co. of St. Louis, on a contract for 10 Paige cars.

The White Co. branch in St. Louis is thoroughly remodeling its salesrooms and service departments at 3422-24 Lindell avenue, and Manager H. M. Rosenberg says he expects to have as handsome a place as any in St. Louis.

Carl J. Simon, manager of the Studebaker distributing house in St. Louis, is making an extended trip to the various Studebaker agents and branches in the South and West.

Nelson S. Gottshall, general manager of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri, is at the St. Joseph automobile show and will be in charge of the Cole exhibit at the Kansas City show, which immediately follows.

Nothing quite so annoying as losing a bunch of keys. It is safe to say Post-Dispatch "Lost" Wants have returned wagon loads of keys to St. Louisans.

Kardell Motor Car Co.
4150-56 OLIVE STREET : ST. LOUIS

Special Arrangements and Conveniences Provided for Owners and for Better Handling of Business.

The new Cole home at 1619 Locust street is the latest addition to St. Louis' rapidly enlarging "Auto Row." Under pressure of a sublease, made some time ago, the Cole Motor Co. moved last week from 4160 Olive street, where the firm had been located for nearly 10 years, to the new Locust street headquarters. Workmen have almost finished the interior decorating and completed the installation of the fixtures, so that Manager Nelson S. Gotshall's formal opening will be held Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

The building is one of the largest in the city, given over exclusively to the housing of an automobile sales company. It is a three-story steel and concrete structure, with a Locust street frontage of 68 feet and extending through to St. Charles street. The property has a valuation of considerably over $125,000 and costs a rental of $8000 a year.

The architect, Guy C. Mariner, followed designs drawn by Manager Gotshall and the arrangement of the building is unusually convenient. The salesroom is 68 feet by 58 feet, with no pillars or supports in the entire room. The floor is finished in Italian marble. The walls are wainscoted with a 12-foot paneling done in silver gray oak. The ceiling is frescoed handsomely, and the fixtures are costly. Salesmen's desks range along the west wall and an information desk and the telephone exchanges are on the opposite side. Opening from the salesroom is a smaller clubroom for Cole runners' and also is used for a private salesroom.

In the rear of the first floor are the first aid service department, demonstrator garage, wash racks and shipping and receiving desks. Two entrances afford admittance to the building from St. Charles street, one to the first floor and the other to the eight-ton elevator. Gasoline, oil and air are easily accessible from either entrance.

The general offices, private offices of H. B. Graham and Mr. Gotshall are above the salesroom on the second floor. A passenger elevator runs to a spacious lobby, furnished with several huge lounging chairs, a big reading table and writing desk. The silver gray finish of the woodwork in the salesrooms has been used throughout.

In the rear, on the second floor, is the used car department, with storage room for new cars. The shops and stockroom occupy the third floor. Considerable new machinery has been installed and the shop equipment brought up-to-date in every way. The front room on the third floor has been reserved for the manufacture of pneumatic door operators, which the stockholders of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri are building.

There has been no expense spared in making the new building as complete as an automobile establishment could be, the idea of the management being to build for 50 years rather than for one.

The company now is distributing Cole motor cars in Oklahoma and Southern Illinois with a 500-car allotment for 1914.

SIXES VERSUS FOURS

In view of the many manufacturers who have abandoned the four-cylinder car in favor of the six for 1914 production, the action of the Lozier company in announcing a low-priced four for next year is causing comment. A wide difference of opinion seems to exist in the industry as to the merits of the two types of cars. As the Lozier company has commenced its seventh season of six-cylinder manufacture and has built fours for eight years past, the comments of President J. M. Gilbert have the weight of authority behind them.

"Entering upon what we confidently believe will be the best year in our history, we have decided to build both four and six cylinder cars," says Mr. Gilbert. "We have studied the American automobile situation from every standpoint. Taking nothing for granted, and disregarding the fact that many high-grade makers have abandoned their four-cylinder models, we carefully weighed the merits of each type of motor. That we believe a legitimate demand still exists for both sixes and fours is evidenced by the announcement of our manufacturing schedule for 1914.

"Without regard to which type of car they are manufacturing, practically all automobile makers are agreed upon certain phases of the industry. It is pretty definitely settled, for instance, that expensive yearly changes of models will have to cease. The high-grade car of today is a fairly satisfactory creation, and costly experiments with innovations of doubtful merit are being approached warily by conservative manufacturers. Strongly and accurately constructed cars, without excessive weight, and requiring the minimum of upkeep cost and service, are demanded by the present day buyer. 'Sell your cars to have them stay sold,' is a motto that every automobile manufacturer has come to recognize as a signboard on the path to permanent success."

PATHFINDER IN NEW HOME

The Pathfinder Automobile Co., agents in St. Louis and territory for the Pathfinder car, is installed in the former location of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri, 4160 Olive street. The Pathfinder Co. is a reorganization of the New York Motor Car Co. A. P. Singer is manager of the company, and D. M. Trombley, formerly with the Cole Co., is sales manager. C. C. Vaughan, also former Cole man, is in the sales department. The New York Motor Car Co. will continue business at 6417 Michigan avenue, with Edw. Ward as manager.

1914 MARMON
"The Easiest Riding Car In The World"

Announcing the
Marmon "Forty-One"

The Marmon "Forty-One" is a six-cylinder car of ample power, moderate size and reasonable price. Not only is it in all respects worthy of the Marmon name, but it is of such character that it should add to the world-wide prestige of builders famous for the quality of their motor cars. Certainly it is the finest example of their well-known skill in design and intelligent care in manufacture. A better car could not be built.

Marmon accuracy has become the ideal standard of shop practice in the automobile industry, just as the Marmon oiling system, the Marmon pressed steel axle housing, accessible differential and other features of Marmon design have become standard with many of the higher grade cars.

The Marmon "Forty-One" is not a hurried job either in design or construction. Nothing has been left to "inspiration," accident or guesswork. Logical design, gruelling tests and the most minute care have marked every stage of its growth to a completed car. Correct proportions of weight and power, selected and thrice-tested materials and the finest workmanship make it safe and reliable at the highest speeds and under the heaviest strains, and with intelligent handling it will give the best of service for years to come. The motor is a marvel of velvety smoothness and silent power. The last possibility of noise has been eliminated by having the cam shaft and valve tappets operated in circulating oil baths. This is but one of numerous new and minute refinements embodied in this model.

As a matter of course the electrical equipment for starting and lighting and all the manifold conveniences and luxuries known to motordom—and many that have been heretofore unknown—are found in this model and are the best that can be obtained. The final result is a remarkably easy riding, silent and beautiful car that will carry five passengers in comfort and luxury over any kind of roads and grades, that will throttle down to a crawl or go at a breathless speed without shifting gears, and a car that should be as good for many years in the future as it is today.

The Missouri Motor Car Company will celebrate its 5th Anniversary and also have a "Coming Out Party" for the New Marmon Light Six, or Model 41.

We will hold open house all week with receptions on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

Important Features of 1914 Cars Exhibited in St. Louis This Week

Some Are Displayed at Spring Automobile Show; Others Are on View Privately at Salesrooms.

AUBURN.

The Auburn line for 1914 comprises but two general models, as compared with five models built last season. Each of these is a continuation of a similar model built last season, but with many improvements and refinements. Principal changes for the year include the adoption of: New straight line body design; left hand drive; center control; new wind shield and top equipment; electric starter and lighting equipment, regular on both models, and gasoline tank and tire irons on rear. At Grand Motor Car Co., 1517 South Jefferson avenue.

HAYNES.

The line of new Haynes cars this season consist of two sixes and one four-cylinder. The Vulcan electric gear shift is included in the standard equipment on all models, the Haynes company being among the first of the older manufacturers to adopt this improvement, which in addition to the electric starting and lighting system makes the Haynes an electrically equipped car throughout. Other changes in these models are: Pressure gasoline feed with tank, equipped with gasoline gauge, suspended at rear of chassis, and air gauge on cowl board; automatic air pressure pump driven from cam shaft, and auxiliary hand pump on cowl board; motor driven tire pump; ample storage space under both seats for tools, pump, and jack, battery box is under front seats, leaving running boards clear; leather kicking pads on lower half of rear of front seats, and one-piece metal cowl construction. At spring auto show.

HENDERSON.

Adoption of the six-cylinder car for the first time is a feature of the Henderson product for 1914, made by the Henderson Motor Car Co. of Indianapolis. In addition to the new six there is a new four called the de luxe, while the light four which was the sole chassis model for 1913 is retained. The new six-cylinder model has a 3.75x5.5 motor. The de luxe four has cylinders 4.125x5.5 inches in size. The light four, which is carried over from this year with minor refinements, is of the same bore as the new four, but its stroke is only 5.25 At spring auto show.

HUDSON.

Only six-cylinder models represent the Hudson Motor Car Co., of Detroit this year, it having retired from the four-cylinder field entirely. The model 37 four-cylinder type of 1913 is no longer made. The model 54 six-cylinder car is continued with a number of chassis and body changes, and late in the fall a light six was announced as a running mate.

This latest Hudson is known as model 40, and is really brought out in competition with the average high grade four-cylinder vehicle now on the market. With a weight of 2940 pounds, the car is said to be lighter than some of these fours, and its gasoline consumption is claimed to be nearly as low as that of the model 37 four. The price of this model is set at $1750 in touring and roadster designs at Hudson Phillips Motor Car Co., 2305 Locust street.

JACKSON.

Three Jackson models, all practically the same as the three models offered last year by the Jackson Automobile Co., Jackson, Mich., are on the market for 1914. They bear the same names, Olympic, Majestic, and Sultanic, and neither the first two, which are fours, and the last, which is a six, have been changed to any great degree other than bringing their equipment and design up to date in all respects, at Mound City Buggy Co., Broadway and Cass avenue.

JEFFERY.

The Thomas B. Jeffery company of Kenosha, Wis., has joined the ranks of the six-cylinder producers, although their chief seller for the coming year will be a four. The four-cylinder machine is listed at $1550 as a five-passenger touring car. It has the L head motor, a four-speed gearset with center control, splash pressure motor lubrication, with 116-inch wheel base and 34x4 tires. The car has many other features which add to the convenience of operation and comforts of riding. At Burns-Ramsden Motor Car Co., 5033 Delmar boulevard.

KISSEL KAR.

Three current models, introduced last July, and two models, the details of which are not yet available, constitute the line of pleasure cars offered by the Kissel Motor Car Co. of Hartford and Milwaukee, Wis. The current three consists of one four-cylinder chassis of 40-horsepower, with touring, runabout and sedan bodies, and two six-cylinder chassis of 48 and 60 horsepower, respectively, with touring runabout, sedan, limousine and berlin bodies. At St. Louis Kissel Car Co., 304 North Twelfth street.

LOCOMOBILE.

Four chassis make up the Locomobile company line. Two of them are left-hand and two right-hand drive. All the machines have six cylinders. The types are called the "38" and the "48." Little change has been made in the mechanism of the cars, but a new feature has been added in the placing of the gear shift lever close against the front seat in the center of the car and the emergency brake lever on the left. Many conveniences have been added. At Locomobile company, 3033 Locust street.

MARATHON.

The Marathon line for 1914 has been contracted for by the Herff-Brooks corporation and three models of much the same nature as the 1913 line are being offered. These chassis sizes are styled Champion, Winner and Runner, with corresponding horsepowers of 45, 35 and 25. The prices have been reduced so that the highest now is $1495 and the lowest at $925. The cars have the long stroke motor, full floating axle, full elliptical springs, electric lights and self-starter. At Lindell Auto Sales and Repair Co., 3428 Lindell avenue.

MARION.

The 1914 season marks the conversion of the Marion Motor Car Co., Indianapolis, to the six-cylinder field. Although the six has been marketed since August of last year, it is a 1914 production. The four-cylinder model is also continued The new car is known as the Marion G and comes in five-body types fitted to the same chassis. These are a five-passenger touring car, two-passenger foredoor roadster, and Bobcat speedster, as well as a four-passenger coupe and a five-passenger sedan. Another innovation for the Marion company is the adoption of the left-hand drive in connection with the center control. The latter has been a Marion feature for some time. The clutch of the six also marks a departure from former Marion practice in that the earlier clutches were

. All-Weather Treads
A Goodyear Innovation

Both for Dry Roads And Slippery

Here now is a tread which combines the advantage of the smooth and the anti-skid.

A tread for all wheels and all seasons. Economical, enduring, flat and smooth-running. And yet an anti-skid, when needed, with a bulldog grip.

It is double-thick, and made of rubber toughened by a secret process. Immensely wear-resisting.

So thick that the blocks are very deep. So tough that the blocks last for thousands of miles. They never all wear off.

The surfaces are flat and broad. The blocks are in alignment. So it runs like a plain tread. No vibration as there is with irregular projections.

The edges are sharp and they stay sharp. They are placed at an angle of 45 degrees to face the skidding direction. No other device has ever offered such tenacious grip to every sort of road.

The blocks widen out so they meet at the base. Thus the strains are distributed over the fabric just as with smooth-tread tires. With separate projections the strains are centered at small points in the fabric. That is what made anti-skids short-lived.

Yet this All-Weather tread, with all these advantages, costs less than the average anti-skid.

No man who makes a five-minute comparison will accept an old-type anti-skid. And no careful motorist, especially in winter, will go without this protection.

Let us convince you. Before you buy another tire, inspect this All-Weather tread.

Don't Risk Wet Roads Without Them

This All-Weather tread is a winter essential. No other anti-skid is so efficient, none so economical. It ought to be universal.

This tread has brought another advantage to Goodyear No-Rim Cut tires. Now we have four exclusive features, any one of which is big enough to win you to these tires.

First, these tires can't rim-cut. With clincher tires almost one in three are wrecked by this one ruin.

Second, these are the only tires which are final-cured on air-filled tubes, under actual road conditions. This is done to save the countless blowouts due to wrinkled fabric. It is done at an extra cost to us of $1500 daily.

Third, these are the only tires in which hundreds of large rubber rivets are formed to prevent tread separation.

And now, in addition, these tires alone bear these All-Weather treads.

Just think of these savings—no rim-cuts, fewer blowouts, less tread separation. And now all the savings of this All-Weather tread.

These savings have made the Goodyear tire the most popular tire in the world. It far outsells any other.

You are bound to come to them, as have hundreds of thousands. But now is the time to adopt them—now when this All-Weather tread is so necessary. For your own sake, come and inspect them. They will end a large part of your tire troubles.

Paige Dealers are Already Ordering 1914 Cars in Train Load Lots

The Payne Motor Company of Des Moines, Iowa has the honor of being the first dealer to order a full train load shipment of Paige cars this year.
This is said to be the first solid train load of automobiles ever shipped into Iowa.
So far as known it is the first order of this size to be received by any motor car manufacturer since January first.
It calls for immediate shipment of 90 Paige cars—making a train load of 30 freight cars. Made up exclusively of the Glenwood Model 36-5-Passenger Touring Cars.
Four other orders of similar size have been received by the Paige-Detroit Company—to be shipped a little later in the season.
There is a perfectly logical reason for the tremendous popularity of the Paige car.

You will recognize it at once when you see the car on exhibition at our show room.

of the cone type. The present one is of the multiple disk design with raybestos and steel facings. At Lewis Auto Co., Washington boulevard and Walton avenue.

MITCHELL.

Three chassis, two sixes, and a four make up the Mitchell line. A number of detail changes have been made by the Mitchell-Lewis Motor company, Racine, Wis., this year, although the distinctive features of Mitchell design have been maintained. The same three chassis as last year will be continued, but a modification of the European design used last year has been made to render the cars more suitable to American practice and American roads. The 4.25 by 7 inch four-cylinder car carries a two, four and five passenger body. The little six with its 4.25 by 6 inch motor has a wheelbase of 132 inches and carries the same bodies as the four. The big six with its 4.25 by 7 inch motor and 144-inch wheelbase carries a seven-passenger body only. At Weber Implement and Auto Co., 19th and Locust sts.

NATIONAL.

Rumors that have been thick and fast concerning a sensational announcement to be made by the National car builders at Indianapolis were confirmed when the new light six was recently announced at $2375. This is of the popular light six type, with a motor of the conventional cylinder dimensions of 3¾-inch bore and 5½-inch stroke. Also, like many of the new sixes, this latest one has its cylinders cast in a single block and these are of the L-head type, both intake and exhaust valve being on the right hand side of the engine. At George C. Brinkman Motor Car Co., 2824 Locust street.

OAKLAND.

The Oakland manufacturing policy for this year is one which aims to meet the requirements of every class of buyer by including in the Oakland Motor Car Co.'s output, both fours and six-cylinder machines. A new light six features the line, made at Pontiac, Mich., while two four-cylinder types which are practically continuous of the same models of last year are offered. The distinctive V-shaped radiator which distinguished the cars last year is continued on all models for 1914, while the noncontinuous running board construction used last year has been replaced by continuous cast aluminum running boards. At Oakland Automobile Co., 3424-6 Lindell avenue.

PAIGE.

There are two main changes in the Paige line for 1914. Principal among these changes are the improvements we have made on our model Glenwood; the design of the body has been considerably changed over last year to conform with the popular idea of the stream line body and the enthusiasm with which the public is receiving this model fully justifies the change. Mechanically, the principal changes lie in the Gray & Davis lamp equipment and the equipment of the new tire carrier, in the nature of a felloe mounted on the rear end of the car and which carries the tire firmly. In addition to these changes a new model has been introduced, which has been named by the factory "Speedway." This car is what may be termed a semi-speedster, inasmuch as quarter doors have been substituted for the usual stereotype open door. Wire wheels are included in the equipment and a removable top and windshield. At Frye Motor Car Co., 3327 Locust street.

PATHFINDER.

The deepening of the cushions and lowering the center of gravity of the Pathfinder sixes have necessitated a different arrangement of the carrying space. On the right hand running board is placed a tool box, and the battery box balances it on the other side of the car. Under the rear seat is a waterproof steel compartment for carrying suit cases and valuables when touring. A small compartment is provided under the front seat also. Thus it is unnecessary to ask a passenger to get out of the car to reach the tools or to refill the gasoline tank, as the latter is located under the cowl and is filled through an opening on the right side of the instrument board. The installation of the Pathfinder change speed lever and brake lever is featured by the absence of any projections above the floor boards whatsoever, excepting the levers themselves. The change speed lever is of the "walking stick" type and is located in the center of the car. At Spring Automobile Show.

PEERLESS.

The "Salon Sedan," a car with an interior resembling a cozy and luxuriously furnished drawing room, will be the feature of the Peerless. The car is a fit successor of the famous "Colonial brougham" of last season. In the body there are no seats of the ordinary motor car type, but chairs are used instead. These are adapted from the Georgian period and were designed and built by the Rorheimer-Brooks art studios. They have mahogany frames and are upholstered with heavy figured wool tapestry and have extra cushions of English down. Like all sedans, the body is short and rather low. It is cowled in front and decked behind. The extra tires are carried on the rear deck. There is only one door to the car—on the left side. The body might be described as semi-stream line. The chassis is the standard Peerless. At Peerless Motor Car Co., 5207 Delmar boulevard.

REO.

R. E. Olds announces that the new summer series of Reo V will sell for $1175 equipped. The equipment includes electric starter and lights, in addition to every other practical convenience. Compared with last year's model, which with this equipment sold for $1395, the reduction is wonderful. The idea Mr. Olds had in mind when first bringing out Reo V was this eventual saving, and the $220 reduction can be credited mainly to his policy of concentration on this one chassis. This summer series model, now exhibited at the show, has a stream line body of unusual distinction and beauty. The equipment also carries many new and individual ideas. One of the surprises of the year is that a car of such design, carrying such complete equipment and built as Mr. Olds builds cars, can be sold for $1175. At Kardell Motor Car Co., 4152 Olive street.

VELIE.

Velie products are marked by their entry into the six-cylinder field, although the four-cylinder cars which heretofore have formed the regluar output of the Velie company will be the leaders. The line embraces two four-cylinder models and a six-cylinder model. The two former are developments of earlier chassis. One of these is called the model 5 and is a development from the 4-32 of the present season, and the other, model 9, which is a development of the 4-40. The six-cylinder model is known as the 6-50 and is new throughout. A few sixes have been produced by the Velie factory in the past, but not as stock product. At Velie Motor Co., 3212 Locust street.

WHITE.

The White company announces the retention in 1914 of all three passenger car chassis, 30, 40 and 60, with new and highly developed body designs for all touring and inclosed cars, and a number of important improvements in chassis and appointments. The White long stroke monobloc engine, which has proved extremely economical in gasoline consumption, has been refined in minor ways. The prices remain unchanged. The improvements, however, give each model a higher relative value. The five-passenger 30 still lists at $2500; the seven-passenger 40 at $3500, and the seven-passenger Six 60 at $5000. The White 30 three-passenger coupe lists at $3250, the 40 coupe at $4100, and the Six coupe at $5400. The 40 Berline limousine sells for $5000 and the Six Berline is priced at $6300.

One of the improvements which applies to all White cars is the use of a single plate clutch running in oil, instead of the leather faced clutch used heretofore. At White Co. salesrooms, 3422-4 Lindell avenue.

ARGO ELECTRIC.

A disbeliever in yearly models, the Argo Electric Vehicle Co. announces a new series of electrics which consists of two chassis of 106½ and 110 inches wheel base respectively and with only detail refinements over the models of the previous series. Upon the 106½-inch wheel base chassis are mounted two body styles, a roadster and a brougham. The 110-inch car takes a limousine body. The only important mechanical change which has been made in Argo electrics has been the substitution of Hess double row bearings on the inside and outside of all wheels. The previous series has single row bearings. The bodies have been brought up to the minute and made more luxurious by detail refinements, the molding having been given especial attention. At Sunny Spring Auto Show.

RAUCH & LANG ELECTRIC

Electric pleasure cars of the Rauch & Lang Carriage Co., Cleveland, O., are characterised by a change from bevel drive in the rear to worm drive. This feature obtains in the roadster, the club roadster and the demi-brougham models, while the town car will remain bevel gear driven. The prices of these cars will remain the same as last year with the exception of the brougham. The catch type, model J-4, is offered in five-passenger form. The latter comes with three different controlling arrangements, one driven from the front, another from the rear and the third a selective dual control. The controlling mechanism on the selective dual control car is interlocking, as are the brakes. At Rauch & Lang salesrooms, on Delmar boulevard.

CASE.

For 1914 the J. I. Case T. M. Co., Racine, Wis., has discontinued the model 30, is building two new fours, the 25 and 35, and will carry over but one 1913 model, the 40. The feature of the entire Case line is the equipment. This includes the Westinghouse two-unit cranking and lighting system, Warner autometer, clock, electric horn, extra tire on a rim, two extra inner tubes, spark plug pump on the 40. Weed tire chains, wind shield and work light. The new 25 is a 110-inch wheelbase car, selling at 1250 in 1914. At Case branch house, 5143 Delmar boulevard.

The Sensation at New York and Chicago
The Biggest Buy Ever Offered
The VULCAN "27" is designed to fill the strong demand for a reliable, low-priced, light car, equaling in quality and performance the higher-priced cars on the market. As will be seen by the illustration, the VULCAN has the appearance far superior to the average $1000 to $1500 cars, but the price is only slightly more than the extremely low-priced cars.
The VULCAN is not designed along freakish or radical lines, but on standard principles of proven practicability. Its superiority has been attained through the perfection of details. Simplicity and durability have been the two main features aimed at throughout. Nevertheless, ease of operation and comfortable riding qualities have been attained in a degree to please the most fastidious.
MADE TO "STAY SOLD"—NOT MERELY TO SELL
The VULCAN is put together to stay. There is no loosening or dropping off of nuts. We use either a lock washer, cotter pin with castilated nut, or some other good method of securing all nuts to prevent any possibility of trouble of this kind.

When we added automobiles to the line of Case Products our instructions to the department were:
"For 70 years, you know, we have made the finest machinery in its line.
"Here is a demand for automobiles from those who know us; from users of our machinery whose fathers and grandfathers, too, use Case Products. We must give them a car that presents greater value than is found in any other car.
"Here are 9000 dealers and 65 branch houses all ready to market such cars. That saves a great selling cost.
"Here are savings on salaries and overhead items of cost made possible through our great organization.
"We want you to plan a car just as if these savings were not possible; price it as would the maker who builds nothing but automobiles and who therefore lacks our abilities to produce and sell so economically.
"Then add to this car all these savings in the form of additional values. Use better materials and construction and equip completely.
"What we must have is an uncommon value to sell at a common price. Use this money we save to produce it.
"Now build the car!"
The result is a car that has gained a place among the favored makes.
See the Case "35" at $1850. Note its beauty, style and comfort.
But buy no car for equipment, style and finish, merely.
Three-fourths of a car's real value is hidden underneath in material.
Be careful who makes your car, for you must take the maker's word for these qualities. Engineers can't judge them save in laboratory tests.
We have written a book dealing with Hidden Values. It describes in detail the Case "35" at $1850, the Case "25" at $1250 and the famous "40" at $2300. All these cars carry Case Standard Complete Equipment.

FIRE IN HOTEL ROUTS 31 GUESTS IN ZERO WEATHER

They Refuse to Leave Building and Take Refuge in Basement in Night Clothes.

GIRL LEAPS FROM ESCAPE

Climbs Down in Scanty Attire, and Jumps When Ten Feet From the Ground.

Fire, caused from an overheated furnace, routed 31 guests of the Mozart Hotel, 2517 Lucas avenue, in zero weather, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Because of the cold the guests sought refuge in the basement after it was learned that a wooden shaft, leading from the furnace to the upper floors, had burned away.

Miss Jean Burke, clad only in her night clothes, had started to climb down a fire escape. When she reached a point about ten feet from the ground she became excited and jumped. She was only slightly bruised. Miss Stella Seider, Mandus A. Halderman and Dr. Kosmas Pappalambros had preceded Miss Burke down the fire escape.

The fire was discovered by Miss Elka Janson, daughter of the proprietor, Henry Janson. When she awoke her room was filled with smoke. Miss Janson awakened her father, mother and 13-year-old brother, Henry. They then awakened the guests of the hotel, who refused to leave the building because of the cold. The damage to the building is estimated at $500.

Vogel's Music Library Destroyed in $3000 Fire at Home.

A library of music which Guide Vogel had been collecting for 20 years was destroyed by fire which partly destroyed the Vogel home, 914 North Whittier street, after spreading from the home of Herbert Tallon, 912 North Whittier street, at 1 o'clock yesterday morning.

Vogel saw the flames from the fire from a street car as he was returning to his home from the Shubert Theater, where he leads the orchestra. It was the second time within a month that Vogel's house has been damaged, fire on the night of Jan. 22 damaging his property about $1000.

The fire started in the Tallon home while the Tallons were away visiting friends. A high wind carried the flames to the Vogel house next door. Mrs. Vogel and her two sons, Guido Jr. and Benjamin, were in the house at the time and sought shelter with neighbors. The damage to the Vogel house and furniture was about $3000.

Firemen Break Into Saloon in Search for Blaze.

Fire thought to have started from crossed wires did small damage yesterday morning, at 2 o'clock, in the power house of the United Railways Co., at 2423 North Spring avenue. A still alarm was sent in, and the men of Engine Company No. 17, in responding, passed John Lamb's saloon nearby, and seeing a bright glare, thought the fire was in the saloon. After unloading their hose lines and breaking in the doors they found it was only the glare of the stove getting the saloon warm for early morning customers. After a little delay the firemen discovered the fire in the power house and extinguished it before much damage was done.

CHRISTABEL PANKHURST DENIES ESTRANGEMENT

Says Miss Sylvia's Suffragette Movement Always Has Been Independent.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—Miss Christabel Pankhurst told the Post-Dispatch correspondent today that it was not true that there was any personal estrangement between herself and her sister or her mother or that she intended to return to England.

"There is nothing new," Miss Pankhurst said, "in the relation between Sylvia's East End Federation of Suffragettes and the W. S. P. U., Sylvia's movement having been independent. They always have had even separate funds, and there has been no connection between the two bodies."

Miss Christabel said the story that she disapproved of the recent violent militant manifestations, because she wanted to return to England, was untrue. She was just as contented here, she said, as she had been for two years, and she thinks everything is going splendidly in England.

PASTOR - SLAYER GUILTY

Convicted of Manslaughter in Feud; Gets 5 Years.

PURVIS, Miss., Feb. 7.—Rev. Daniel Granthan, pastor of a Baptist church here, today was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to five years in prison.

He was convicted of killing George Burkhalter in a controversy growing out of an alleged feud between the Grantham and Burkhalter families.

Special prayers have been offered for the accused minister and many petitions circulated. Rev. Grantham went to trial Thursday. Witnesses said the killing occurred Jan. 17, 1913, from a feud over ownership of a drove of hogs.

MAN IS FOUND DEAD

Body on Sidewalk With Skull Fractured.

A man with letters in his pocket bearing the name of O. E. Butler, Granite City, was found dead on the sidewalk in front of 819 Franklin avenue, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The body was taken to the city hospital for examination, where it was found that he suffered a fractured skull. The police think he slipped and fell.

President Wilson and Bryan Write of Tilden

THE WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, Jan. 20, 1914.

I AM very much obliged to you for affording me an opportunity to express my admiration for the character and achievements of Samuel J. Tilden. His example did much to set up in our time the standards of conscientious public service and of inflexible courage, clarified by intelligence, which have made it possible to turn the light into dark places and quicken the consciences of public servants in every rank. I congratulate you on your thought of an anniversary memorial to Mr. Tilden.

Sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

He Set a High Standard, Says Bryan.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.

To the Editor of the New York World.

TILDEN has many claims to the affections of Democrats. He was the first man to lead a successful national fight for our party after the war. I say successful because fair-minded Republicans will concede now that he was actually elected. He is remembered, too, because he believed that the party could afford to do right even if in doing right it was compelled to oppose its own organization. He set a high standard and made a profound impression upon his fellow men and upon his party.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

TILDEN CENTENARY CELEBRATION IN NEW YORK TODAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Arrangements were completed today for the observance of the centenary of Samuel J. Tilden which will occupy three days beginning tomorrow, and consist of ceremonies in New Lebanon, Columbia County, where Tilden was buried; a joint session of the State Senate and Assembly Monday in the Assembly chamber, Albany, and a public meeting Tuesday evening in Carnegie Hall.

The commissioners in charge of the celebration will go to New Lebanon tomorrow, place a floral emblem on Tilden's grave, and attend services at 3 o'clock in the Congregational Church. Commissioner George Wilson Smith will preside at these services and there will be addresses by Commissioner Talcot Williams, Father Smith, a local priest, and Commissioner Albert E. Henschel.

Gov. Glynn will preside at the meeting in Albany. Addresses will be made by Lieut. Gov. Robert F. Wagner, Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet and Commissioner Talcott Williams.

Herman Ridder will be the first speaker at the Carnegie Hall meeting. Mayor Mitchel will make an address, followed by the unveiling of an oil portrait of Tilden executed by Franklin Barber Clark. President Wilson will press the electric button in Washington, thus releasing the screen of the portrait.

Augustus Thomas will read selections from the writings of Tilden, and addresses will be made by Francis Lynde Stetson, Gov. Simeon E. Baldwin of Connecticut and Charles E. Fairchild, who was Secretary of the Treasury under President Cleveland. Miss Anna Case of the Metropolitan company will sing.

Eight Hurt in Wreck on Elevated.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—A rear-end collision on the elevated tracks today injured eight persons slightly and caused considerable delay. The rear coach of an Aurora, Elgin & Chicago train was struck by a Humboldt Park elevated train on the bridge over the railroad tracks west of the river.

WOMAN, 94, SEEKS SUPPORT IN COURT FROM A GIRL, 6

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Julia McKenna, 94 years old, once the common-law wife of James McKenna, a Chicago capitalist, today petitioned the County Court to compel a girl, 6 years old, whom she has never seen, to support her.

Until she lost the sight of an eye the aged woman supported herself by sewing.

The child, who figures in this unique case is Viola Hudson, who has fallen heir to an estate valued at $300,000, which McKenna left 10 years ago to his adopted daughter, Mrs. Viola Hudson, the girl's mother.

Mrs. Hudson died a few weeks ago in a gas-filled room in London, and it was feared at first she had been murdered. What is purported to be her last will, writtten in a scrawling hand, was found beside her. It gave property worth $5000 to new acquaintances.

The property which Mrs. Hudson inherited from McKenna was entailed under his will and is in turn inherited by her daughter.

McKenna and the woman who brought suit today lived together for 35 years. Then they quarreled and separated. Mrs. McKenna brought suit for nonsupport, and with the filing of this suit the world learned for the first time the union of the two had not been sanctioned by a civil or religious ceremony

The Supreme Court decided in this case that a man could not be sued for separate maintenance by a common-law wife, but Mrs. McKenna was awarded $13,500 for breach of contract, McKenna admitting he had agreed to pay her $30 a month and medical bills.

5 VON SCHRADER HEIRS OPPOSED BY SISTER, 70

She Says Managing Estate for 42 Years Kept Her From Marrying.

SHE WANTS BIGGEST SHARE

Estate or Her Mother, Who Made No Will, Is Estimated at $1,000,000.

That there has been dissention over financial matters for years among the six sons and daughters of the late Mrs. Olivia Morrison von Schrader, the heirs to her $1,000,000 estate adjoining the Log Cabin Club, was the statement yesterday by her daughter, Mis Eloise von Schrader, 70 years old. She has retained an attorney, Julius R. Nolte, to defend her interests, declaring that her services for 42 years as manager of the estate entitle her to a share greater than one-sixth, which, as Mrs. von Schrader left no will, would be the portion of each heir unless litigation decided otherwise.

Miss von Schrader regards as opponents her brothers, George M. von Schrader of St. Louis and Otto U. von Schrader of Laurel, Md., and her sisters, Mrs. W. E. Clymer and Mrs. Julie Hodgsdon of Philadelphia. She considers her third brother, Col. Frederick von Schrader, U. S. A., retired, of Washington, as an ally. All the heirs, including Miss von Schrader, are independently wealthy in their own right. Their father, Baron Frederick William von Schrader, was a Prussian nobleman, and they are descended on their mother's side from old and distiguished St. Louis families.

Her brothers, George and Otto, appeared in the Probate Court at Clayton on the afternoon of her mother's funeral with a petition for the appointment of themselves as co-administrators of the estate. The day following she appeared in court to protest against their course. Mrs. von Schrader died Monday, at the age of 94, and the funeral was held Wednesday.

As manager for her mother, which position she assumed at the death of her father in 1872, Miss von Schrader explained that she paid taxes, collected rents, made leases and directed repairs on the city property, besides superintending the farm and for 20 years operating a dairy, until her mother's decline, beginning in the year of the World's Fair, compelled the daughter to give her constant attention as a nurse.

These duties, she said, caused her to sacrifice the social positions that could have been hers because of her wealth and her father's rank as a Prussian Baron, and to forfeit her chances of marriage. She considered these personal opportunities, she asserted, as secondary to her duty to her mother and to the family property.

It was suggested to Mrs. von Schrader several years ago, according to her daughter, that she make a will, but she refused, saying: "I expect to live longer than some of the heirs who would get my money."

Brother Controls Personalty.

In order to exclude Otto von Schrader from authority over the estate, Miss von Schrader consented that her brother, George, should be named administrator by Probate Judge Shackelford. This gives him control over the personalty, valued at only $1000. If he desires to handle the income from the real estate he will have to apply to the Probate Court for permission and give bond for twice the amount of the income. The farm was purchased at a forced sale in 1883 for $30,000. Its present value is estimated at nearly $1,000,000.

Miss von Schrader has not decided upon what legal steps, if any, she will take to obtain extra compensation.

George von Schrader, the only one of the heirs who is in St. Louis, said last night that others seemed to have more information than he concerning his sister's feelings and intentions, and that he would not discuss her claim to a share larger than that of the others in the estate.

NEGLECT THE CARE OF YOUR SCALP AND YOUR HAIR WILL BECOME A DISGRACE

The hair is more exposed and hence more liable to accumulate dust and dirt than any other portion of the body.

In spite of this, the hair receives, as a rule, the least attention, and no real effort is made to keep it in a clean, sanitary condition.

If dandruff contagion is not combated the scalp soon becomes encrusted with scale-like accumulations. Result—the hair dies and falls out.

There is no cause for surprise in this phenomenon; it is natural and happens in every instance where the care of the hair and scalp is overlooked.

You can fortify yourself against hair loss and keep your scalp in a clean, healthy condition by the intelligent use of Newbro's Herpicide.

The eradication of dandruff is only one of the many benefits which may be derived when Herpicide is regularly applied. The absence of falling hair, a cessation of that terrible itching of the scalp and an increased beauty and life of one's tresses are all evidences of the great efficiency of Newbro's Herpicide. It has an exquisite odor and is a delightful hair dressing.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50-cent and $1.00 sizes, is sold by all dealers, who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Send 10c in stamps for booklet and sample to the Herpicide Co., Dept. [illegible], Detroit, Mich.

FLAMING LAVA FLOODED DOZEN JAPAN VILLAGES

First Detailed Description of Destruction by Sakurajima Eruption Is Given.

THREE TOWNS SWALLOWED

Fires Surged Upward While Audience Was Viewing Last Days of Pompeii.

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7.—The first detailed description of the terrible eruption of Sakurajima, on the southern coast of Japan, as received here today by mail from the Tokio correspondent of the Associated Press, places the loss of life conservatively estimated at "several hundreds."

Not only was the Island of Sakurajima itself, with its dozen villages, flooded by a torrent of flaming lava and buried under a hail of incandescent rocks, but the beautiful city of Kagoshima, overlooking the Golden Gate of Japan, was partially destroyed, several towns and villages on the mainland to the east were damaged and the villages of Akamidzu, Yokoyama and Koike were literally swallowed up by the molten lava. Until they are dug out, no specific count of lives lost will be possible. The account follows:

"While a Tokio audience of Japanese was assembled at the Imperial Theater viewing moving pictures of the last days of Pompeii, the subterranean fires of their own empire, imprisoned for more than a century, were surging upward beneath the Isle of Sakurajima, the southernmost port of the realm. Soon began an eruption so fierce and terrible as to take place at once with the historic demonstrations of Vesuvius.

Shrieks of Terror Fill the Air.

"The 22,000 inhabitants of Sakurajima fled wildly in all directions. Shrieks of terror filled the air from one end of the island to the other. From thickly settled villages and from houses embosomed in groves of oranges, peaches and plums, the farmers ran to the shores of the bay. Horses neighed and snorted in terror and domestic cattle bellowed and cried to be let loose. Many freed themselves and began a wild stampede through and over their human companions.

"Many old men refused to try to save themselves, and literally had to be dragged along by the younger. Women and children were sent off first, the women carrying their infants slung across their backs, their hands filled with portable household goods. Some shielded themselves with mattresses; others wore metal and earthen pots for helmets. It was a wild, pell-mell rush; a flight of indescribable panic and confusion.

"For all that the fearful catastrophe was so overwhelming in its sudden descent, there had been preliminary warnings. Two months before a traveler reclining leisurely on the summit of the long mountain ridge of Yoshinogahara, which plunges abruptly down into the water of Kogoshima Gulf, was surprised to see smoke drifting from new gullies in the sides of the open peak of Mitake on Sakurajima.

Earthquakes as Warnings.

"It was a thick bank of smoke, but from Kogoshima would be noticed, if at all, only as a fringe of haze. The traveler returned to Kogoshima and told a friend what he had seen.

"We discussed, rather flippantly perhaps," he said afterward, "what would be likely to happen if Sakurajima were actually to 'go off.' Now I know a good deal more of that than I ever wished to learn.

"The next warning came Sunday, Jan. 11, in the form of severe earthquakes, accompanied by resonant cannonading from the heights of Sakurajima. With increasing violence came shock after shock. Houses toppled, brick walls crumbled, as if from a vast cave of echoes, rose a horrible sound of grinding and roaring up through the quaking crust of the earth.

"By Monday morning the midnight glow that had spread like a scarlet canopy over the volcano changed to a lofty column of twisting smoke, laced with flames and shot with the trail of fiery missiles.

Great Shower of Ashes.

"Dawn changed to twilight. A great shower of ashes rained on the panic-stricken population. The ashes became flowing cinders and the cinders flaming rocks. Sparkling lava gushed from the mouth of the several craters, leaped down from cliff to cliff and ledge to ledge.

"Volcanoes long supposed to be extinct in other portions of the realm leaped into action. Ashes fell like snow as far north as the cities of Osaka and Kobe, as far south as the Bonin Islands, and as far west as Dairen. The air was weighted with sulphurous fumes, and distant Tokio itself was mantled in a sinister, yellow cloud, carrying terror to the masses and producing among even the most intelligent and courageous a sense of impending doom.

"By this time the cascades of lava and the ceaseless, merciless rain of 'meteors' had set fire to the sugar cane and bamboo forests. Houses burst into fire as if from spontaneous combustion.

Heat Was Unbearable.

"Arrived at the shore, the villagers and peasants flung themselves into sampans moored on the beach or plunged into the gulf. The mountain was now a roaring furnace and the heat was unbearable.

"From Kagoshima a dozen steamers came full speed to the rescue. Their prompt aid and that of sailing and rowing craft saved thousands from drowning.

"But in the meantime things were not going well in Kagoshima itself. A strong east wind filled the streets with hot ashes and red hot cinders. Houses began to collapse under the weight or to catch fire from the cinders.

"There followed a mad rush of the inhabitants, thoroughly infected with the terror of the burned and crazed islanders, for the railroad station. Splendid discipline there saved the day. Box freight cars were backed on the sidings and with remarkable promptness the crowds were carried northward to safety."

"To the westward began a steady flight along the highways. A number of Americans, among them several missionaries, escaped in this direction, some of them walking 20 miles through the night.

"As soon as the authorities at Tokio had an inkling of the serious nature of the disaster, a dozen warships were dispatched to the gulf. They found the waters furiously agitated and thickly crusted with pumice stone.

"By the 13th Kagoshima was virtually vacant. From the Island of Sakurajima, rescue parties took off 33 islanders. Those that remained were without food.

Bombardment for a Week.

"For a week the volcano continued intermittently its flow of white hot lava and bombardment of incandescent cinders. The boldest inhabitants ventured back again and again only to be driven off again.

"Some conception of the immensity of the outpouring may be had when it is known that the lava pushed its way across the Gulf of Kagoshima, which is from 40 to 80 fathoms deep, to the mainland, converting an island into a peninsula.

"An official estimate of the damage done gives 50,000 destitute, 12 bridges destroyed, thousands of stone fences strewn about and more than 12,000 houses either destroyed or so badly damaged that they must be rebuilt.

"This physical damage is for Kagashima alone. On the island, the destruction was entire. Sakurajima is a waste of pumice and lava, naked and desolate."

And It Makes You Sick It Is a Sure Sign That You Need Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

It is time to pay attention to your stomach when the sight or the smell of food makes you sick, for were this not the fact the stomach would not cause such disgust upon the part of the sense of smell and taste when meal time comes around.

All the world has to eat. You men who walk to your meals like you do to a drug store for medicine, should at once realize that there is a relief for you. This relief is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Dyspeptic: "How can a man live in a smell like that?"

Taste, sight and smell all have an influence upon digestion. If one eats something that does not taste good one retards the work of digestion because the juices necessary to digest the thing eaten will not flow in correct proportion.

On the other hand, good food will always excite the taste through actual contact with the food in the mouth or through the sight or sense of smell, unless the stomach knows that it cannot digest it.

We thus readily learn that the simple act of giving nature the digestive fluids she needs, will bring back all the joys of good eating, and tasting, smelling and seeing dainty dishes will excite a rousing appetite.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are composed of natural ingredients that a worn out digestion simply welcomes with a wild delight. They enrich the stomach juices quickly so that if you want to eat an out-of-the-ordinary-after-the-theater sort of a dinner, just carry a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in your pocket, take it after the meal and you will digest that meal.

Your druggist will supply you with a box no matter where you live. Price 50 cents.—ADV.

INQUIRY STARTED INTO STEEL TRUST REBATE CHARGES

Commerce Commission Announces Hearings on Reports of $75,000,000 Refunds.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Preliminary steps have been taken to institute a drastic inquiry and ascertain whether the allegation that $75,000,000 has been paid to the Steel Trust in rebates during the last six years is true. The inquiry will cover all branches of the great corporation. Announcement was made today by the Interstate Commerce Commission that it will comply with the Senate resolution introduced by Senators Lane of Oregon and Norris, for an investigation of the charges. No date is set for the opening of the hearing, but it will be begun within three or four weeks.

A copy of today's notice will be served on all railroads and steel companies affiliated with the big corporation, including the Carnegie Steel Co., the Illinois Steel Co. and the Indiana Steel Co., the National Tube Co., the Shelby Steel Tube Co., the American Steel and Wire Co., the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co., the Sharon Tin Plate Co., the American Bridge Co., the Union Steel Co., the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co., the H. C. Frick Coke Co., the Interstate Transfer Co. and the Spirit Lake Transfer Co.

The hearings probably will be opened in New York and continued in Pittsburg, Cleveland and Chicago. The complete records of the Steel corporation for the last six years will be gone over, and the commission indicates that it will require the books, documents and papers of the concerns under investigation.

The original resolution instructed the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate to investigate and to summon before it W. H. Green, to tell what he knew of the rebates given to the Steel corporation. Green, on the stand before the committee, declined to tell what he knew, except to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A substitute resolution offered by Senator Norris, "requesting" the Interstate Commerce Commission to make the investigation, was the one finally passed, and this contains no reference to Green or any other witness.

Paul Poiret Uses American Silks in Designing Gowns for 1914.

American silks will be used this season for the first time in the finest Paris dresses made by Paul Poiret, king of fashionable costumers. This news is of great importance to American manufacturers and merchants, and to American women who are wearers of the finest fabrics. It will mean that, with the Paris designs at hand, American makers can supply the same dresses weeks and months earlier than they are now obtainable in this country.

Poiret has made eight designs, to each of which he has given a name, in 24 colors and combinations. These designs will be displayed in St. Louis by the B. Nugent & Bro. Dry Goods Co., and in New York and Philadelphia by the John Wanamaker stores.

Hodiamont Bank's Young President.

The Hodiamont Bank, 6142 Bartmer avenue, has elected G. A. Pauly Jr., 6223 Washington boulevard, president. He is 22 years old and is said to be the youngest bank president in Missouri.

CONGRESS TO PUT TRUST PROBLEMS UP TO PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—How far the administration shall go with regulation or prohibition of holding companies; perfection of the pending interstate trade commission measure; drafting a measure giving the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to regulate railroad securities and in efforts to assure harmonious action, are tasks in store for committees in Congress in charge of the administration anti-trust legislative program.

Having had the subject of trust legislation before them two weeks in considering bills outlined by President Wilson in his message to Congress and listening to suggestions from citizens, House and Senate leaders have a clearer understanding of what is before them, but many points have arisen upon which further light is desired. Further conferences with the President are contemplated in the near future.

Senate leaders sought today to placate some of the Republican members of the Interstate Commerce Committee who have expressed indignation because amendments proposed to the interstate trade commission bill and considered in full committee were rejected by the Democratic members in an executive session of their own. Senator Cummins, author of several of the proposed amendments, and Senator Clapp left a meeting of the committee yesterday when they learned of this action.

Senator Newlands, chairman of the committee, and some of his colleagues told the Republican members today that their co-operation in perfecting the trust bills was earnestly desired and assured them that no final disposition of amendments was intended to be taken in conferences of Democratic members alone.

House judiciary and interstate commerce committees will continue their hearings next week. Proposed legislation against holding companies is one of the principal tasks in hand, now being considered by the Judiciary Subcommittee, which has decided that this legislation should be restricted to the acquisition by holding companies of stock in competing concerns.

Representative Morgan of Oklahoma told the House Committee on Interstate Commerce today that the administration bill to create a Federal Trade Commission was objectionable because it would give the committee jurisdiction over all corporations engaged in interstate business instead of limiting jurisdiction to large corporations commonly known as trusts.

D. D. D. in Hospitals; Standard Skin Remedy

How many hospital patients, suffering the frightful itch, the raw scorching pain of skin disease, have been soothed to sleep by a soothing fluid washed in by the nurse's hands?

That fluid is the famous D. D. D. Prescription for eczema.

THE SUPERVISING NURSE of one of our prominent Catholic institutions (name of nurse and institute on application) writes regarding a patient: "The disease had eaten her eyebrows away. Her nose and lips had become disfigured. Since the use of D. D. D. her eyebrows are growing, her nose and face have assumed their natural expression."

How many eczema sufferers are paying their doctors for regular treatment and are being treated with this same soothing, healing fluid?

DR. GEO. T. RICHARDSON frankly writes "D. D. D. is superior to anything I have ever found. Soft and soothing, yet a powerful agent."

To do the work, D. D. D. Prescription must be applied according to directions given in the pamphlet around every bottle. Follow these directions—and see!

And it certainly takes away the itch at once—the moment the liquid is applied. The skin is soothed—calmed—so thoroughly refreshed—delightfully cooled.

All druggists of standing have the famous specific as well as the efficient D. D. D. Skin Soap.

But we are so confident of the merits of this prescription that we will refund the purchase price of the first full-size bottle if it fails to reach your case. You alone are to judge.

So Says a St. Louis Woman Writing About the Pure Essence Mentho-Laxene.

STOPS COUGHS AND COLDS QUICKLY.

This woman writes that she had read scores of advertisements about Essence Mentho-Laxene but doubted if it was a good, pure remedy. She bought a bottle of her druggist, and ends her letter to the proprietors with the words "believe in it and swear by it." Thousands have expressed the same belief, but perhaps not so graphically.

Mentho-Laxene really and truly is the finest, purest concentrated medicine in the whole world for a cold, cough or catarrh. Use it a few hours and all distressing symptoms are hushed and banished—and there is not a drop of opiates in it. After the very first dose, you actually feel its soothing, beneficial effects on the nasal, throat and lung passages. Guaranteed to please or money back.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets stimulate the bowels and liver, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system.

They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after-effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or disagreeable effects of any kind.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O. All druggists.

STOPPED HIS DRINKING

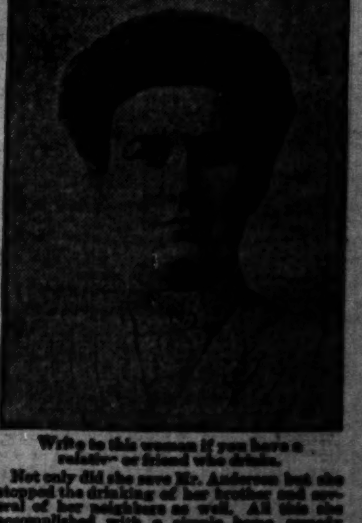
This Wife and Mother Saved Her Husband Over Ten Years Ago.

SHE WILL GLADLY TELL YOU HOW

FREE

Write to Her Today. Send No Money. She Has Nothing to Sell.

For over 20 years James Anderson of Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over ten years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.



Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks.

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished with a simple home remedy which anyone can get and use. And she now desires to tell every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, just what it is.

It can be given secretly if desired and every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly, in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks however, and that is that you do not send money for she has nothing to sell. Her address is [illegible] Hill Ave., Hillburn, N. Y.

NOTE: This offer should be accepted at once by all who have dear ones who drink. In fact, every one who has to contend in any way with drunkenness should know about it. Therefore, if you do not write Mrs. Anderson yourself CUT THIS NOTICE OUT and mail it to a friend who could use her advice. And even though you do answer it, MAIL IT TO SOMEONE ELSE who you think would like to know what Mrs. Anderson used. In other words, let this notice reach as many as possible for Mrs. Anderson will reply to every letter, no matter how many she receives.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

ROCK ISLAND SHARES ARE CENTER OF BEAR RAID ON NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

Common and Preferred Close Five Points Lower on the Week.

LONDON MARKET MIXED

Recent Rapid Rise in Prices Causes Rather Heavy Realizing.

Rock Island Shares Sell at New Low Records.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Weakness in the Rock Island securities again unsettled the stock market today. The common and preferred shares, as well as the collateral trust bonds, fell to new low records. Selling of the securities probably originated chiefly with the bear element, which has recently resumed an attitude of aggression. At the office of the Rock Island company it was said that the several plans of proposed reorganization were still under consideration and that no definite announcement was likely to be made for some time.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review today, says:

"The London comment on the bewildering rapidity with which money rates in that market went from unusual stringency to unusual ease, has been 'that the supposed exacting requirements of the year-end financing had been over-provided for.' No doubt the explanation is correct, for our own end the continental markets as well as for those of London. But it suggests two reflections.

"One has to do with the singular unwillingness of European financiers last year to draw a similar and equally obvious conclusion from the perfectly comfortable passing of Berlin through its mid-year 'settlements,' the unruffled composure of the Paris market during its September liquidation, and the total absence of commotion in Wall street's autumn money market, pending the movement of the crops.

"Each of these well-known tests of a money situation had been approached with fear and trembling, and with abundant warnings by the wise. Each of them proved by the sequel that it had been 'over-provided for.' But the natural inference, that prevalent ideas as to the nature of the financial position were entirely erroneous did not seem to be entertained.

"Such curious persistency in a mistaken view was bound to result in some abrupt surprises when the eyes of the community should at last be pried open.

Past Opinion Wrong.

"The other consideration is that there may have been some fallacy in the favorite notion of 1913 that 'demands on the world's capital had outrun supply' or that 'available reserves of capital had been exhausted.' There have been occasions to which such description would apply.

"One of them came in 1906, when M. Leroy-Beaulieu pretty clearly demonstrated that the scale on which the investment and speculative markets were absorbing capital had exceeded the whole world's annual savings and had therefore imposed a crushing strain on credit.

"The result, which at this distance we can see was entirely logical, was the panic of 1907.

"But there was a minimum of resemblance to that state of things in the situation of 1913, and the inference is fair enough that last year's real trouble was not the imagined 'scarcity of available capital,' but the political mistrustfulness of European capital, which, beginning when its attitude of suspicion was justified, grew to be such a habit that it continued when all excuse for it had ceased.

"It is as evident now, as it was six months ago, that the difficulties of our own market, such as they were, had their origin with Europe.

"The foreign markets, the foreign apprehensions, the foreign hoarding, the foreign money stringency were the dead weight on the American situation, which without them ought to have witnessed genuine prosperity during 1913.

Our Position Is Strong.

"But the corollary to this is that our own fundamental position is as much stronger than Europe's, even with the visible signs of Europe's greatly improved condition, as it was last autumn, with Europe's weakness and despondency at their worst.

"In so far as the natural supplies of capital for our market's use last year, were curtailed through the necessity of leaving them with financial Europe, to that extent we now have a credit fund on which to draw, with Europe in vastly better shape to spare it.

"In so far as the natural activity of our industries, in response to the healthy demand from home consumers, was restricted through this partial embargo on supplies of money, to that extent there is lost ground which should be made up this coming season, now that the restriction is removed.

"We still have our factors of uncertainty. There are and will be incidents like the confused Rock Island controversy, concerning which it is growing more and more difficult to speak with patience.

"We shall indulge in 'crop scares' and in due course may be troubled with short crops. Yet our accumulated resources, after such a year of voluntary and not forced economic retrenchment as 1913 must be unusually great. It is certainly true also that our own political clouds have lifted.

Political Outlook Clouded.

"Opposing views are still expressed as to just how much practical significance is to be attached to the much discussed 'reconciliation of Government and business,' as submitted to Congress.

"The Trades Commission bill, with its needless powers of inquisitorial annoyance, was rather a bucket of cold water on the glowing hopes of the business community. But the surprisingly general skepticism over the prospect of any such bill passing in its original form is itself a sign of an altered situation.

"A knowledge that the wild horses at Washington, at which frightened glances were cast six or eight months ago, are now moving in efficient teams, with hardly an observable pull at the bits or touch of the whip, is back of the existing feeling of reassurance.

"The curious course of events, at this week's Washington hearing on the resuscitated Stock Exchange bill of the late Pujo Committee, strongly reflected the new and reasonable political atmosphere.

"A congressional committee insisting on the common-sense view of public questions and treating with something like impatience efforts to subordinate everything to the high-strung emotional view of them, is an instructive contrast with some congressional committees of a year or so ago.

"Rock Island common stock closed 4⅝ points lower on the week and the preferred 5⅛ down. Other shares were 1 to 1½ points off."

RISE ON THE LONDON STOCK MARKET HALTS

Traders Take Profits and Cause a Rather Sharp Setback.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—In view of this week's continued reaction in Wall street, our market finds some difficulty in making up its mind on the immediate outlook in America. But belief is crystallizing that, aside from other influences, the ultimate influence of your tariff and currency acts will be distinctly good. Possibly, however, they will benefit trade conditions more than the Stock Exchange.

In our own market the climax of the movement towards easy money has probably now been reached. Lombard street experts nevertheless believe that money will continue cheap during at least the next six months.

Curiously enough, even the floating of the numerous new security issues of the past week or two, is increasing the ease of money.

This is because so many of them constitute funding operations, with a view to repaying loans previously made by bankers.

The ready taking of these new issues by the public, is enabling the bankers to lend more freely, and precisely similar causes are operating in the case of Stock Exchange; the violence of their rise being accentuated by the previous widely-extended bear position and the scarcity of stocks.

Stock Rise Too Rapid.

The rise has undoubtedly gone ahead too fast; but the recovery has not necessarily been overdone. It is true, consols are now above the highest price of last year; but conditions are totally different.

Then dear money and strained international politics governed the whole situation. It is therefore, believed that consols may settle down somewhere near the present level, and the same remark applies to kindred high-grade stocks.

The real problem is whether trade is shortly to revive, and commodity prices to keep up. If so, investment markets may be unable to rise far.

A further reduction in our bank rate is not just now considered likely. The present great ease in private discount rates has been accentuated by the fact that the Bank of England has apparently put £6,000,000 sterling into bills within three weeks. These are believed to be short-term investments, thus giving the Bank a reserve power over the general situation, later in the year.

The French position is improving, but it is still strained. The real objection to the offering of the Belgian and Hungarian loans here, is that Paris was temporarily unable to look after them. But for our market's assistance, and the improved position here, there would probably have been some trouble at Paris.

Taking the European situation as a whole, the main explanation of the turn for the better, is the simultaneous reaction on all money markets from over-caution and artificial stringency.

It was greatly facilitated by the better feeling over foreign politics, and by your Currency bill which, it is believed, will put your market in a position where it will be a help and not a hindrance to Europe.

England's Exports Gain.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The January statement of the Board of Trade shows a decrease of £18,159,000 in imports and an increase of £11,800,000 in exports.

BEEF CATTLE IN SHARP SLUMP ON LIGHT RECEIPTS

Vealers and Canners and Cutters About Only Firm Spots in the List.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	11,500	15,948	21,150
Hogs	60,000	53,731	51,908
Sheep	8,500	9,891	14,011
Horses and mules	5,500	7,468	5,041

Receipts of cattle during the entire week were just about what would be considered a good day's run and were slightly more than half the volume of the same week a year ago. While moderate in volume, the quality of the steer supply was fairly good, as several choice to prime loads were received. The market was slow and draggy throughout the period and buyers were in a bearish humor. Even with a light supply, sellers were unable to stem the downward trend of prices and all grades slumped 25@35c. A load of prime steers topped for the week at $9.10, and a good showing sold at $8.50@8.85.

The supply of heifers was very moderate, but the demand was narrow all week, as butchers were light purchasers and it took a great deal of "nagging" on the part of sellers to elicit a bid from packers. Prices were on the down turn and the market was draggy throughout the week. Declines of 15@25c moved most of the heifers. The top on straight loads was $8.50, although mixed loads made $9.

Canners and Cutters Steady.

While the movement of cows was slightly more active than heifers, buyers also hammered prices on them throughout the week. Best kinds and canners and cutters held about steady, but medium-grade cows were off 15@25c, as compared with the previous week. A few good cows sold in a range of $7@7.50.

Vealers opened steady, but as the week advanced became stronger and prices were on the upturn. They were about the firmest spot in the cattle market. The top was $11.25 and the advance was placed at 25@50c. Stockers and feeders found a good demand throughout the week and prices were unchanged. Best feeders made $7.75 and stockers $7.25. Stock cows and heifers were also steady.

Receipts in the quarantine division were fairly generous and the bulk of the showing comprised steers. Most of the receipts came from Texas and Oklahoma, there being only a small proportion of canners included in each day's run. The steer market was slow and draggy throughout the week and prices on all grades of steers were 25@40c lower. Oklahoma steers sold mostly at $5.50@7, and Texas steers at $6.75@6.80. Canners and cutters were about a dime lower for the week. Only a moderate supply of yearlings and heretics were received and prices were 10@15c higher.

Prices Draw Iowa Hogs.

Still the receipts of hogs continue high, although not as large as a few weeks ago, when several records were broken. Like for several weeks past a good big lot of poor grade pigs and lights were on sale the fore part of the week, but the quality was much better the middle and latter part of the week. A good share of the good hogs came out of Iowa, as prices here were much better than could be obtained on other Western markets.

There was no material changes during the week. The top ranged from $8.65@8.85, while the bulk of the good hogs went at $8.40@8.70. As a rule prices were 5@10c higher each day than prices in Chicago. Shippers and city butchers were the best buyers and took most of the good hogs that had any weight and they paid prices well up around the top of the market for them.

Mixed and plain grades sold largely at $8.25@8.50, and went to the packers, while best lights under 165 lbs. sold at $8.10@8.40, fair grades $7.35@8, best quality pigs under 125 lbs. $7.60@8.15, fair grades $7@7.50, and the poorer grades $6@6.85. Rough heavy packers as a rule went at $8@8.25. Some extra good stags sold higher.

Sheep and Lambs Lower.

Just a fairly good supply of sheep was received during the past week, but still the market was on a slightly lower basis. Both sheep and lambs suffered a loss of around 25c and it was a sort of a draggy trade most of the time. Toward the close of the week there was a slight improvement, but prices did not get back to the same basis as the week previous.

The arrivals contained several cars of lambs direct from the San Luis Valley, Colo., and they sold at $7.60@8. Western lambs sold at $7.50@7.75, and native lambs that were good at $7.50@7.85; fair kinds, $7@7.50, and the culls, $5.50@7. Yearlings sold at $6@6.50, but there were not very many offered for sale. Yearlings did not meet with as good demand as the sheep and lambs.

Most of the native mutton sheep sold around $5.25; however, a few light ones brought as high as $5.50 and some of the plainer ones went at $5. Some best fed heavy Colorado wethers sold at $5.60@5.75. These sheep weighed 148 pounds and really were a little too heavy to bring top prices. Choppers and good stockers went at $3.75@4.25 and bucks $4.25@4.50.

Horses and Mules.

There was a fairly good trade in horses at the market last week. Receipts, although moderate, had little effect on the trade. The Eastern States were well represented at each session and they took their supplies at generally steady to strong values and the majority of the offerings were taken to this section. The Southern States were somewhat slow last week in taking their kinds, as there was not as large an attendance of buyers from this section and competition was not as strong as usual. Values on these kinds were quoted a little lower than the previous week.

The mule trade was rather slow, as there was not as large an attendance of buyers as usual and the demand for all classes was rather limited, making the trade on mules of all types a little slow and draggy all the way through. The kinds that found the best outlet were the good quality kinds of fat cotton mules. Quality was the essential feature all week and there was a wide range in prices between the common kinds and the quality kinds.

Bank Reserves Show Gain of $215,000 on the Week.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The statement of the actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $40,068,000 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is an increase of $215,100 from last week.

The statement follows: Actual conditions—Loans $2,016,281,000, increase $7,065,000; specie, $397,881,000, decrease $1,700,000; legal tenders $80,781,000, decrease $1,888,000; net deposits $1,915,270,000, decrease $17,292,000; circulation $43,255,000, increase $139,000; banks' cash reserve in vault, $406,152,000; trust companies' cash reserve in vault, $69,910,000; aggregate cash reserve, $476,062,000; excess lawful reserve $40,068,000, increase $215,100; trust companies' reserve with clearing house members carrying 25 per cent cash reserve, $91,228,000.

Summary of State banks and trust companies in Greater New York, not included in clearing house statement: Loans $531,813,300, decrease $1,855,700; specie $57,655,900, decrease $971,800; legal tenders $8,323,100, increase $331,100; total deposits $615,241,400, increase $2,983,800.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Consols for money, 76 1-16; for account, 76 1-16. Bar silver, steady, 26⅝d per ounce. Money, ¾@1. Short bills, 1½; three months, 1 15-16@2.

COTTON PRICES HOLD, BUT DEMAND LOSES KEENNESS

Sellers Are Showing More Enthusiasm Than the Buyers or the Spinners.

Prices of cotton have declined somewhat from last week in the future markets, but there is hardly a quotable difference between prices on spots this week and last. The demand has slackened perceptibly and buyers do not show the eagerness sellers would like. How long this attitude of indifference will last is a question. Buyers will take cotton at a price and spinners will take cotton at concessions, too, and the former undoubtedly will be considerably influenced by the lower money market and will not be likely to let bargains go by unnoticed.

A few weeks ago the future markets were far above a parity with spots. Now the conditions are reversed and spots are at a high premium above futures. The result of this change is an irregular market. Speculative buyers, who bought for a rise in the spot market, are trying to sell their cotton at the quotations and their offerings seem high when compared with the offerings of buyers who hedged their cotton as they bought it and who are in a position to offer cotton that has been cheapened by the profit on their futures.

All wish to sell, however, and this fact rather dampens the ardor of buyers. At the same time hedges must be bought in as the actual cotton is sold, and that should steady the future markets.

Last Crop Still Increasing.

Forecasters of prices have been considerably influenced lately by the various increased estimates of the crop. Some of these estimates are put out by authorities who had previously made smaller estimates. It is well, in the face of the increased estimates of the crop, to bear in mind the large estimated consumption. Several of the best authorities, basing their estimates on the consumption of the last two years, fixed the minimum requirements of American cotton at 14,750,000 bales. There has been no reason to lower this estimate. The change to more favorable conditions for spinners all over the world would rather add to it, especially as the demand for goods runs on heavy weights which require more cotton.

The supply contains a comparatively large quantity of extremely low cotton which may prove unfit for use. This, however, is something that cannot be felt by consumers until the end of the season, possibly not at all, as new crop cotton may begin to move before the worthless cotton is reached.

Interior Stocks Are Large.

Interior spot markets are carrying large stocks of cotton in the aggregate. As a rule, interior markets west of the Mississippi are comparatively more heavily stocked than those east of the river. The exception, east of the river, are those markets which handle the heavy-bodied cottons. Lighter staples have moved faster this season and upland markets are pretty well cleared for this season of the year.

Port receipts are large and show no sign of diminution. Exports are increasing and at the present rate should pass the figures of last season by the middle of the present month. Liverpool sales have been large of late and forwardings to spinners from that market fully up to expectations. Stock of American in Liverpool is about 400,000 bales less than the same time last year. Continental stock of American about 120,000 less.

The weather during the winter has been very mild, as a rule, with plenty of rainfall in Texas. The rainfall is essential to a good crop in Texas. The open weather, however, is favorable to insects and it is to be hoped that the low temperatures of the past few days has worked toward their extermination.

It is too early to figure on the next crop and mention is made here of Texas weather, because such great stress is laid on that feature of the market a little later on, when the great fight is on between crop killers and the believers in "the biggest crop on record." In a general way, there is some talk of inferior seed and a possible scarcity should replanting be necessary in a great part of the cotton belt.

Wheat futures reflected moderate support the past week, but held only steady, despite a severe cold wave over the winter wheat belt, which traders thought would surely mean higher prices.

East of the Mississippi River wheat is well protected by snow, but Nebraska and sections of the Southwest are bare and in a position to suffer from winter killing, as the plant has been abnormally advanced by the open, warm weather and is in a vulnerable position.

It is, however, premature to estimate the winter wheat crop authentically, as an unusually dry spring, hot winds in Kansas and the Southwest, bug damage and wet harvests may cut the yield amazingly in a very short time and the present outlook is so highly favorable that it would seem that any change must be for the worse.

Statistics Are Bullish.

The statistical position of wheat is steadily strengthening. The domestic visible supply is 4,000,000 bu under a year ago. World's shipments last week were only 12,496,000 bu, against 15,728,000 bu last year. Stocks of wheat in Chicago are only 6,151,000 bu, compared with 7,537,000 bu last year, and it is asserted that a considerable amount of the supplies held are sold to go out.

The visible wheat supply in Europe is 81,896,000 bu, against 79,500,000 bu last year, but should run down from now on as Argentine shipments promise to be much less than a year ago. In fact, it is fast becoming apparent that the Argentine surplus for export will be reduced to a minimum.

An Antwerp cable, commenting on Argentine conditions, proves interesting. It said: "The Argentine news is going from bad to worse. Our previous estimates of 44,000,000 bu available for Europe from the Argentine stands good, but we must add that the samples of grain which we have seen from the different districts of that country lead us to believe that only about 20,000,000 bu of this surplus is good milling wheat, the balance being very poor, light weighing quality and not suitable for the continent. Owing to the poor result of the Argentine crop, exports from North America must continue, and we think the buyers will have to make chase after the sellers of good wheat and not the sellers after the buyers."

Trade Outlook Good.

A further favorable factor in wheat is the continued strength of securities in Wall street. Wall street invariably is the barometer of the country's business conditions and no doubt now is indicating unusual prosperity in the near future. If so, wheat, which is the cheapest of the world's commodities, should gradually seek a level more in line with corn, oats and other food products, especially as the living cost is high and wheat enters more into the equation of steady, actual consumption, regardless of the size of the crop, than any other grain or commodity.

For this reason, if for no other, such as possible crop scares, well-posted traders are inclined to look for a gradual appreciation in wheat values, especially as domestic receipts are practically drying up, indicating that the farmer sold his wheat freely last fall, when he feared Canadian competition under the new tariff law in the Northwest and faced a tight money market and talk of business depression in the Southwest.

Flour stocks inspected on the Merchants' Exchange in January were 11,956 bbls. Stocks on Feb. 1 were 76,400 bbls, against 57,675 bbls on Jan. 1, and 89,400 bbls. Feb. 1, 1913.

The domestic wheat visible decreased 1,847,000 bu for the week; corn increased 813,000 bu; oats decreased 272,000 bu.

The total visible supply shows: Wheat today, 59,806,000; last year, 64,913,000. Corn today, 16,505,000; last year, 9,717,000. Oats today, 24,450,000; last year, 9,646,000.

The visible supply of wheat in Europe this week amounts to 81,896,000 bu, against 81,048,000 bu last week, showing an increase of 848,000 bu. Last week there was a decrease of 1,176,000, and last year an increase of 1,900,000 bu, when the total amounted to 79,500,000 bu.

Summary Is Favorable.

Broomhall's weekly foreign summary said:

United Kingdom—The weather and crop outlook are favorable and supplies of native are fair.

France—The outlook is mostly favorable. Native offers are light.

Germany—The crop outlook is mostly favorable, with the weather more mild.

Rumania—The outlook is mostly favorable; the weather is mild.

Hungary—Damage resulted from the severe weather and offers are lighter.

Italy—Crop conditions continue favorable. Native offers are small.

Spain—The weather is seasonable and the crop outlook favorable.

Russia—The weather generally has turned mild and an early opening of navigation is predicted. Crop conditions continue favorable.

Argentina—The weather is favorable for the movement of wheat and development of corn. Wheat offers are small.

Bradstreet's detailed report showed: Wheat, U. S. and east of Rockies, decrease 1,082,000 bu; U. S. and west of rockies, increase 80,000; Canada, decrease 1,274,000; U. S. and Canada, decrease 2,226,000; afloat and in Europe, increase 800,000. Total, decrease 1,426,000. Corn, increase 1,114,000; oats, decrease 1,222,000.

Stocks of grain in Chicago: Wheat 6,151,000, decrease 262,000; last year 7,537,000. Corn 3,769,000, increase 403,000; last year 2,492,000. Oats 10,939,000, increase 160,000; last year 3,054,000. Contract wheat 2,461,000, decrease 17,000; last year 3,847,000. Corn 2,311,000, increase 85,000, last year 152,000. Oats 3,222,000, decrease 21,000; last year 237,000.

PAPA, HOW OLD IS ST. LOUIS; 150 THIS WEEK, MY SON

Next Saturday (or Possibly Sunday) Sesqui-Centennial of Founding.

WE'LL CELEBRATE IN MAY

Pageant and Masque Will Be Belated Observance of Laclede's Landing.

Next Saturday (or possibly Sunday) will be the sesqui-centennial of the founding of St. Louis.

In case the dictionary isn't handy, it may be added that "sesqui" is regular college Latin for one-and-one-half, and that a sesqui-centennial marks a century and a half. And on either Feb. 14 or 15, next Saturday or Sunday, it will be 150 years since Pierre Laclede's men, led by young Auguste Chouteau, arrived at the site of St. Louis and began cutting timber.

"But," someone objects, "didn't we celebrate the St. Louis Centennial only a few years ago, when Dr. Cook was here, and Curtiss almost made an aeroplane flight in Forest Park?"

Tush and tut for such feeble memories! It was the 100th anniversary of the incorporation of the City of St. Louis, in 1809, which was celebrated in October, 1909, with one of Dr. Cook's highest flights, and several of Curtiss' lowest ones.

We'll Celebrate Next May.

The event which would be celebrated this week or next, if it weren't for the unfavorable weather probabilities, and which will be celebrated, three months late, by the Art Hill Pageant and Masque in May, is the founding of St. Louis, without which there could not have been any incorporation. Nor, for that matter, any House of Delegates, or billboard system, or free bridge controversy.

Speaking of controversies, there was a very pretty little controversy in St. Louis nearly 30 years ago, over the question whether the founding of St. Louis took place in February or March 1764. It was settled at that time to the satisfaction of the Missouri Historical Society in favor of February, and the society has decided that the evidence favors Feb. 14. This may be unfortunate, in that it conflicts with St. Valentine's day, but the Historical Society knows no such thing as sentiment, when it comes to proclaiming the cold, hard facts of history. There is some evidence, the Society admits, in support of Feb. 15.

The chief argument against February, in the controversy which raged back in the 80's, was that February is very rarely a nice month for boating on the Mississippi. That does not seem such a powerful argument, in this winter of 1914, as it may have seemed in some former years. The French word "Mars" (March) appears in the journal of Auguste Chouteau, but it has been written over the word "Fevrier" (February), and Auguste Chouteau's son, Gabriel Chouteau, who died less than 30 years ago, often said that the "Fevrier" was in Chouteau's handwriting and the "Mars" not. Gabriel also said his father often told him that Feb. 14 was the day of the arrival.

Controversy as to the Day.

As to the day of the month, Gabriel Chouteau's say-so is the only positive authority. Auguste Chouteau, in his journal, wrote a plain enough figure 1 and followed it with a figure which might be a 4 with a weak spine, or which might be a 5 tilted sou'-sou'west—and all the handwriting experts around the Probate Court couldn't tell which it was meant for.

In the Pageant, Laclede and his young stepson, Chouteau, will probably arrive together and start the work of city building. It did not happen just that way in 1764. Both had stopped by this place the previous fall and Laclede had decided to return in the spring and start a trading post, in preference to remaining at Ste. Genevieve any longer. As the Eads Bridge and the East Side smoke blanket were not here at the time, he fixed the location by marking some trees. In February he started a boatload of 30 men, in command of Chouteau, up the river to find the marked trees. Laclede joined them in April and named the place St. Louis. Historians say he did this in honor of Louis XV, then the reigning sovereign of France, who was no saint, and that the "St." was put into the city's name merely to call attention to the fact that, six generations before, there had been a saint in the family.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear husband, William S. Johnson, who departed this life one year ago, Feb. 11, 1913. Sadly missed by

WIFE AND BABY.

In Memoriam.

In sad and loving remembrance of St. Louis Tommy Sullivan, who departed this life Feb. 3, 1905. Peaceful be thy sleep, dear Tommy; 'tis sweet to breathe your name, in life we loved you dearly, in death we do the same. MOTHER.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Louisa Kaufmann departed this world Feb. 10, 1913.

Just a year ago you left me,
Broken-hearted and all alone;
All is dark within my home,
Lonely is my heart today,
For the mother I loved so dearly
Has forever passed away.

RICA CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Elizabeth Hirth, who departed this life one year ago, Feb. 3, 1913.

Sad and sudden was the call,
One year passed, our hearts still sore
As time goes on we miss you more;
Your loving smile, your welcome face,
None can fill your vacant place.

Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of August Drake, who departed this life one year ago, Feb. 9, 1913.

The moon and stars are shining
Upon a lonely grave,
Where sleeps our dear good father,
Whom we loved but could not save.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

We miss his coming footsteps,
We miss him everywhere;
Home is not what it used to be
Since our dear father is not there.

Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mrs. Mary Hofmann, who departed this life Feb. 4, 1912.

In the mansion of the blessed
Is your sweet, eternal rest;
All grief, all pain, all sufferings past,
God loved you, too, and He thought best
To take you home to be at rest.

Though you are gone, you are not forgotten,
Never shall your memory fade,
Loving hearts shall always linger
Around the grave where our dear mother is laid.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c99)

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear husband, John Wesley Myers, who departed this life one year ago, Feb. 7, 1913.

While the flicking tapers of night burned low,
Death closed his eyelids and bade him go;
Relieved of all his worldly strife,
We hope he has entered a better and brighter life.

By constant toil he molded true
The highest form that virtue knew:
Within he climbed the toilsome steep,
But weary grew and sought death's sleep.

But in my heart shall ever live,
The memory and loneliness only death can give.

Sadly missed by his wife.

FARM to TABLE or Producer to Consumer

"DOWN WITH THE HIGH COST OF LIVING!"

That is the SLOGAN which is sweeping through the land. How to DO IT is the PROBLEM. All eyes are on the FARMER and the Producer—they are the ones to SOLVE the TABLE end of it. How? By shipping DIRECT to the CONSUMER. All the FARMER and the PRODUCER and the CONSUMER have to do is GET TOGETHER. This can be accomplished within twenty-four hours through this "FARM to TABLE"—producer to consumer—column in the Post-Dispatch. The FARMER or PRODUCER ADVERTISES that which he HAS FOR SALE; the CONSUMER READS these ads and arranges to BUY. BOTH MAKE MONEY. And the HIGH COST OF TABLE LIVING is at an END. It all depends upon YOU, MR. FARMER and Mr. Producer!

One million people in and around St. Louis have to be fed at least three times a day. They are eager for fresh, wholesome food at reasonable prices. MR. FARMER OR MR. PRODUCER: WHAT HAVE YOU TO SELL TO THESE ONE MILLION CONSUMERS? Tell them through this column. The advertisers herein are getting results, and so will you because this column is read by the million people who are seeking the good things to eat which you may have to offer.

This is the entering wedge.

Drop these advertisers a postal and get acquainted. Deliveries by express or parcel post.

"BE A MOVING PICTURE STAR."

The St. Louis School of Motion Picture Acting will teach you to become a great picture actress or actor. This is the only school of its kind in the world. Mr. Dencke, late leading man of the Belmont, Atlas and Columbia feature film company, is the director general; he has been associated with King Baggot and many other picture stars and guarantees not only to teach you, but give you the practical experience before the camera, in the exact manner that all great moving pictures are made and produced. Exterior scenes will be taken in all parts of the city and country, also studio work. At last your opportunity is here, so don't fail to take advantage of this excellent chance. The terms are so low that any one can afford to take a course. Call for particulars and information at Suite D, Odeon building, Grand and Finney.

IMPROVED PROPERTY FOR SALE

A BEAUTIFUL FLAT ON CONNECTICUT ST.—Five rooms, bath and reception hall on each floor, separate furnaces, separate coal bins, separate compartments for preserves and vegetables in cellar; the entire cellar cemented; hot and cold water, slate sinks, combination fixtures, electric lights can be turned on and off in each room; fine mantels, screens, closets; not one of the old-style flats that have 5 rooms in one row, but you can enter each room from the reception hall; all newly papered and all inside woodwork newly varnished; beautiful front porch and all outside woodwork newly painted. Both flats are vacant; owner refuses to rent, but wants to sell. Everything was fixed up tip top, of the finest; floors painted and varnished; nothing missing but the carpets; owner would have laid carpets if he knew your taste. Lot is 48x125; a garage and a stable for three horses is surrounded by big yard. If you have no horses or automobile, you can raise chickens. There is an extra place arranged to raise guinea pigs and rabbits. Fine hedge fence in front; all improvements made except alley. This flat is near public school, near Catholic and other churches, near stores, near Tower Grove Park and Tower Grove car line. The original value of this flat is around $8000, and if it were near Grand av. we could get $9000 for it without much exertion. Now, the owner has no use for it, don't want to rent it and to make a quick sale he ordered us to reduce the price to the lowest notch of $6500, making this the greatest bargain ever offered. If you have $2000, we will loan you the balance without cost to you. Now, please don't offer us anything in trade, nor will we consider a cut in price. But if you wish to look at it, please advise us and we will gladly arrange to show you through and you will admit it is the best flat you ever saw for that money. Offers to take other real estate in trade will be positively refused. Our advice is: Don't miss this chance, but see us at once. TOMBRIDGE AGENCY, 509 Chestnut st. Both phones. (c2)

"IF YOU ARE THINKING"

Of getting a slightly used piano, don't fail to look at our immense assortment of them. We are overcrowded and quite a few of the old line makes will be found among them. Some are like new and we fully guarantee each one. We have no solicitors and our prices are considered the lowest in the city. Terms almost as easy as renting. Come and see.
F. BEYER & SON, 17th and Locust. (c5)

"PLAYER PIANOS"

If you are thinking of getting a player-piano, why not go to a dealer where you can have an impartial choice of "9" different standard makes? We pride ourselves on our practical knowledge of piano quality and for over 40 years have sought to sell only pianos with lasting tone quality. (That's unlike a subsidized dealer where the one or two players he sells are the best in the world.) It costs you nothing to investigate what we do for our patrons to hold their trade and no doubt you, like so many others, will be glad you came. We have no solicitors to bother you, and our expenses being the least, enables us to give our customers the most for their money. Terms arranged to suit you.

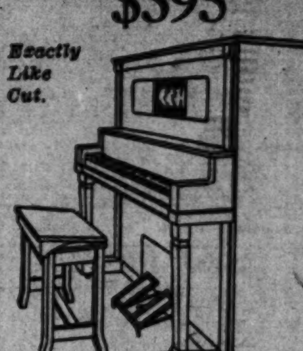
FOR SALE AND WANTED

A Special New Player-Piano, $395

Exactly Like Cut.



Terms, $2.50 a Week

This is a handsome instrument of which we have only a limited number at this special price, and on these remarkably easy terms. It is beautifully cased in mahogany, has a fine tone, responsive action, and is substantially and thoroughly made in every detail. With each instrument at this special price we give a bench free of charge, exactly as illustrated, to match the piano.

With this instrument in your home anyone may sit down and play to their heart's content without any previous musical training. The pleasure you can get in this way is beyond all words—think what it means to have music at your instant command.

Such an instrument as this would cost not less than $600 at any ordinary piano store, and it is only because of the great manufacturing facilities of the Aeolian Company, the largest manufacturers of musical instruments in the world, that an instrument of this high standard can be sold at such a remarkably low price.

3 Days Only

As we only have a limited number of these instruments on hand and cannot get more for some time, the sale will be limited for three days only, and begins promptly at 8:30 Monday morning.

If you are thinking of getting a piano or player-piano see to it that you are at Aeolian Hall bright and early Monday morning to take advantage of this remarkable offer.

AERO CLUB DIDN'T ASK $1,000,000 FOR FLIGHT

Henry Woodhouse Denies Frisco Exposition Officials Were Asked to Increase Round-the-World Prize.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Henry Woodhouse, who is a member of six committees in the Aero Club of America, and in close touch with everything pertaining to both official and unofficial matters in the club, denied tonight a statement in San Francisco today that the Panama-Pacific Exposition Co. had received a message from the Aero Club that had induced the exposition officials to increase the prize for an around-the-world flight to $1,000,000. He said:

"The Aero Club has not had any communication with the Panama-Pacific Exposition today nor with any one interested in the announcement of a flight around the world."

He said he had never heard of a $1,000,000 prize for the race.

LEO J. SCHERRER SUES TO ENFORCE A LEASE

A. & M. Promter Alleges East St. Louisan Has Refused to Abide by Contract.

Alleging that Frank E. Nulsen had refused to abide by the terms of lease, Leo J. Scherrer, of East St. Louis, promoter of the A. & M. approach for the St. Louis Free Bridge, filed a petition for specific performance in the Circuit Court at Belleville, yesterday. He alleges that he leased property near St. Louis and Collinsville avenue, East St. Louis, from Nulsen for 99 years. The rental was to be $2400 for the first five years and $3000 for the other 94 years. Scherrer also alleges he had an agreement with Nulsen to purchase the property for $30,000.

He alleges in his petition that he has made all payments except one and asks the court to enforce the terms of the contract and lease. Attorney Charles Wise of East St. Louis represents Scherrer.

MAN KILLS HIS WIFE AND SELF ON STREET

Many Persons See Kansas City Husband Shoot Wife, Kneel Beside Her and End Own Life.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 7.—John F. French, a bricklayer, shot and killed his wife and committed suicide at Tenth street and Troost avenue in the residence district late today. Many persons were upon the street at the time.

Witnesses to the shooting first saw Mr. and Mrs. French standing in the street, quarreling.

"If you don't leave me alone there will be trouble," said the wife, as she ran across the street.

French followed, drawing a revolver as he ran. The first shot missed. French then sprang upon his wife and, throwing his arm about her, shot her through the temple. As she fell he knelt beside her. Then he turned the revolver against his own head and his body fell across that of his wife.

53 MEN VOLUNTEER TO SPEAK ON NEW CHARTER

Citizens Will Be Assigned to Address Organizations on Provisions of Proposed Statue.

With a view to assisting the Board of Freeholders which is drawing up a new city charter for submission to a vote of the people, the Speakers' Bureau of the Joint Charter conference at a meeting in the Missouri Athletic Club yesterday decided to publish the names of those who are willing to talk on the charter before various organizations.

It was announced that 53 names of men representing 40 business, civic and labor organizations had been obtained. The campaign of the Speakers' Bureau will be conducted in co-operation with the Board of Freeholders.

A pamphlet setting forth the progress made by the Freeholders on the Charter, was issued yesterday.

STEALS A TYPEWRITER

Lodger at Welfare Home Sends Watchman on Errand, Departs.

A lodger at the Brotherhood Welfare Home, 221 Elm street, stole a typewriter after sending the night watchman to a saloon for some whisky last night. According to Charles Willis, secretary of the home, the lodger asked permission to write a few letters on the typewriter.

After he had written a few lines he turned to the watchman and handing him 25 cents, asked him to go out and purchase some whisky. When the watchman returned the lodger and the typewriter were gone.

APARTMENTS TO BE BUILT IN BIXBY RESIDENCE PARK

Property on Lindell Boulevard to Be Divided and Ten Buildings Erected on Eastern Half of Block Occupied by Finest Residence in St. Louis.

EACH FLOOR TO BE SOLD TO TENANT

Part of Site of $1,000,000 Mansion, Regarded as Finest in City, Is Optioned by Real Estate Firm Who Plan Novel Scheme for Renting Apartments.

The W. K. Bixby residence property, comprising the entire block bounded by Lindell boulevard, King's highway boulevard, Euclid and Maryland avenues, for 20 years the chief show place of the residence district, is to be divided, and the Eastern half, now a private park, is to be the site of a $1,500,000 group of apartment houses.

The Bixby home, formerly the Kauffman mansion, which cost its builder, the late John W. Kauffman, $1,000,000, and which is still regarded as the most splendid of St. Louis homes, will not be interfered with. The house and the adjoining buildings stand well within the Western half of the block.

The plans for dividing the block became known yesterday, through the announcement that E. L. Bakewell together with W. J. Holbrook, president of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., had obtained an option on the east half of the residence block. The tract covered by the option fronts 435 feet on Lindell boulevard by 450 feet width on Euclid avenue, and runs through to Maryland avenue.

Apartments to Be Exclusive.

Bakewell and Holbrook announced that they were forming a syndicate for the purpose of building a group of ten 9-story apartment houses in the tract. These apartments will be built and run on new methods, and the rental of them will be under restrictions almost equal to those governing admission to the most exclusive clubs.

As the plan was outlined by Holbrook to a Post-Dispatch reporter, the tract of land will be made into a private place, and a driveway will enter the middle of the Lindell boulevard frontage. Four of the apartments will stand on each side of this driveway, and two at the northern end, so that all the apartments will command a view of Lindell boulevard.

Each of the nine floors of the 10 buildings will be a separate apartment of seven or eight rooms, with the most modern conveniences. The entire group of apartments will thus house 90 families. And, the promoters announce, the tenants will not rent, but will buy, their apartments.

The idea of selling each floor of a nine-story building to a different purchaser is something that has not heretofore been heard of in St. Louis, either in apartment or in business buildings. But Bakewell and Holbrook say it will be done.

Rent $125 a Month.

The monthly rent, not less than $125 for any apartment, will be counted on the purchase price, and in about ten years each tenant will own his own apartment, and will no longer have to pay rent, but will be one of the nine joint owners of the building. By just what form of stockholding this plan will be carried out, it was not explained, but the details were said to have been worked out with a view to the legal and practical phases.

A Board of Trustees, it was announced, will pass on all applications from prospective tenants, and no one can obtain one of the apartments without this board's approval. The board will also supervise the operation of the apartments, which will be run on the co-operative plan.

A name for the group of buildings has not been decided on, but Holbrook said a name might be taken from some of the fine residence places of London—Grosvenor Square, for instance.

LaBeaume & Klein have been engaged as architects of the apartments. A prospectus showing the plans for the work will soon be prepared.

The price at which the eastern half of the Bixby property is to be acquired was not made known. Bixby paid $400,000 for the property when he purchased it from the Kauffman family. The property had at that time been on the market for more than a year, and its purchase had been seriously considered by the late Adolphus Busch.

$5,000,000 Hotel Was Planned.

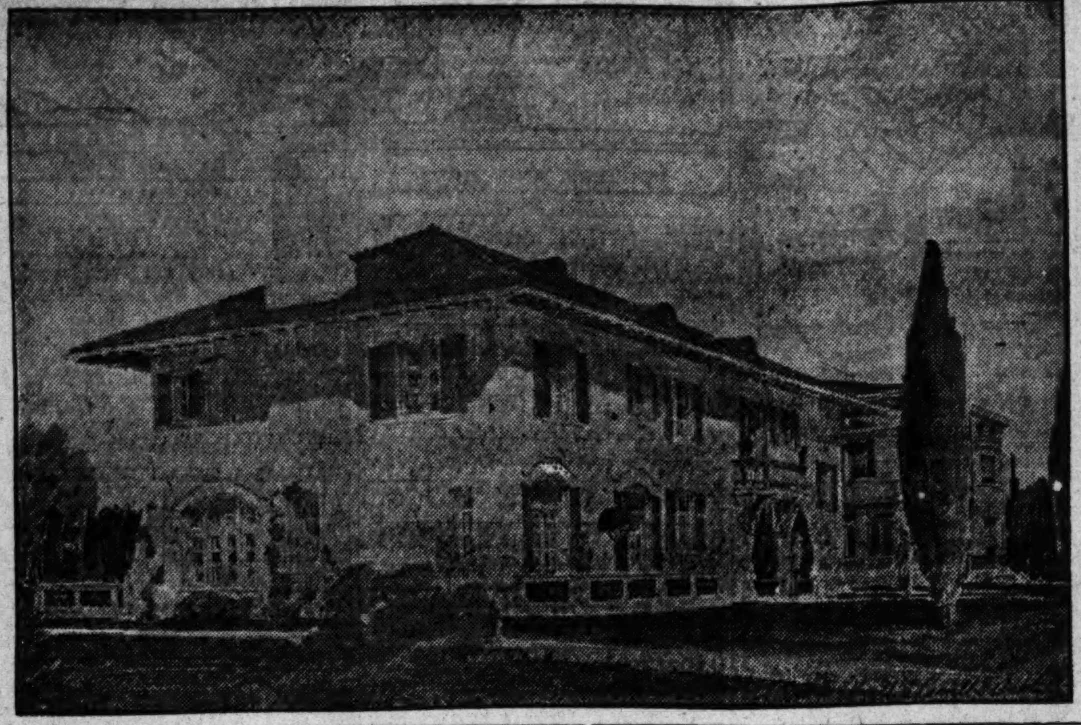
Within the last three or four years property in the vicinity of Forest Park, available for high-class apartments or for hotel purposes, has commanded fancy prices.

Several years ago a group of local capitalists, of which Jesse D. Dana, treasurer of the Commonwealth Trust Co. was the guiding spirit, seriously considered the Bixby block for a hotel structure involving a cost of $5,000,000.

Bixby to Build New Home.

Bixby owns a lot in the Catlin tract. This, it is understood, he will eventually improve with a home, replacing his present residence occupying the west half of the Lindell boulevard block. As a site for a hotel the west half of the block, which faces King's highway, is destined to command a fabulous price, real estate men say.

Home to Be Erected After Italian Country Style by Millionaire Candy Manufacturer



WALTER M. CANDY TO ERECT HOME IN KINGSBURY PLACE

Eleven-Room House, Planned on Italian Country Style, to Be Built.

An 11-room house of the Italian country style will be erected by Walter W. Candy, the millionaire candy manufacturer, on the south side of Kingsbury boulevard, near Union boulevard. The house is being designed by Architects Mauran, Russell & Crowell.

The walls will be of light gray brick, with stone trimmings. On the first floor will be a living and a sun room, together with the dining room and kitchen.

The second floor will have four bedrooms, while a finished attic will provide sleeping quarters for the servants.

Set off with a tile roof, the building will grace a lot 100x220 feet.

Garage to Be Built.

The plans also contemplate a garage in keeping with the house.

While Mr. Candy is reticent as to the cost of the house, it it understood it will vie with the finest in Kingsbury place.

Mrs. Candy collaborated with Mr. Candy in planning the house.

Two or three years ago the candy manufacturer built a home on Berlin avenue. The house, however, soon palled on him, and he disposed of it forthwith. His present home is at 5854 Cates avenue.

Lot Cost $15,500.

The Kingsbury place lot was acquired at a cost of $15,500, the purchase being through the Holbrook-Blackwelder company and Cornet & Zeibig.

AUTO CONCERN LEASES BIG CORNER BUILDING

St. Louis Auto Sales Company Gets New Quarters and Will Make Improvements.

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports having leased the northwest corner of Twenty-second and Pine streets to the St. Louis Auto Sales Co.

This is a strictly modern building of four stories and basement, fronting 65 feet on the north side of Pine street by a depth of 109 feet on Twenty-second street.

Extensive repairs and alterations will be commenced at once to make this building adaptable for automobile purposes.

Mr. Donnelly, president of the St. Louis Auto Sales Co., said his company was forced to seek much larger quarters owing to the enormous growth of its business.

The lessor is Frank A. Ruf. The Mercantile Trust Co. represented both lessor and lessee in the negotiations.

LEASES ON A NUMBER OF STOREROOMS TAKEN

Realty Agency Reports the Taking of Three Rooms in Metropole Hotel Building.

A lease of the storeroom at the southwest corner of Eighteenth and Chestnut streets has been acquired by Albert Ketterer at an annual rental of $1500. The lease was made by the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., agent for the King Realty Co.

The last three vacant stores in the Metropole Building have been disposed of. The storeroom at 807 High street was leased to Harry Levison. The stores at 1235-1237 Morgan street were leased to Harry H. Smith.

W. B. Shelp Jr. With Wanstrath Co.

Willard B. Shelp Jr., for four years with a Ninth street agency, is now connected with the George Wanstrath Real Estate Co. He will have charge of its rent department, incidentally negotiating sales and loans.

Shelp is one of the live-wire workers of realty row.

UNIVERSITY CITY TO HAVE MANY NEW RESIDENCES

Improvement Association Plans to Beautify City in Various Ways This Year.

Through the efforts of the University City Heights Improvement Association, the coming season will be a notable one in the construction of fine homes and public improvements in University City. This organization, by standing solely for improvements, setting a high standard, and keeping free from politics, has made great progress toward the aim expressed in its motto, "A Better and More Beautiful University City." It is striving to obtain the best class of private homes and of citizens.

The association held its monthly meeting last Monday night in the large hall of the Magazine Building. E. J. Schall presided, and 575 residents of University City, including 200 women, attended.

Mayor Heman read his report for the last year, showing a successful collection of taxes, and he stated that $15,000 bonds had been redeemed by means of last year's collections. President Ward of the School Board announced that a second school building, as large as the $50,000 structure just built, would be erected without increase of taxes.

More than 75 building permits have been applied for, and as soon as weather permits many buildings will be started.

Among the important public works which the association will actively take up this season are the locating and improving of a park, the beautifying of entrance gates and the completing of two large fountains, casts for which have been made. It has also been proposed that a large arch be erected at the entrance of University City, on Delmar boulevard.

WINSTON APARTMENT SOLD FOR $25,000

Decided Demand for Investments of This Character Reported by Realty Agency.

The Winston, a six-family apartment building, at 5785 McPherson avenue, between De Baliviere and Laurel avenues, was sold yesterday by the John S. Blake & Bro. Realty Co. to a client whose name has not been disclosed, for $25,000.

The building, the seller of which was the Apex Investment Co., of which Charles E. Hayden is president, is three stories and occupies a site 59x125 feet.

Each apartment contains four rooms and baths, screened porches, hardwood floors, steam heat and all conveniences. The annual rental is $2940.

The Blake agency reports a decided demand for investments of this character.

ST. LOUISAN HELD, THEN HONORED, BY MEXICANS

Albert von Hoffman Tells of Charm His Masonic Emblem Worked in Rebel Camp.

Albert von Hoffman, 1754 Simpson place, manager of the National Telephone Directory Co., on his return to St. Louis, Friday, told of his capture and release at the hands of a rebel band in the state of Vera Cruz.

Von Hoffman said that, after attending some business, he started on a fishing trip, was captured by a patrol of 20 rebels, and carried before their General, Garcia Revoles. He said that when Revoles saw a Masonic emblem on his coat the General threw his arms about him, and, after entertaining him, offered his entire command of the rebel army as a bodyguard. Von Hoffmann said that he declined this offer, but accepted a guard of honor of 20 men, who accompanied him to the Gulf safely.

Realty Firm Boosts Seattle.

With plums for exploiting real estate in the vicinity of Seattle, Wash., Clark & Bunting have opened offices in St. Louis at 710 North Broadway. Motion pictures will be given showing the growth of Seattle, which they style as the fastest growing city of the West.

TWO BIG MORTGAGE COMPANIES MOVE TO LARGER ROOMS

Mortgage Trust and Mortgage Guarantee Concerns Occupy Bank of Commerce Building.

The Mortgage Trust Co. and the Mortgage Guarantee Co. yesterday removed from the southeast corner of Fourth and Pine streets to Broadway and Pine street, where they have taken the entire ground floor and basement of the new Bank of Commerce Building.

The companies will be open for business at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. The ground floor contains approximately 7000 square feet of floor space, almost four times as much area as formerly occupied by the companies in their old quarters. The floor is laid with blocks of Hauteville marble bordered with Georgian green. The walls are wainscoted with white Italian marble to a height of seven feet and capped with a black marble border. Above this black border, the walls are finished in rough plaster decorated in green, while the ceiling and beams are finished in smooth plaster decorated in ivory. The columns and pilasters are finished in Sylvan green marble.

The office railings are of bronzed iron, while the lighting fixtures are of the semi-indirect type finished in the same bronzed tone with alabaster globes. The directors' room is of mahogany walls with hardwood oak floor. The cashiers', bookkeepers' and tellers' cage is mahogany base surmounted with a bronze iron grill. All of the furniture is mahogany and the rugs are green velvet.

The basement, which contains the safe deposit vaults of the Mortgage Trust Co., has about the same area as the ground floor. It will be used exclusively as the safe deposit department.

The Mortgage Guarantee Co. was organized and began business Feb. 1, 1909, and the Mortgage Trust Co. two years later, Feb. 1, 1911.

Both companies were organized by Tom W. Bennett and operate together in the handling of real estate mortgages, first mortgage real estate gold bonds and guaranteed first mortgage participations. Bennett is president of the Mortgage Trust Co. and James H. Grover is president of the Mortgage Guarantee Co.

The directors are Messrs. Dwight F. Davis, J. D. P. Francis, Philip C. Scanlan, Fred G. Zeibig, A. L. Shapleigh, Rolla Wells, Moses Shoenberg, W. Julius Polk, Aaron Fuller, H. B. Collins, Edward L. Preetorius, Richard T. Shelton, Tom W. Bennett, James H. Grover, Lloyd P. Wells, Eugene F. Williams and George W. Niedringhaus.

WATER POWER RIGHTS

Bill Would Give Permits Under Federal Supervision.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—A comprehensive plan for the development of water power on public land, under governmental regulation, was embodied in a bill introduced today by Senator Jones of Washington.

It would provide that permits for occupying power sites should be issued only to states, municipalities and public service corporations which are subject to regulation and control by such governmental agencies as public service commissions. Where the development is interstate, the bill would provide that the Federal Government shall have supervision as to rates.

Sale in West Portland Place.

J. A. Mayhew reports the sale of a two-story bungalow in West Portland place, on behalf of the Gerling Realty Co., to William B. Pelkington. The bungalow is of attractive design and modern construction. It stands on a knoll overlooking University City.

Schramm in New Quarters.

Frank W. Schramm removed yesterday to his new quarters at 919 Chestnut street. The quarters are among the most attractive on Chestnut street. Charles Kline, as cashier, heads the office force of the Schramm agency.

RAILROADS' PLANS TO BUY LAND SEND PRICES SKYWARD

Terminal Association Is Also Said to Be Seeking to Buy Property Near New Bridge.

PENNSYLVANIA TO ENTER

Eastern Line Is Said to Propose $25,000,000 Outlay for Terminals in St. Louis.

The story in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch to the effect that the Chicago & Northwestern Railway had taken options on eight blocks of ground between Hall and Second and Warren and Buchanan streets, has been the chief topic in realty and financial circles.

The options, it is learned from reliable sources, run until Feb. 20, but it is understood that they will be renewed from time to time until the railway is in position to acquire the ground outright.

The ground, which is held by the Boatmen's Bank, the German Savings Institution, and the Bank of Commerce, conjointly, has been appraised by experts at $1.50 a square foot. It lies to the south of the Merchants' Bridge, and is said to be indispensable to the railway's plans.

Terminal Association Is Buyer.

The Terminal Association, it is said, is a rival of the Northwestern for the acquisition of a large section of land lying east of Hall street and extending from Ferry street to Bremen avenue.

Before the Interstate Commerce Commission's ruling in this connection, the Chicago & Northwestern was excluded, it is said, from the Terminal Railway System, comprising all the railways entering Union Station.

Notwithstanding the fact that the uncorking of this story by the Post-Dispatch sent prices skyward in the railway district of North St. Louis, quite a number of options, it is said, were taken during the week on lands with railway advantages. The locality of Grand avenue and Second street, which is in the vicinity of the Merchants Bridge, was the most active center, according to realty agents.

Pennsylvania to Spend $25,000,000.

Another story, which, however, lacks confirmation, but which is of reliable origin, is to the effect that the Pennsylvania Railway will soon begin buying land preparatory to entering and establishing terminals in St. Louis. The railway, the Post-Dispatch's informant declares, will spend $25,000,000 in this direction.

Railway purchases, it is believed, soon will be a feature of the St. Louis realty market.

The Chicago & Northwestern, it is said, will build from Girard, Ill., where its line now terminates, to Mitchel or Nameoki. The proposed bridge of the C., B. & Q., for which Congress has granted a charter to span the Mississippi from Mitchell on the Illinois and Larimore on the Missouri side, will give the C. & N. access to St. Louis. From Larimore Station, it is said the C. & N. plans a four-track service into the city.

The Chicago & Northwestern from Girard, it is said, will be operated in conjunction with the C. & A. and C., B. & Q.

ST. LOUIS IDEAS FOR WASHINGTON POSTOFFICE

Department Chiefs of Capital City Staff Study Local Plant Workings.

William H. Haycock, superintendent of delivery of the Washington Postoffice, and George Shaw of the chief clerk's office, Postoffice Department, Washington, spent yesterday investigating the workings of the St. Louis office, with a view to adopting the modern service features of the St. Louis office in the new postoffice building at Washington.

Surgeon-General Blue, on the request of Postmaster Selph, has authorized Surgeon M. J. White of the United States Public Health Service to make monthly health inspections of the employes and the postoffice buildings, to safeguard the health of the employes and prevent unsanitary conditions that might carry infection to the public.

Joseph D. Farrell, postoffice inspector, is to be Assistant Postmaster at St. Louis, succeeding Albert Autenrieth. Farrell is 40 years old and has been connected with important investigations in the St. Louis district. The other appointments will be made known in a day or two.

STOCK EXCHANGE ATTACKS PROPOSED LEGISLATION

Measure to Regulate Gambling Is Said to Be an Invasion of State Rights.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Federal regulation of stock exchanges, as proposed in the Owen bill under consideration by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, is a radical invasion of state rights in the opinion of officers of the Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York, who appeared today before the committee.

"The bill," Hjalmar H. Boyezen, counsel for the Consolidated Exchange declared, "seeks to do through postal and other regulations what Congress has no authority to do directly, and constitutes the most radical invasion of state rights with which I am familiar."

Boyezen, President M. E. Deaguero and other officials of the Consolidated, saw in the Owen bill, however, some sound regulations which they declared should be enacted by the various states. They criticised sharply other features of the bill.

$500,000 LEATHE PROPERTY SALE LEADS FOR FEBRUARY

Mercantile Trust Negotiates for Valuable Holdings, but Avoids Publicity—New Market at Laclede and Sarah Will Attract Business There.

The purchase by John S. Parry of Chicago of the four-story Leathe Building and site at the northeast corner of Seventh and Chestnut streets for $500,000, signalized the first week of the month in the local realty market.

As the sale was subject to a first deed of trust for $300,000 and a second for $87,500, only a trifle more than $100,000 was forthcoming for Mrs. Grace A. Leathe, the seller.

A fortnight ago the site of the Title Guaranty Trust Building, at the southwest corner of Seventh and Chestnut streets, was sold by Robert S. Brookings, a client of Franciscus & Kuns, to George W. Dulany of Hannibal, Mo., for $400,000.

Mercantile Trust Makes Deals.

The Mercantile Trust Co. is completing negotiations for valuable holdings in both downtown and uptown St. Louis. The latter deal, it is said, promises a large improvement, the character of which is closely guarded.

Many offers have been reported for high-class holdings in the business and quasi-business parts of the city, foreshadowing a movement of large proportions.

Sales of flats and small houses were a feature.

Offers for sites available for apartment buildings are numerous, the indications being that construction of this character the coming spring and summer, will be at its zenith.

The more optimistic declare that the movement will soon be at flood tide and will be maintained.

New Market Will Cause Changes.

The location of the new big market on the commons at Laclede and Sarah, it is believed, will revolutionize this locality. Negotiations are already under way for the purchase of dwelling houses thereabouts, which are to be altered for business purposes.

The sale of the site of the proposed market was effected by the Hemmelman-Spackler Real Estate Co., in connection with the Trembley-Miller Real Estate Co. The price paid was $145,000.

A block of flats, Nos. 4101 to 4125A Laclede avenue, and Nos. 9 to 21 Sarah street, was sold by Frank L. Dittmeier, agent, to the American Real Estate Building and Investment Co. The houses are opposite the new market site. There are 24 apartments of five rooms on the Laclede avenue and 16 apartments of five rooms on the Sarah street front. The annual rental is $14,000.

The Sarah street side, which will face the market, will be altered into stores.

Announcement of building plans were features of the week.

The Y. M. C. A. has purchased a site for a home for the North Side Branch, a lot at the northeast corner of Grand and Sullivan avenues.

The site, which was owned by Arthur Bersch, has a frontage of 154 feet on Grand avenue. William C. Wissmuth of Franciscus & Kuns effected the sale.

The proposed building, according to Secretary Phileman Bevis, will cost between $150,000 and $200,000.

A swimming pool, reading room and gymnasium will be attractive features of the new North Side branch.

Plans have been completed for the erection at the southeast corner of Euclid and Washington avenues of a building for the display and sale of the Pierce Arrow cars. The building, which has been leased by the Western Automobile Co., will be of the mission type, and will be two stories in height, occupying 85 feet on Euclid avenue and 150 feet on Washington avenue.

Furniture Company Leases Building.

A large retail furniture company which has just been formed, and the identity of which is kept secret, has leased the four-story building at the northwest corner of Franklin avenue and Ninth street, according to announcement by the Henry Hiemenz Jr. Realty Co.

The corner, which is owned by J. G. Brandt, occupies a lot 82x140 feet, having about 18,000 square feet of flooring.

The Board of Education has begun construction of the proposed Laclede School building, at 5821 Kennerly avenue. The cost is estimated at $300,000, the contract having been let to the E. C. Gerhard Building Co. Plans were prepared by William B. Ittner. The site occupies 400x400 feet.

Charles Nagel to Build $50,000 Home in Westmoreland Place.

Charles Nagel, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor, filed plans for a 23-room house, to be erected at 44 Westmoreland place. The cost, exclusive of the site, is placed at $50,000.

The Italian Renaissance style of architecture has been followed in the design. A study with a circular, built-in bookcase with shelves for 15,000 volumes, has been provided for in the plans.

No. 50 Kingsbury place, in the block between Belt and Clara avenues, has been purchased by Thomas G. Ratcliffe for $21,000, through the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. The Delor Realty Co., of which George T. Burdeau is president, is the grantor. The house, which is of colonial design, occupies a lot 60x220 feet. It is one of the most elaborate in the West End.

Building and Loan Movement Thrives.

According to the report of the secretary of the United States League of Building Associations, the building and loan movement has made great progress in recent years. The co-operative loan associations in the United States now number 6273, with assets of over $1,130,000,000. The income in assets is now equal to $100,000,000 per annum. More than 2,500,000 American citizens hold the stock of these vast accumulations. This great multitude is rapidly increasing. More than 180,000 joined the movement during the past year. The importance of the co-operative movement is recognized by law makers, both State and nation. As soon as a man becomes the owner of a home, he is recognized as a solid citizen and a supporter of good government. Missouri is far behind many states in the number and assets of its associations, but with a close State supervision during the past 10 years, it is coming to the front.

Why be content with mediocre success if you have the stamina of perseverance and are capable? POST-DISPATCH WANTS are providing chances for advancement.

BLANKE-WENNEKER COMPANY FAVORS SITE ON CHESTNUT

Candy Manufacturers Have Choice of Four Places for New Eight-Story Building and Will Probably Take One Near Postoffice.

AMERICAN HOTEL ANNEX ATTRACTS

Opening of New Hostelry Adds Life to Corner at Market and Sixth—Foundation for New Childs Restaurant on Market Is Completed.

The Blanke-Wenneker Candy Co. will shortly announce the location of the site of its proposed eight-story building, according to reports in realty circles.

Among the sites under consideration for the project are the southwest corner of Chestnut and Sixteenth streets, the northwest corner of Olive and Sixteenth streets, the northeast corner of Seventeenth and Pine streets, the northwest corner of Eleventh street and Clark avenue, and the southwest corner of Ninth and Walnut streets.

Charles F. Wenneker, president of the company, it is understood, is attracted by the Chestnut street corner, which has been submitted by J. W. Moertl of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co. The site, which is owned by the Fredonia Realty Co., of which George W. Burdeau is president, has a frontage on Chestnut street of 130 feet.

Convenient to Postoffice.

An attractive feature of this site is its convenience to the main postoffice at Seventeenth street and Clark avenue, and to Union Station, the parcel post advantages of which are obvious.

As an automobile center, Chestnut street now rivals Locust street, but as a general traffic center is first in importance.

The Chestnut street site is vacant, and immediately available for improvement.

Of the several other sites mentioned in the foregoing for the new big Blanke-Wenneker Building, the Walnut street corner has been submitted by Frank L. Dittmeier, the Eleventh street and the Pine street corners by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., the Olive street by W. J. Holbrook of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Co.

As a site for the large building, President Wenneker vainly tried to buy one of the four corners of the vacant block between Seventeenth and Eighteenth and Pine and Chestnut streets. The Seventeenth Street Realty Co., of which Isaac H. Lionberger is president, elects to lease or to sell the block as a whole.

A skyscraper or a hotel, in all probability, it is believed, soon or late, will be erected on the plot, the location of which makes it especially attractive for a building of this character.

The Blanke-Wenneker Co. recently leased its Market street property between Sixth and Seventh streets to Frank L. Talbot, proprietor of the Sixth street Hippodrome, the lessee having plans for a 14-story hotel and theater building.

American Annex Attracts.

The American Hotel Annex at the southeast corner of Sixth and Market streets, which has just been completed by Louis A. Cella, at a cost of $500,000, exclusive of the site, has imparted new life to this locality. The building is 14 stories high and contains about 250 rooms, with marble baths and showers. The construction is fireproof.

The store on the Market street side of the hotel opening into the foyer of the new Grand Opera House, also owned by Cella, has been leased for a drug store, while a barber shop has taken adjoining quarters.

One of the most sumptuous cafes and bars in St. Louis has been installed in the annex.

The foundation for the Childs Restaurant building on the north side of Market street, between Broadway and Sixth streets, already is in. The site was recently acquired by W. F. McElroy through Clark Whiteside of Paul Jones & Co., who originally negotiated the sale to J. C. Campbell for $52,000. McElroy paid $125,000 for the site. A two-story building is now in course of erection.

The first floor of the Childs Building will be occupied for restaurant purposes. The second floor, it is said, is wanted for a tango tearoom.

NEW BUILDING FOR WALL PAPER COMPANY

Sophie & Becker Firm to Have $15,000, 3-Story Structure on Franklin Avenue.

An attractive addition to the Franklin avenue district will be the new three-story store building to be erected on the north side of the avenue, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets for the Sophie & Becker Wall Paper Co. Its cost is estimated at $15,000.

The building, which will be occupied entirely by the wall paper company, will have a frontage of 29½ feet by a depth of 120 feet. It will be equipped with a steam-heating plant and an electric elevator.

The exterior will be of gray-mottled brick, with cream-enameled terra cotta trimmings. Gustav P. Wuest is the architect.

News and Features of the POULTRY WORLD

EDITED BY T. W. ORCUTT

Former Secretary St. Louis Poultry Association.

CONSTANT CARE BRINGS SUCCESS WITH INCUBATOR

Intelligence, Carefully Blended With Directions and Watchfulness, Makes Big Hatch.

At this time of the year the attention of all poultry men is directed to the operation of the incubator, which is the chief factor in determining the success of the hatch. It is possible, through carelessness or neglect or through ignorance of the principles of incubation on the part of the operator, to destroy completely the hatching power of fertile eggs. While on the other hand intelligent operation will produce excellent results. Success in artificial incubation comes only when the operator thoroughly understands and applies the necessary details throughout the period of incubation. The seasonable hatching period begins Jan. 1 and should end May 15 each year.

The results of incubation will depend largely on the care of the lamp, which should be filled, the wick trimmed and the burned cleaned once daily. The best time for this work is in the morning immediately after the eggs have been cared for. If the lamp is handled before the eggs are turned, the hands may become oily and thus soil the eggs. Only the best grade of oil should be used and the lamp should never be completely full.

A new wick should be watched for a short period to prevent the flame from running up and smoking. The flame the temperature at the porper degree should be kept sufficiently high to keep and the disc raised slightly during the day. In case the room temperature drops at night, the surplus heat will be used to prevent a drop of the temperature in the egg chamber.

Adjust Regulator Only Once.

The heat is regulated by turning the adjustment nut above the regulator bar on the connecting rod up or down as required. When once regulated properly, the temperature will vary only slightly if proper care is given to the lamp. Outside temperature changes should be met by altering the lamp flame, not by readjusting the regulator.

The eggs should not be placed in the incubator until the temperature is properly regulated.

After the eggs have been placed in the machine, the temperature will drop and remain low for some time; it will then gradually raise, requiring perhaps 12 to 14 hours to reach the desired degree. Do not attempt to run the heat up rapidly, but let it increase gradually.

When the correct degree is reached the incubator should run with only slight variations. Although it is best to maintain an even temperature, it is not always possible to do so, and an occasional variation of one-half degree, or slightly more, will not result seriously if the average temperature is correct.

A high temperature should be avoided, especially at the beginning of incubation. The temperature should be read through the glass door, which should be opened as little as possible.

Position of Thermometer.

The position of the thermometer should always be considered in determining the proper temperature to be maintained. If the thermometer hangs above the trays, as it does in some incubators, it registers the temperature of the air and not that of the eggs, and the actual temperature of the eggs is one to one and one-half degrees lower the first week than the registered temperature. Therefore, in order to supply the proper amount of heat to the eggs the first week, if a hanging thermometer is used, it is necessary to keep the temperature at 102½ or 103 degrees. With a contact thermometer, the temperature should be 102 degrees.

Contact thermometers should be placed between two fertile eggs. The temperature within the incubator is less influenced by that outside after the first week, because of the animal heat given off by the growing embryos. During the second week the mercury of hanging thermometers should indicate 103 degrees, while with contact thermometers the heat should be 102½ degrees.

During the third week the contact temperature should be maintained as near 103 degrees as possible up to the eighteenth day, when it may be allowed to raise to 104 degrees.

Oxygen is essential for the normal development of the embyro chick, the amount required increasing with the growth of the embyro. The eggs give off carbon dioxid, and this increases as the embyro grows. The eggs therefore need only a comparatively small amount of fresh air the first few days, as only a small amount of carbon oxide is given off at that period. It is asserted by some authorities that the natural amount of carbon dioxide given off by the eggs is beneficial, on the ground that it aids in dissolving the carbonate of lime in the shells.

Watch the Ventilation.

Excessive ventilation, permitting a rapid circulation of air in the egg chamber, would result in a rapid evaporation of the moisture. Hence, for normal development, it is necessary to provide moderate, well-controlled ventilation throughout the period of incubation, held well in check at first and increased as it becomes necessary.

The amount of evaporation of the egg contents may be controlled very successfully by maintaining a proper degree of humidity in the air that is taken into the machine. The humidity under a sitting hen usually registers about 60 degrees. If a nonmoisture machine is operated in a room in which the air is dry, owing to climatic conditions, or in which several incubators are being operated, it may be necessary to supply moisture. The amount of moisture exhaled from a surface in a given space of time is governed by the extent of the surface, not by the depth of the receptacle. This principle should be remembered when supplying moisture in a room or in an incubator.

The necessity of following the manufacturers' directions in regard to ventilation cannot be too strongly impressed on the mind of the novice. Eggs of uniform size, shape and color should be selected as far as possible and those with very porous or otherwise defective shells should be eliminated. From the time the eggs become thoroughly heated until the chicks issue from the shells, more or less evaporation of the egg contents takes place, consequently there is a tendency for the parts next to the shell to become dried to the shell unless the egg is well turned at frequent intervals.

When to Stop Turning.

The setting hen turns her eggs several times during the day and night; but conditions existing in artificial incubation do not admit of so many turnings and the eggs are turned twice daily, beginning 36 hours after they are put in the incubator and continuing up to the nineteenth day, on and after which the machine should be kept closed.

The fact that incubators, as a rule, do not supply the same amount of heat to all parts of the tray makes it necessary not only that the eggs be well turned twice each day, but that their positions on the trays be changed as regularly as they are turned. The best time to turn eggs is the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night.

The successful cooling of eggs during incubation counterbalances, to some extent the still imperfect methods of ventilation. To cool eggs properly one must consider the length of time they have incubated, the weather conditions and the room temperature. It is not known just how much cooling is necessary for the best results, nor can a time table be made that will work successfully with all types of incubators and under the varying atmospheric conditions.

But the fact that eggs incubated by hens undergo more or less cooling and hatch well makes it appear essential that those artificially incubated should be treated correspondingly. Results prove this theory to be true. It has been shown that excessive ventilation causes a too rapid evaporation of the egg contents, therefore for the first seven days it is best not to leave them out of the machine longer than is necessary for the proper turning. The length of time to cool may be determined by touching several eggs to the lips. If sufficiently cooled, the eggs will feel cool at contact. They should never be left out long enough to become cold.

Test Your Eggs.

For the best results the eggs should be tested first on the seventh day of incubation and again on the fourteenth day. If the germs are strong and the eggs have been properly incubated, only a few dead germs will be found on the second test. An ordinary lamp that can be fitted with an egg tester is used for testing eggs. On the seventh day of incubation the live germ, if strong, will show clearly the circulatory system branching in various directions. The germ should be centrally located in this network of vessels and is usually found near the air cell, provided the egg is held against the opening in the tester with the large end up. A live embryo is easily moved by turning the egg about.

Occasionally the germ will be hardly visible, but its presence is detected by a darker appearance of the egg contents than is shown by an infertile egg. If for any reason the person doing the testing is in doubt as to whether a germ is alive, it is well to mark the egg and test it later. This practice will help make the operator more expert and will add interest to the work. An infertile egg looks like a fresh egg, the only apparent difference being in the size of the air cell.

Hatching time is the most critical period of incubation and special attention is necessary. The incubator door should not be opened after the nineteenth day; all work of handling the eggs should be completed on the eighteenth day.

Watch the Temperature.

A temperature higher than 103 degrees and one lower than 102 degrees should be avoided at this time. Both of these undesired extremes will occur at some time during the hatching period unless careful provision is made against them, it is best to remove the lamp for a time than to permit the great increase in temperature that occurs when the hatch is at its best. Generally this increase can be overcome by turning down the flame. Very often, toward the end of the hatching period, it is neecssary to raise the flame in order to keep the required temperature.

These two changes in temperature in so short a time will be readily understood when it is remembered that the eggs supply a great amount of animal heat during the last week of incubation and that this animal heat naturally increases as the chickens commence to work their way out of the shells.

The position of the ventilators at hatching time depends on the make of the incubator. It is not advisable to permit a very great change of air until all the chickens are out.

After the hatch is completed, the egg trays should be removed, together with any egg shells that have dropped into the nursery, and the ventilators should be opened full width. If the room is warm, the incubator door may be left open one-half inch at the top. The chickens should be left in the incubator until they are 48 hours old and then removed to a brooder.

White Wyandottes a Useful Variety

WHITE Wyandottes are one of the most useful as well as the most beautiful varieties of the American class. They are known as the bird of curves and more closely approach the standard requirements than any other variety of Wyandottes. The chief problem to solve in breeding this variety for exhibition is to produce a fine white plumage free from brassiness or a creamy tinge. This has been accomplished by a number of breeders during the last five years without affecting the utility qualities of the fowls, and the white Wyandotte of today is very close to perfection. The standard weights are cocks 8½ pounds, cockerels 7½ pounds, hens 6½ pounds and pullets 5½ pounds.

Small chickens, known to the trade as squab broilers, are hatched at this time of the year, and may be grown in eight to ten weeks in brooders, kept in a room where the temperature is maintained at about 70 degrees. The Rhode Island Experiment Station found that when marketed at this age they could be successfully raised without any outdoor exercise.

Poultry Problems Solved

No Eggs.

I have 30 hens and have not got an egg in four months. For morning feed I give them a soft mash of bread with cayenne pepper in it. I feed them mixed grain in the evening. I keep oyster shell where they can get it all the time and once a week I give them cabbage hung up so they have to jump for it. They seem to be in perfect condition and would your please advise me what to do to get eggs?—J. G. C., Paducah, Ky.

Your chickens are getting too much cayenne pepper, which makes them lazy and causes them to become overfat. Birds that are overfed take on fat which congregates around the oviduct and makes it impossible not only for the formation of eggs, but to pass those that have already formed. Discontinue the mash with capenne pepper in it and feed mixed grain in the morning in a deep litter, which will make the hens scratch for it and give them plenty of exercise. Give them plenty of green food such as cabbage, sprouted oats and alfalfa. Make a mash of wheat bran, corn meal, ground alfalfa, with a little beef scrap and feed in a crumbly form at noon and feed a little mixed grain in the litter late in the afternoon. I would recommend that you cut down the quantity of food so that each bird will get a small handful of grain each day and make them scratch for all the grain they get. This with plenty of fresh water and the necessary shell-making food should cause your hens to lay within a reasonable time.

Rhode Island Reds.

I am interested in Rhode Island reds and intend to purchase some foundation stock. I have written several breeders and would like to know who won first prize on single comb Rhode Island red cockerels at Chicago in 1912?

T. L. Ricksecker of Rosedale, Kan., won first and second prize on cockerels at the 1912 Chicago show.

Baby Chicks.

Is it advisable to ship baby chicks 200 miles at this time of the year? I intend to buy some and am not sure that they will stand being shipped so far.—F. R. N., Dexter, Mo.

Would not advise you to have your chickens shipped this distance while the weather is liable to turn cold and kill them.

Poultry Books.

Will you tell me where I can get some reliable information on poultry raising? I understand that some State experiment stations distribute books free on this subject.—G. D. M., Muskogee, Ok.

Write to the Secretary of the Bureau of Animal Industry at Washington, D. C., or to H. A. Bittenberger, professor of Poultry Husbandry at the Oklahoma Agricultural Experiment Station, Stillwater, Ok.

A square run is better than a long narrow one, but the latter often has to be used because it will fit in with the location of things better.

Always examine male birds for insects, as these will cause unfertile eggs. In some cases large clusters of white nits are deposited at the root of the feathers around the vent, these should be pulled out, and a little carbolic or kerosene applied.

STEINMESCH says something: High prices to continue, because there is an actual scarcity of eggs, and especially fresh laid eggs. For 6 months past it has cost the farmer and other producers of eggs 40c per dozen or more for every egg produced. If this is correct, and I think it is, then eggs are worth 50c per dozen, and unless there is some radical change in the method of producing chickens and eggs, still higher prices are sure to prevail. Facts are stubborn things, and few of us are inclined to look them squarely in the face if our viewpoint is different, but in the language of Grover Cleveland, it is a condition that confronts us, not a theory. We promise no easy money or easy job or get rich scheme; but we suggest that everyone who has as much as a 25-foot lot put in 1 or 2 dozen chickens. Raise your own chickens and your own eggs; this may help some. Think it over. Please note what we say, 1 to 2 dozen chickens. We do not encourage any more on restricted quarters. This suggestion is not for those who want to go into the chicken business to make money. For such we have another story—another day. Steinmesch, 220 Market st.

When Pavlowa danced at the Odeon, in January, her corps of assistants presented a novelty in fashion which is raging in Paris. A dozen or more members of the corps de ballet entered singly, each clad in a light robe of different color and the dancer's hair was in each instance the same color as her gown. One had sea green hair, another maroon, another heliotrope another blue, another cerise, (Continued on Page 15.)

"How I Would Control the Trusts"

THEODORE ROOSEVELT'S PLAN FOR REGULATION OF BIG BUSINESS

FORMER President tells the story of his fight for the limitation of corporations and sets forth his ideal plan to check the rapacious.

WHEN I became President, the question as to the method by which the United States Government was to control the corporations was not yet important. The absolutely vital question was whether the Government had the power to control them at all. This question had not yet been decided in favor of the United States Government. It was useless to discuss methods of controlling big business by the National Government until it was definitely settled that the National Government had the power to control it. A decision of the Supreme Court had, with seeming definiteness, settled that the National Government had not the power.

> "THE true way of dealing with monopoly is to prevent it by administrative action before it grows so powerful that even when courts condemn it they shrink from destroying it. The Supreme Court in the Tobacco and Standard Oil cases, for instance, used very vigorous language in condemning these trusts; but the net result of the decision was of positive advantage to the wrongdoers, and this has tended to bring the whole body of our law into disrepute in quarters where it is of the very highest importance that the law be held in respect and even in reverence."

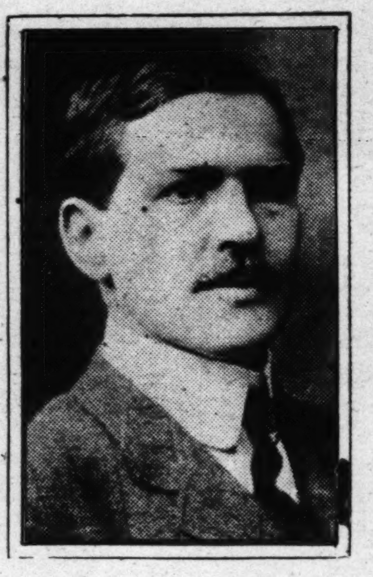
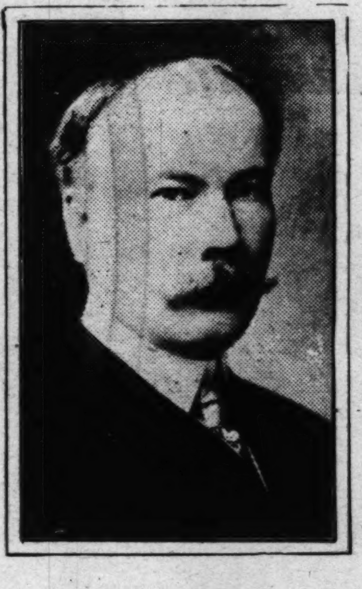
This decision I caused to be annulled by the Court that had rendered it; and the present power of the National Government to deal effectively with the trusts is due solely to the success of the administration in securing this reversal of its former decision by the Supreme Court.

The Sherman anti-trust law was enacted in 1890 because the formation of the Tobacco Trust and the Sugar Trust, the only two great trusts then in the country (aside from the Standard Oil Trust, which was a gradual growth), had awakened a popular demand for legislation to destroy monopoly and curb industrial combinations. This demand the anti-trust law was intended to satisfy. The administrations of Mr. Harrison and Mr. Cleveland evidently construed this law as prohibiting such combinations in the future, not as condemning those which had been formed prior to its enactment. In 1895, however, the Sugar Trust, whose output originally was about 55 per cent of all sugar produced in the United States, obtained control of three other companies in Philadelphia by exchanging its stock for theirs, and thus increased its business until it controlled 98 per cent of the entire produce. Under Cleveland, the Government brought proceedings against the Sugar Trust, invoking the anti-trust law, to set aside the acquisition of these corporations.



JAMES R. GARFIELD,

First Head of the Bureau of Corporations.



PAUL MORTON,

Ex-Secretary of the Navy.

The test case was on the absorption of the Knight company. The Supreme Court of the United States with but one dissenting vote held adversely to the Government. They took the ground that the power conferred by the Constitution to regulate and control interstate commerce did not extend to the production or manufacture of commodities within a state, and that nothing in the Sherman anti-trust law prohibited a corporation from acquiring all the stock of other corporations through exchange of its stock for theirs, such exchange not being "commerce" in the opinion of the Court, even though by such acquisition the corporation was enabled to control the entire production of a commodity that was a necessary of life.

This decision left the National Government, that is, the people of the nation, practically helpless to deal with the large combinations of modern business. The courts in other cases asserted the power of the Federal Government to enforce the anti-trust law so far as transportation rates by railways engaged in interstate commerce was concerned. But so long as the trusts were free to control the production of commodities without interference from the general Government, they were well content to let the transportation of commodities take care of itself—especially as the law against rebates was at that time a dead letter; and the Court, by its decision in the Knight case had interdicted any interference by the President or by Congress with the production of commodities. It was on the authority of this case that practically all the big trusts in the United States, excepting those already mentioned, were formed. Usually they were organized as "holding" companies, each one acquiring control of its constituent corporations by exchanging its stock for theirs, an operation which the Supreme Court had thus decided could not be prohibited, controlled, regulated, or even questioned by the Federal Government.

> "MONOPOLIES can, although in rather cumbrous fashion, be broken up by lawsuits. Great business combinations, however, cannot possibly be made useful instead of noxious industrial agencies merely by lawsuits, and especially by lawsuits supposed to be carried on for their destruction and not for their control and regulation."

Such was the condition of our laws when I acceded to the presidency. Just before my accession, a small group of financiers, desiring to profit by the governmental impotence to which we had been reduced by the Knight decision, had arranged to take control of practically the entire railway system in the Northwest—possibly as the first step toward controlling the entire railway system of the country. This control of the Northwestern railway systems was to be effected by organizing a new "holding" company, and exchanging its stock against the stock of the various corporations engaged in railway transportation throughout that vast territory, exactly as the Sugar Trust had acquired control of the Knight company and other concerns. This company was called the Northern Securities Co. Not long after I became President, on the advice of the Attorney-General, Mr. Knox, and through him, I ordered proceedings to be instituted for the dissolution of the company. As far as could be told by their utterances at the time, among all the great lawyers in the United States, Mr. Knox was the only one who believed that this action could be sustained. The defense was based expressly on the ground that the Supreme Court in the Knight case had explicitly sanctioned the formation of such a company as the Northern Securities Co. The representatives of privilege intimated, and sometimes asserted outright, that in directing the action to be brought I had shown a lack of respect for the Supreme Court, which had already decided the question at issue by a vote of eight to one. Mr. Justice White, then on the Court and now Chief Justice, set forth the position with what I regard as incontrovertible logic. In giving the views of the dissenting minority on the action I had brought, he said:

"The parallel between the two cases (the Knight case and the Northern Securities case) is complete. The one corporation acquired the stock of other and competing corporations in exchange for its own. It was conceded for the purposes of the case, that in doing so monopoly had been brought about in the refining of sugar, that the sugar to be produced was likely to become the subject of interstate commerce, and indeed that part of it would certainly become so. But the power of Congress was decided not to extend to the subject, because the ownership of the stock in the corporations was not itself commerce."

Mr. Justice White was entirely correct in this statement. The cases were parallel. It was necessary to reverse the Knight case in the interests of the people against monopoly and privilege, just as it had been necessary to reverse the Dred Scott case in the interest of the people against slavery and privilege; just as later it became necessary to reverse the New York bakeshop case in the interest of the people against that form of monopolistic privilege which puts human rights below property rights where wageworkers are concerned.

By a vote of five to four the Supreme Court reversed its decision in the Knight case, and in the Northern Securities case sustained the Government. The power to deal with industrial monopoly and suppress it and to control and regulate combinations, of which the Knight case had deprived the Federal Government, was thus restored to it by the Northern Securities case.

After this later decision was rendered, suits were brought by my direction against the American Tobacco Co. and the Standard Oil Co. Both were adjudged criminal conspiracies and their dissolution ordered. The Knight case was finally overthrown. The vicious doctrine it embodied no longer remains as an obstacle to obstruct the pathway of justice when it assails monopoly.

Monopolies can, although in rather cumbrous fashion, be broken up by lawsuits. Great business combinations, however, cannot possibly be made useful instead of noxious industrial agencies merely by lawsuits, and especially by lawsuits supposed to be carried on for their destruction and not for their control and regulation. I at once began to urge upon Congress the need of laws supplementing the anti-trust law—for this law struck at all big business, good and bad alike, and, as the event proved, was wholly inefficient in checking bad big business, and yet was a constant threat against decent business men. I strongly urged the inauguration of a system of thoroughgoing and drastic governmental regulation and control over all big business combinations engaged in interstate industry.

Here I was able to accomplish only a small part of what I desired to accomplish. I was opposed both by the foolish radicals who desired to break up all big business, with the impossible ideal of returning to mid-nineteenth century industrial conditions;—and also by the great privileged interests themselves, who used these ordinarily—but sometimes not entirely—well-meaning "stool pigeon progressives" to further their own cause. However, we succeeded in making a good beginning by securing the passage of a law creating the Department of Commerce and Labor, and with it the erection of the Bureau of Corporations. The first head of the Department of Commerce and Labor was Mr. Cortelyou, later Secretary of the Treasury. He was succeeded by Mr. Oscar Straus. The first head of the Bureau of Corporations was Mr. Garfield, who was succeeded by Mr. Herbert Knox Smith. No four better public servants from the standpoint of the people as a whole could have been found.

The Standard Oil Co. took the lead in opposing all this legislation. This was natural, for it had been the worst offender in the amassing of enormous fortunes by improper methods of all kinds, at the expense of business rivals and of the public, including the corruption of public servants. If any man thinks this condemnation extreme, I refer him to the language officially used by the Supreme Court of the nation in its decision against the Standard Oil Co. Through their counsel, and by direct telegrams and letters to Senators and Congressmen from various heads of the Standard Oil organization, they did their best to kill the bill providing for the Bureau of Corporations. I got hold of one or two of these telegrams and letters, however, and promptly published them; and, as generally happens in such a case, the men who were all-powerful as long as they could work in secret and behind closed doors, became powerless as soon as they were forced out into the open. The bill went through without further difficulty.

The true way of dealing with monopoly is to prevent it by administrative action before it grows so powerful that even when courts condemn it they shrink from destroying it. The Supreme Court in the Tobacco and Standard Oil cases, for instance, used very vigorous language in condemning these trusts; but the net result of the decision was of positive advantage to the wrongdoers, and this has tended to bring the whole body of our law into disrepute in quarters where it is of the very highest importance that the law be held in respect and even in reverence. My effort was to secure the creation of a Federal commission which should neither excuse nor tolerate monopoly, but prevent it when possible and uproot it when discovered; and which should in addition effectively control and regulate all big combination, and should give honest business certainty as to what the law was and security as long as the law was obeyed. Such a commission would furnish a steady expert control, a control adapted to the problem; and dissolution is neither control nor regulation, but is purely negative; and negative remedies are of little permanent avail. Such a commission would have complete power to examine into every big corporation engaged or proposing to engage in business between the states. It would have the power to discriminate sharply between corporations that are doing well and those that are doing ill; and the distinction between those who do well and those who do ill would be defined in terms so clear and unmistakable that no one could misapprehend them.

> "I WAS opposed both by the foolish radicals who desired to break up all big business, with the impossible ideal of returning to mid-nineteenth century industrial conditions; and also by the great privileged interests themselves, who used these ordinarily—but sometimes not entirely—well-meaning 'stool pigeon progressives' to further their own cause."

Where a company is found seeking its profits through serving the community by stimulating production, lowering prices or improving service, while scrupulously respecting the rights of others (including its rivals, its employes, its customers and the general public), and strictly obeying the law, then, no matter how large its capital or how great the volume of its business, it would be encouraged to still more abundant production, or

> "THE law against rebates was a dead letter. All the unscrupulous railway men had been allowed to violate it with impunity; and because of this, as was inevitable, the scrupulous and decent railway men had been forced to violate it themselves, under penalty of being beaten by their less scrupulous rivals. It was not the fault of these decent railway men. It was the fault of the Government."

IS is no longer fashionable, in the West End, for the little daughters of the rich to stay indoors through the winter and nourish their complexions. On the contrary, it is the proper thing to get into loose-fitting blouses and bloomers and romp in the open air, either in a rollicking game of basket ball or roller skating or riding tricycles.

Almost any afternoon when the weather is anything like favorable, troops of light hearted boys and girls may be seen playing in a vacant lot or skating along the pavement. But it is relatively a new thing in St. Louis In New York it has long been the custom for the children play in the open-air playgrounds.

Until a year ago, there was scarcely any place for rich little girls to play. They were much worse off, in that respect, than the poor little girls of congested districts. It is a matter of record that the little girls of Portland place, Westmoreland place and other streets in the exclusive sections actually did not know how to play.

Most of them had never heard of such jolly games as "High Spy," "Kick the Picket," "Run, Sheep, Run!" and similar amusements. The trouble was that although most of them lived in homes with handsome lawns, the lawns were not to be used for such grass-destroying pastimes.

Things went along that way until several mothers got together and formed a club. They decided the children ought to be taught how to play. Miss Isabel Hull, 4371 Maryland avenue, was appointed instructor Arrangements were made to use vacant back lots, one, among others, in Westmoreland place. Basket ball goals were set up and classes were formed.

The children took to the innovation from the first. Teams were formed among them and they had some exciting games. On Thursday afternoons there would be special contests for the parents, who enjoyed watching the games almost as much as the little girls enjoyed playing them.

Basket ball was not the only amusement taught them, but they enjoyed it perhaps more than any other. Some of them have become rather proficient. Miss Hull and one of several other young women in the neighborhood supervise the play.

Photographs of the children taken at play show how enthusiastic the little girls are over the contest. One of the pictures shows an exciting struggle at the basket, the referee, Miss Jamison, being caught in the mixup. Anna Hitchcock, daughter of Judge and Mrs. George C. Hitchcock, 5363 Waterman avenue, in the picture, is effectively blocking a try-at-goal.

A hot scrimmage before the basket.

Another photograph shows the preparation for a scrimmage when the ball is being put into play after rolling out of bounds. Dorothy Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Simmons, Hanley and Clayton roads, is putting it in play, with with Marguerite Chandler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren M. Chandler, 5247 Waterman avenue, and Mary Hitchock, sister of Anna, leaders of the rival sides.

One snapshot caught Elizabeth Boeckeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Boeckeler, 4516 Maryland avenue, in the act of making a long toss to a team mate. She is carefully picking the right spot to place the ball. On the other side of the field, a few minutes later, Margaret Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Hunt Turner, 484 Lake avenue, was snapped in the act of making a try-at-goal.

A sturdy and efficient full back, waiting for the play to come her way, is seen in the pose of Catherine Steedman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Steedman, 34 Westmoreland place. Prominent in another group of play-girl athletes is Katherine Crunden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Crunden, 4426 Westmoreland place.

Two of the interested spectators were the little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, 16 Portland place. The little girls, Helen and Alice, are out-of-door babies, especially fond of their rubber-tired tricycles. They come honestly by their fondness for the open air. Their father, Park Commissioner Davis, has long been one of the leaders in American lawn tennis, is the doner of the cup which contested for annually in international tennis matches, and with J. H. Wear, is holder of the national racquet doubles championship.

The day has to be unusually cold and damp when scores of little girls, warmly and comfortably clad, cannot be seen playing in the open.

Dorothy as a Business Woman

TOM, who had more money than was quite decent, was Dorothy's backer in her business venture. She now became ambitious to do more than help in the housekeeping, which she declared was child's play to a woman, of intelligence thereby "getting dear mother's goat." Mother was the only member of the family who didn't approve of her daughter starting a candy shop.

Everybody else thought it was bully, especially brother Bill, who dropped into sister's shop so often that Dorothy wondered how he was able to hold down his job. Bill was fond of sweets. He said so to Dorothy's assistant, Marie French, who was an old schoolmate of his sister's. Bill also called her his "Candy Kid." Dorothy said he was a nuisance and patted his cheeks. She was very happy herself.

Tom would wander in sometimes and she would show him her books proudly. Tom never really looked at the rows of figures, but looked at the curve of her neck and the length of her eyelashes and the little curls over her ears and her fingers with their pretty nails that were pink and glossy. She thought of course he was merely interested in the ruled pages of her journal. Yes, she did!

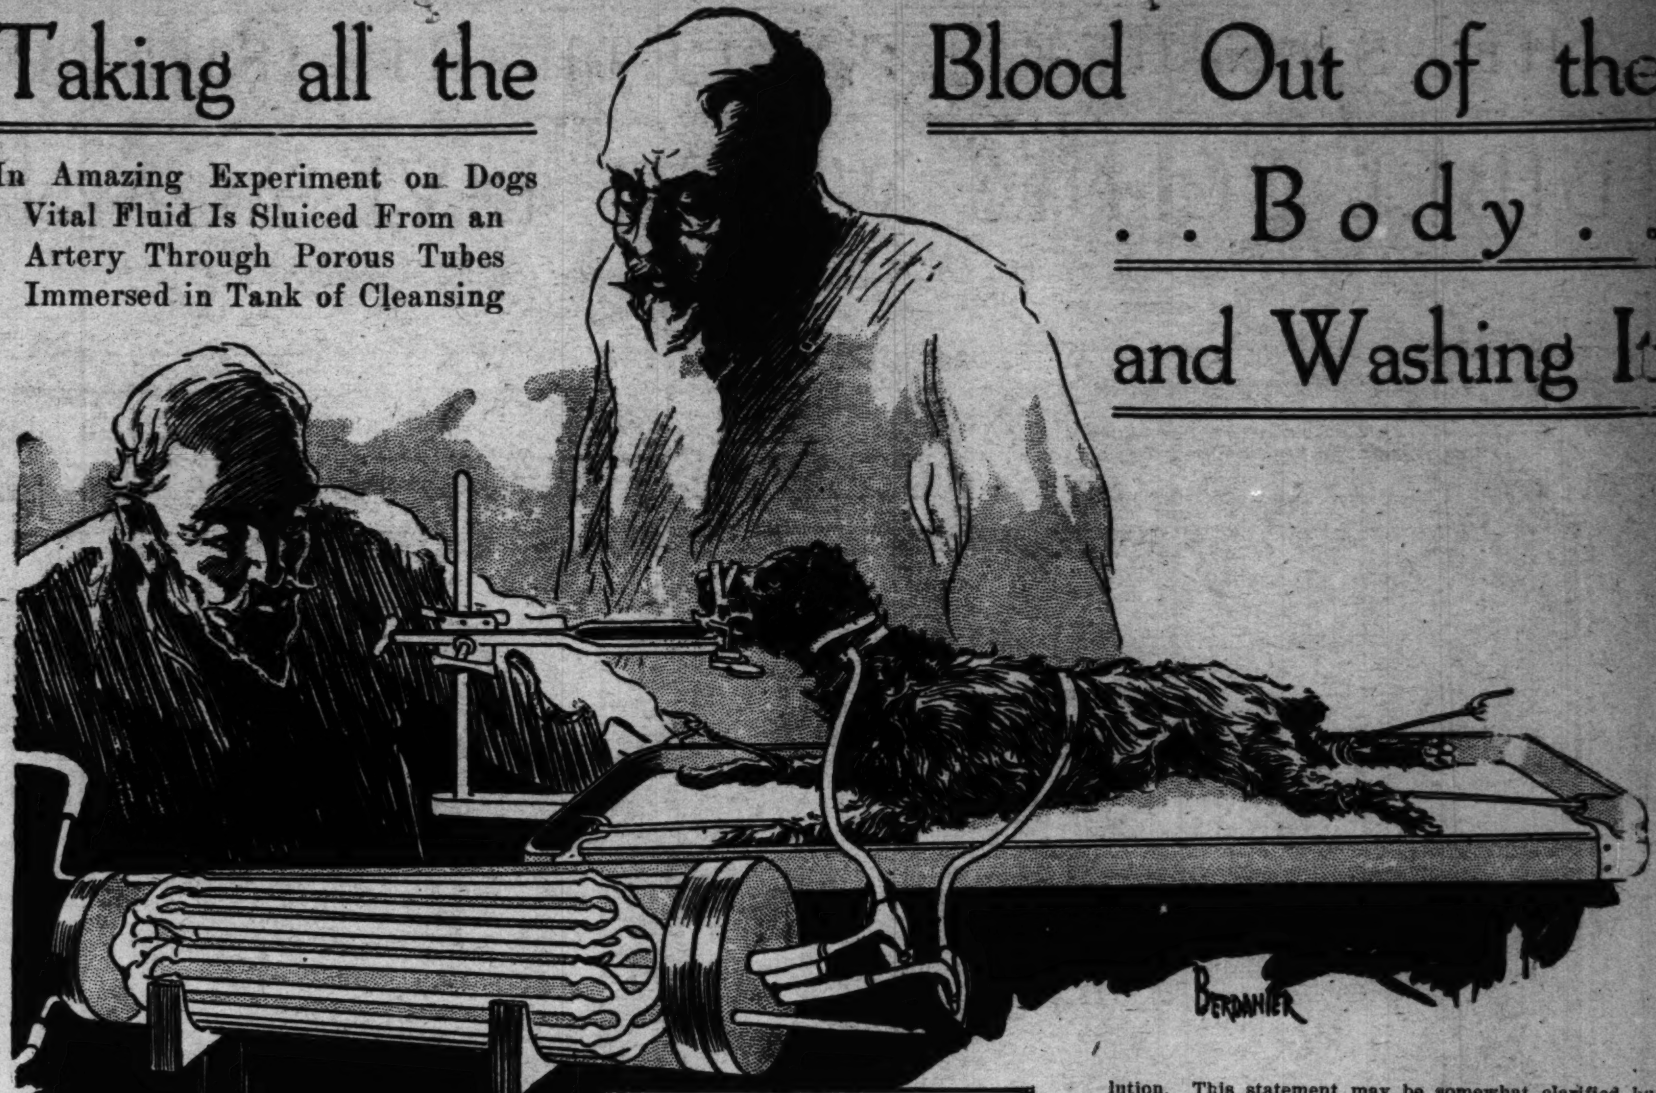
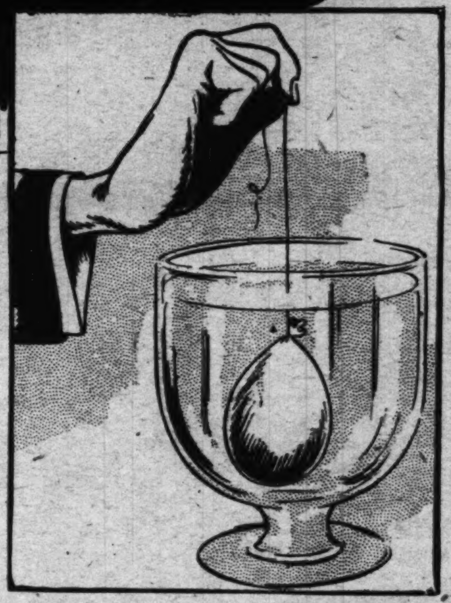
Taking all the Blood Out of the Body and Washing It

In Amazing Experiment on Dogs Vital Fluid Is Sluiced From an Artery Through Porous Tubes Immersed in Tank of Cleansing Liquid, Is There Purified of Poison or Disease, and Then Restored to the Veins—A Machine of Glass and Membrane Which Does the Work of the Kidneys.



WHAT will not science attempt next? Its latest miracle is the astounding one of drawing the fluid of life, the very blood itself, from a living body, washing it and restoring it to the veins, and this without impairing the health of the subject of the experiment.

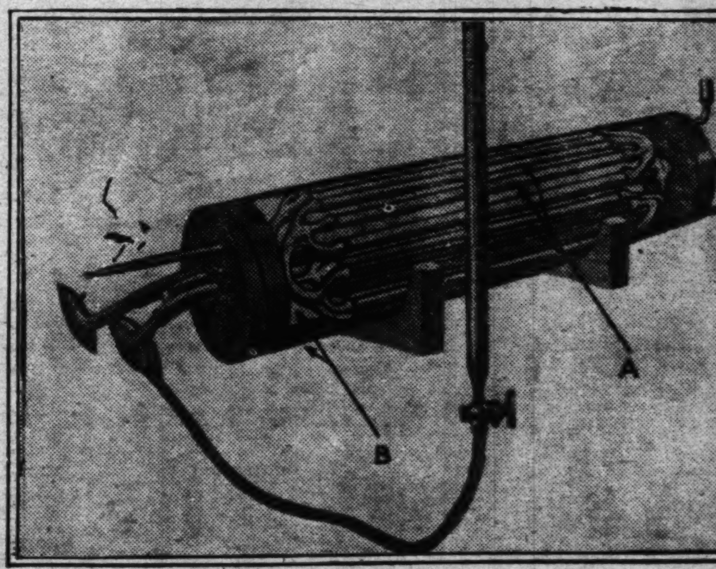


"If a bladder containing sweetened water is immersed in pure water, sugar will seep through the membrane and sweeten the pure water."

So far the test has been made only on dogs; but the scientists, inasmuch as they have determined to their own satisfaction that the procedure is not inimical to life, see no reason why it should not be applied to human beings when occasion arises.

Of course, all the blood is not sluiced out at once, and a substitute is supplied to take the place of that temporarily outside the body. The principle of the operation is as simple as it is audacious. An artery is tapped and the blood, still impelled by the heart, is driven through a system of porous tubes immersed in a cleansing solution, and is pumped back into the body through one of the veins.

The success of the experiment, which was first achieved by three physicians of the pharmacological laboratory of Johns Hopkins University—Dr. John J. Abel, Dr. Leonard G. Rowntree and Dr. B. B. Turner—opens an amazing vista of possibilities in the treatment of disease, and especially of cases of poisoning. Tests are afoot looking to the conquest of many blood diseases by means of the new "blood laundry," and its use is indicated in such emergencies as poisoning by gas, arsenic, lead and mercury, and in ailments of the kidneys.

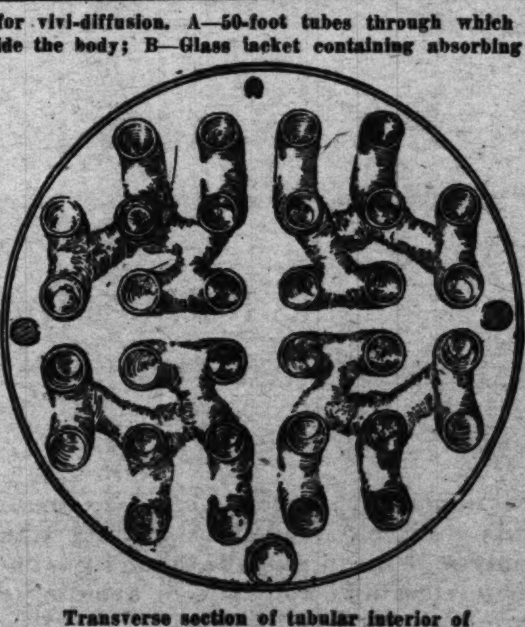


Apparatus for vivi-diffusion. A—50-foot tubes through which blood circulates outside the body; B—Glass jacket containing absorbing solution.

Indeed, the apparatus employed has been called an "artificial kidney," because of its capacity for fulfilling the functions of that organ.

Although the principle of the operation is simple, its technique presented many difficulties which were ingeniously overcome. To find a substitute to circulate in the body in place of the absent blood was not so hard, for a mixture of water and salt in certain proportions, referred to in laboratory work as a "normal saline solution," closely resembles the blood serum of an animal.

But the tendency of the blood to alter its composition, and particularly to coagulate, when outside its vessels for even the briefest time, was a more serious problem. It was finally solved by the injection of a substance derived from leeches, and called hirulin, which exerts an anti-coagulative effect. Hirulin was so expensive, costing $27.50 a gram, that the physicians decided to manufacture it themselves, and after buying leeches by the thousands, discovered a new and cheaper method of extracting the agent.



Transverse section of tubular interior of "artificial kidney."

Then came the difficulty of the artificial "arteries" through which the blood should pass. An operation in physics called dialysis was impressed into service. Its principle can scarcely be stated except in technical language. It is that when crystalloid and colloid substances are present in a solution, and when an animal membrane is interposed between the solution and pure water, the crystalloid substances seep through the membrane into the water, and the colloid substances remain in the solution. This statement may be somewhat clarified by stating that mineral poisons are crystalloid, while the essential normal constituents of the blood are colloid, or gelatinous.

Supposing that one half-filled a vessel with distilled water and suspended in it a bladder, or a bag made of membrane parchment; and supposing that the bag were filled with sugared water and left immersed in the pure water for an hour.

If one should leave the bag hanging for an hour by itself it would not lose a drop of liquid. But at the end of the hour of immersing the enclosing water would also be sweet. The sugar inside the bag would strain out through the minute interstices of the membrane until the water outside the bag is just as sweet as that within it. This is tne process of dialysis, or, to give it another technical name, that of osmosis.

Instead of animal membrane, the physicians found it best to use a dialyzing substance called celloidin, which is molded inside glass tubes and pulled out when dry. The system of artificial "arteries" is composed, for an animal the size of a 40-pound dog, of as many as 32 to 48 tubes. This is to provide a maximum diffusing surface with as small a volume as possible. Great care is taken to avoid all sharp angles and sudden bends, and to make all the branching channels as nearly as possible of the same width, length and directness. These precautions are necessary in order to maintain a uniformity of flow, which is a very important consideration.

The tubing, for a 40-pound dog, is 50 feet long, but it turns upon itself in S-shape curves so that the entire apparatus takes up little more space than a cubic foot. The tubes have a capacity of about seven and a half pints. It is necessary to fill them first with the saline solution, for two reasons. If there were a vacuum in the tubes blood would rush into them not only from the arteries, but also from the veins. If air were left in the tubes and were driven by the oncoming blood into the veins, it would cause death as soon as it reached the heart.

A glass vessel is provided as a jacket for the system of tubes and as a container for the cleansing fluid in which they are immersed. The composition of this fluid was the most delicate problem of all. Ideally, it would be the blood serum of a normal animal of the same species as that operated upon; but in experiments upon human beings, this would be difficult if not impracticable to obtain. The question of making an artificial serum becomes the dainty one of balance, for if both liquids are of the identical composition there will be no movement from one to the other. Pure water was out of the question, for it leads very quickly to haemolysis (destruction) of the red corpuscles.

The "artificial kidney" is now completed. The system of celloidin tubes culminates at each end in glass tubes, for connection with the artery and vein to be tapped. The glass jacket has inlet and outlet tubes, so that the cleansing solution may continually be refreshed. The operation is ready to begin.

The subject is anesthetized with chloretone, which has the faculty of producing prolonged and light anesthesia with relatively little depression. It is administered by stomach pump about two hours before the operation, the crystals being washed down with water. Sometimes, at certain stages, it is advisable to assist the chloretone with a little ether.

An artery and a vein are severed, usually in pairs, such as the carotid artery and vein, or the femoral artery and vein of the same side, or usually of opposite sides. The tube system is filled with the normal saline solution, to about the volume of one-third of the body's blood. Connection is established between the circulatory system and the "artificial kidney," and slowly the heart begins pumping blood into the tubes, driving the salt water solution before it into the veins.

Foreign crystalline substances in the blood, like poisons, filter through the tubes into the solution, and the purified blood passes back into the body. Of course

THE SHEPHERD CALLETH HIS SHEEP

BIBLE SCENES WHICH LIVE AGAIN

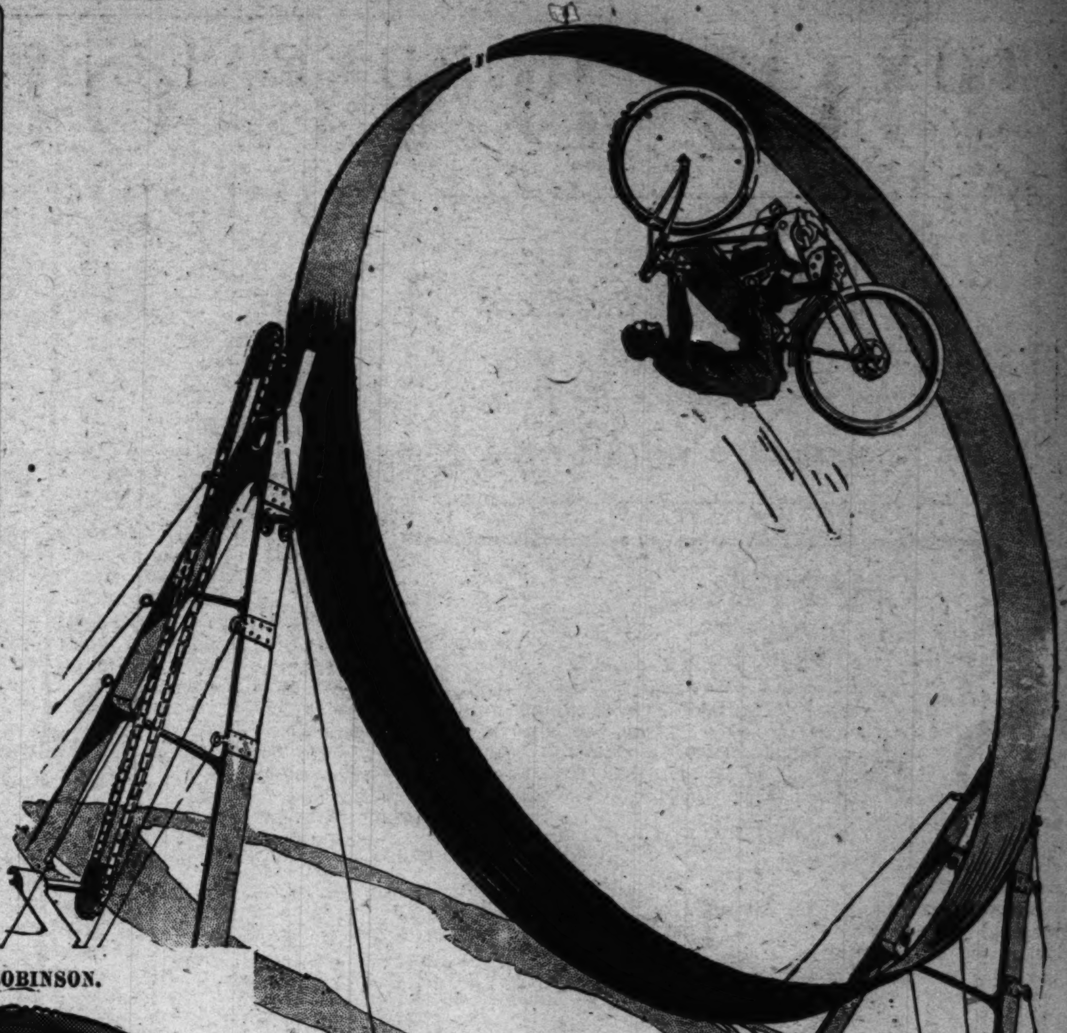
He calleth His own sheep by name and leadeth them out. He goeth before them and the sheep follow Him; for they know His voice. John X: 3-4; Psalms XXIII: 1; Isaiah XL: 11; Jeremiah XXIII: 4: I Peter II: 25.

OUR American herdsmen drive the animals before them, but Palestine shepherds still lead animals and call them to follow, just as the Bible phraseology gives us to understand. The flocks are comparatively small. The pasturage is usually scanty and sheep must be taken from one piece of ground to another. They are not clever about foraging for themselves and not agile in avoiding danger among steep rocks or loose stones. The shepherds' watchful care is a practical necessity.

St. Louis Aviator Quits After Fifteen Narrow Escapes . . . .

TO TEMPT DEATH IN ANOTHER WAY

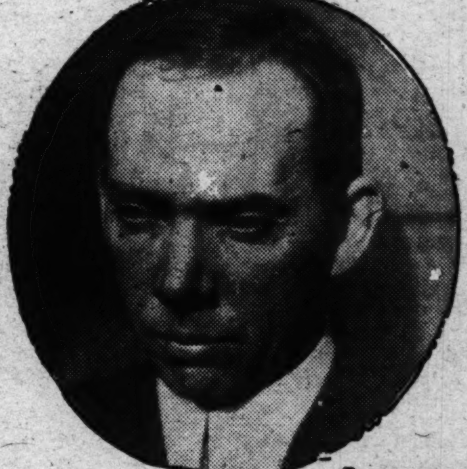
HUGH ROBINSON of St. Louis, protected by lucky number 13, saved more lives than a cat's in many accidents, but has renounced the air for hair-raising spectacle—Swam a mile in Mediterranean with broken collarbone and ribs, and once dropped nearly 1000 feet before he righted diving biplane.



Riding a motor cycle at 40 miles an hour on a ring, two feet wide and 14 feet in diameter, as it revolves round and round.

HAVING brushed wings with death in 15 hazardous accidents during five years as an aviator in America and Europe, and escaping with sundry broken bones, thanks to the beneficence of his talisman, the number 13, Hugh Robinson of St. Louis announces that he has forsaken the air and will hereafter confine himself to looping-the-loop with a motor cycle on a revolving hoop two feet wide! Even this hair-raising occupation he considers as less perilous than the dangers of the sky.

HUGH ROBINSON.



He was born on Friday, the thirteenth, in 1883. The first cash prize he won as an aviator amounted to $1333.-33. He has never ventured to drive an aeroplane which did not bear somewhere on its surface the number 13; and when it appeared in another number, such as 2137, he emphasized the lucky integers by drawing a ring around them.

He is firmly convinced that the magic of this numeral, which is to most persons ill-omened, has preserved his life in many perils which proved fatal to fellow adventurers in the air. It will be printed conspicuously on the framework of his whirling loop-the-loop with which he plans to enter vaudeville.

Robinson declares he was the first man in the world to loop-the-loop on a motor cycle. Then came an improved "thriller," in which a motor cyclist rode around and around at all angles on the interior surface of a globe of iron lattice work.

To the St. Louisan came the idea of cutting a narrow slice out of the globe, so as to form a big hoop, which he caused to revolve by electricity on an axis. His part is to drive a motor cycle around this hoop, 24 inches wide, at such velocity as not to fall when upside down or even when parallel with the ground. The revolution of the hoop places him successively at every conceivable angle to its axis.

It is not surprising to note that, on his first attempt to ride this apparatus, Robinson crashed with his motor cycle through the hoop and went through the side of a barn. Picking himself up with a few bruises, he decided that he must use a lighter motor cycle engine, and set about rebuilding his revolving treadway.

The steel band about which he careens is 14 feet in diameter, and to hold his place upon it he must have a velocity of 40 miles an hour. To achieve this speed before launching himself upon the hoop he uses a saucer-shaped platform upon the curve of which he drives higher and higher and faster and faster until at last he can swerve up upon the ring. The platform then drops out of the way and the ring begins turning upon its axis. Its rate of revolution is necessarily quite slow. The slight concavity which the hoop possesses as a 24-inch segment of a 14-foot circle is sufficient to hold the motor cycle even when the rider is almost parallel with the ground.

The two aviation accidents which Robinson estimates were his narrowest escapes occurred at such distant places as Juan les Pins, on the Mediterranean coast of France, and Paducah, Ky. Either of them would have been the last of his flights had he not possessed as many lives as a cat.

In February, 1911, the St. Louisan was exhibiting in Europe the first hydroaeroplane that continent had ever seen, and was engaged for maneuvers at Juan les Pins before naval officers of France, Germany and Russia.

On the day set for the exhibition a gale of 40 miles an hour was sweeping in from the sea. Paulhan, the famous French aviator, who also was to fly, refused flatly to venture aloft. But Robinson launched himself into the teeth of the wind and for 45 minutes gave a pyrothechnical display of American storm-fighting.

As he finally headed in for the shore, the force of the gale behind him and the speed of his biplane gave the craft a probable velocity of 90 miles an hour. When he was still nearly a mile out, a sudden gust smashed up beneath the tail of the machine, tipping it abruptly forward. Its nose plunged into a big wave and the hydro turned a somersault. Robinson shot out of his seat and described an arc through the air of about 10 feet. He struck the water with such violence as to fracture his left collarbone for the third time and to break several ribs.

He wore a sweater, an overcoat, a raincoat, a helmet, leggings and heavy shoes, besides his other garments. His injuries made one arm useless, so that he could neither remove his hampering garments nor swim.

He turned upon his back and thrashed about with his legs and one arm in order to keep afloat, letting the tide, which was rolling shoreward in great waves, bear him along. Had the tide been ebbing, he would have drowned. As it was, when he was 100 feet from terra firma, he was so exhausted that he gave himself up for lost, ceased to struggle and let himself sink. But his feet encountered ground, and he found the water was no deeper than the height of his shoulders. Three weeks later he was flying again, with one arm in a sling.

Some months afterward Robinson was making flights at Paducah, Ky., in a field surrounded by walls of canvas, so that admission could be charged. One morning there came a storm which blew down the entire fence, and when a throng of spectators arrived the wind was still blowing strongly. In order not to disappoint them, the aviator decided to go up. He was driving a land machine, not a flying boat.

For half an hour he fluttered about at a height of from 700 to 1000 feet, his craft being buffeted like a bird beaten hither and thither in a gale. Then, among the billows of the air there arose one of those great sudden surges which are the terrors of aviators. It broke upon the nose of the machine and sent it staggering downwards. The shock flung the driver from his seat and threw him upon the steering wheel. His weight drove it forward, the vertical rudders were forced down as far as they would go, and the biplane dived headlong at a frightful velocity. Oil running forward in the cylinders instantly stopped the motors.

It all occurred in a few seconds, but to the aviator they were like eternities. He realized, with the presence of mind possessed by some men in emergencies, that he could only hope to save his life by lifting his weight from the steering wheel and tilting the rudder upward before he reached the earth. It seemed to him as if he struggled for hours, with the long-drawn-out strain of a nightmare, to push his body backwards. At last his hand, feeling for support, caught one of the steel tubes supporting the radiator.

With this hold he dragged himself upwards, and, grasping the steering wheel with the other hand, pulled it sharply back. The craft swung upward in an arc and righted itself only 100 feet from the ground. It landed a moment later and was smashed to kindling wood, but Robinson was merely scratched.

After a daredevil career as a parachute jumper, motor cycle speed fiend and automobile racer, during which, he declares, he broke every bone in his body, Robinson, in 1900, began experiments with gliders in St. Louis. During the Louisiana Purchase Exposition he was mechanician for Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin, who was then flying a dirigible. Here the St. Louisan first met Glenn H. Curtiss, who had been building motor cycle engines, and whom Baldwin pursuaded to give his attention to designing lighter motors for aerial power. Eight years later Curtiss was to win the Bennett Cup for speed at Rheims, France.

THE DAY OF DAYS

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

TO every man there comes one day of fortune, one day when he may gain anything he desires, if so be it he has the courage of his hope.

CHAPTER I.

The Dub.

"SMELL," P. Sybarite mused aloud.

For an instant he was silent in depression. Then with extraordinary vehemence he continued crescendo: "Stupid-stagnant-sepulchral-sempiternally-sticky smell!"

He paused for both breath and words; pondered with bended head, knitting his brows forbiddingly.

"Supremely squalid, sinisterly sebaceous, somberly sociable smell!" he continued violently.

Momentarily his countenance cleared; but his smile was as fugitive as the favor of Princes.

Vindictively champing the end of a cedar penholder, he grouped for expression: "Stygian—sickening—surfeiting—slovenly—sour"——

He shook his head impatiently and clawed the impregnated atmosphere with a tragic hand.

"Stench!" he perorated in a voice tremulous with emotion.

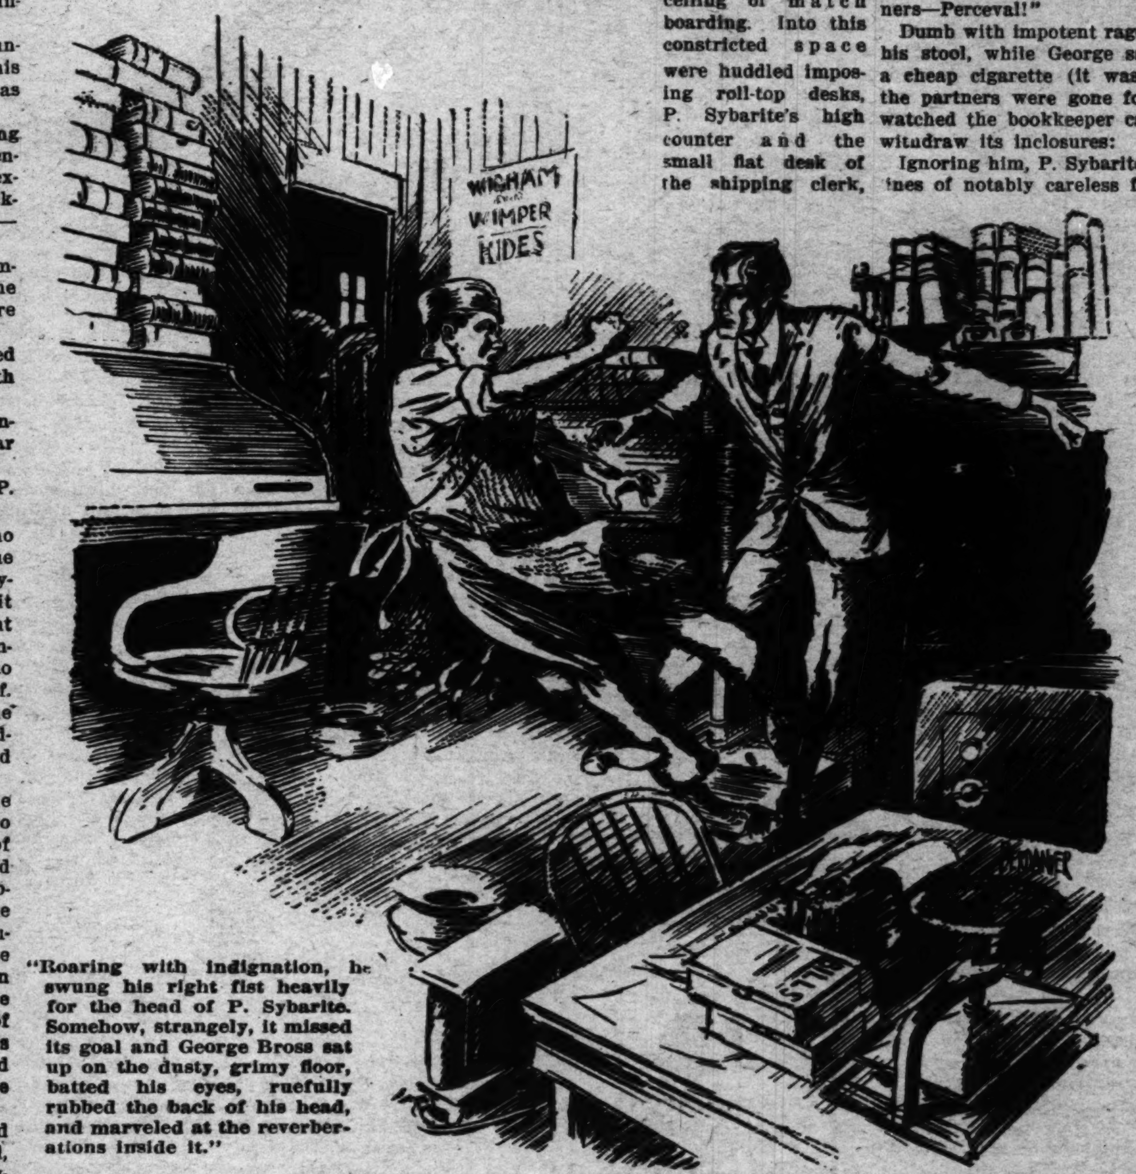
Even that comprehensive monosyllable was far from satisfactory.

"Oh, what's the use?" P. Sybarite despaired.

Alliteration could do no more; his mother tongue itself seemed poverty-stricken, his native wit inadequate. With decent meekness he owned himself unfit for the task to which he had set himself.

"I'm only a dub," he groaned, "a poor, God-forsaken, prematurely aged and indigent dub!"

For 10 interminable years the aspiration to do justice to the genius of the place had smoldered in his humble bosom; today for the first time he had attempted to formulate a meet apostrophe to that god of his forlorn destiny; and now he chewed the bitter cud of realization that all his eloquence had proved hopelessly poor and lame and halting.



"Roaring with indignation, he swung his right fist heavily for the head of P. Sybarite. Somehow, strangely, it missed its goal and George Bross sat up on the dusty, grimy floor, batted his eyes, ruefully rubbed the back of his head, and marveled at the reverberations inside it."

Perched on the polished seat of a very tall stool, his slender legs fraternizing with its legs in apparently inextricable intimacy; sharp elbows digging into the nicked and ink-stained bed of a counting house desk; chin some six inches above the pages of a huge leather-covered ledger, hair rumpled and fretful, mouth doleful, eyes disconsolate—he gloomed.

On this, the eve of his thirty-second birthday, and likewise the tenth anniversary of his servitude, the appearance of P. Sybarite was elaborately normal—varying, as it did, but slightly from one year's end to the other.

His occupation had fitted his head and shoulders with a deceptive but none the less perennial stoop. His means had endowed him with a single outworn suit of ready-made clothing, which, shrinking sensitively on each successive application of the tailor's sizzling goose, had come to disclose his person with disconcerting candor—sleeves too short, trousers at once too short and too narrow, waistcoat buttons straining over his chest, coat buttons refusing to recognize a buttonhole save that the waist. Circumstances, these, that added meas-ably to his apparent age, lending him the semblance maturity attained while still in the shell of youth.

The ruddy brown hair thatching his well-modeled head, his sanguine coloring, friendly blue eyes and mobile lips suggesting Irish lineage; and his hands, which, though thin and clouded with smears of ink, were strong and graceful like the slender feet in his shabby shoes, carried out the suggestion with an added hint of gentle blood.

But whatever his antecedents, the fact is indisputable that P. Sybarite, just then, was most miserable; and this was not without cause, for the genius of the place held his soul in its melancholy bondage.

The place was the counting room in the warehouse of Messrs. Whigham & Wimper, Hides and Skins; and the genius of it was the reek of hides, both raw and dressed—an effluvium incomparable, a passionate individualist of an odor, as rare as a reticent author, as friendly as a stray puppy.

For 10 endless years the body and soul of P. Sybarite had been thrall to that smell; for a decade he had inhaled it continuously nine hours each day, six days each week—and had felt lonesome without it on every seventh day.

But today all his being was in revolt, bitterly, hopelessly mutinuous against this evil and overbearing genius.

The warehouse—impregnable lair of the smell, from which it leered smug defiance at the sea-sweet atmosphere of the lower city—occupied a walled-in-arch of the Brooklyn Bridge, fronting on Franfort street, in that part of town still known to elder inhabitants as "the Swamp." Above rumbled the everlasting interborough traffic; to the right, on rising ground, were haunts of roaring type mills grinding an endless of grist of news; to the left, through a sudden dip and down a long decline, a world of sober-side warehouses, degenerating into slums, circumscribed by sleepy South street, all, this afternoon, warm and languorous in the lazy breeze of a sunny April Saturday.

The counting room was a cubicle contrived by inclosing a corner of the ground floor with two walls and a ceiling of match boarding. Into this constricted space were huddled imposing roll-top desks, P. Sybarite's high counter and the small flat desk of the shipping clerk, with an iron safe, a typewriter, a copy press, sundry chairs and spittoons, a small gas heater and many tottering columns of dusty letter files.

A door, set craftily in the most inconvenient spot imaginable, afforded both ventilation and access to an aisle which led tortuously between bales of hides to doors opening upon a waist-high stage where trucks backed up to receive and to deliver.

Immured in this retreat, P. Sybarite was very much shut away from all joy of living—alone with his job (which at present nothing pressed), with giant despair and its interlocutor ennui, and with that blatant, brutish implacable smell of smells.

To all of these, abruptly and with ceremony, Mr. George Bross, shipping clerk, introduced himself; a brawny young man in shirtsleeves, wearing a visorless cap of soiled linen, an apron of striped ticking, pencils behind both angular red ears, and a smudge of marking ink, together with a broad, irritating smile upon a clownish countenance.

In one hand he carried an envelope.

Draping himself elegantly over Mr. Wimper's desk, George regarded P. Sybarite with an indulgent and compassionate smile, and wagged a doggish head at him. From these symptoms, inferring that his fellow employe was in the throes of a witticism, P. Sybarite cocked an apprehensive eye and tightened his thin-lipped, sensitive mouth.

The shipping clerk presently controlled his mirth sufficiently to permit of unctuous enunciation of the following cryptic exclamation:

"Oh, you Perceval!"

P. Sybarite turned pale.

"You little rascal!" continued George, brandishing the envelope. You've been cunning, you have; but I've found you out at last—Per-ce-val!"

Over the cheeks of P. Sybarite crept a flush of sensitive pink. His eyes wavered and fell. He looked unhappy.

"You're a sly one, you are," George gloated—"always signin' your name 'P. Sybarite,' and pretendin' your maiden monaker was 'Peter'! But now we know you! Take off them whiskers—Perceval!"

A really wise mind-reader would have called a policeman, then and there; for mayhem was the least of the crimes contemplated by P. Sybarite. But restraining himself, he did nothing more than disentangle his legs, slip down from the tall stool and approach Mr. Bross with an outstretched hand.

"If that letter's for me," he said, quietly, "give it here, please."

"Special d'liv'ry—jus' come," announced George, holding the letter high, out of easy reach, while he read in exultant accents the traitorous address: "'Perceval Sybarite, Esq., Care of Messrs. Whigham & Wimper'! Oh, you Perceval—Esquire!"

"Give me my letter," insisted P. Sybarite without raising his voice.

"Gawd knows I don't want it," protested George. "I got no truck with your swell friends what know your real name and write to you on perfumed paper with monograms and everything."

He held the envelope close to his nose and sniffed in ecstasy until it was torn rudely from his grasp.

"Here!" he cried resentfully. "Where's your manners—Perceval!"

Dumb with impotent rage, P. Sybarite climbed back on his stool, while George sat down at his desk, lighted a cheap cigarette (it was after 3 o'clock, and both the partners were gone for the day), and with a leer, watched the bookkeeper carefully slit the envelope and withdraw its inclosures:

Ignoring him, P. Sybarite ran his eye through the few lines of notably careless feminine handwriting.

> My Dear Percival:
> Mother and I had planned to take some friends to the theater tonight, and bought a box for the Knickerbocker several weeks ago, but now we have decided to go to Mrs. Hadley-Owen's post-Lenten masquerade ball instead, and as none of our friends can use the tickets, I thought possibly you might like them. They say Otis Skinner is wonderful. Of course, you may not care to sit in a stage box without a dress suit, but perhaps you won't mind. If you do, maybe you know somebody else who could go properly dressed. Your aff'te cousin,
> MAE ALYS.

The flush deepened in the cheeks of P. Sybarite, and instantaneous pinpricks of fire enlivened his long-suffering eyes. But again he said nothing. And since his eyes were downcast, George was unaware of their transient incandescence.

Puffing vigorously at his cigarette, he rocked back and forth on the hind legs of his chair, and crowed in jubilation: "Perceval! Oh, you great, big, beautiful Perc'!"

P. Sybarite made a motion as if to tear the note across, hesitated, and reconsidered. Through a long minute he sat thoughtfully examining the tickets presented him by his aff'te cousin.

In his ears rang the hideous tumult of George's joy: "Per-ce-val!"

Drawing to him one of the Whigham & Wimper letterheads, P. Sybarite dipped a pen, considered briefly, and wrote rapidly and freely in minute hand:

> My Dear Mae Alys:
> Every man has his price. You know mine. Pocketing false pride, I accept your bounty with all the gratitude and humility becoming in a poor relation. And if arrested for appearing in the box without evening clothes, I promise solemnly to brazen it out, pretend that I bought the tickets myself—or stole them—and keep the newspapers ignorant of our kinship. Fear not—trust me—and enjoy the masque as much as I mean to enjoy the play.
> And if you would do me the greatest of favors—should you ever again find an excuse to write me on any matter, please address me by the initial of my ridiculous first name only; it is, of course, impossible for me to live down the deep damnation of having been born a Sybarite; but the indulgence of my friends can save me the further degradation of being known as a Percival.
> With thanks renewed and profound, I remain, all things considered, Remotely yours,
> P. SYBARITE.

This he sealed and addressed in a stamped envelope; then thrust his pen into a raw but none the less antique potato; covered the read and black ink wells; closed the ledger; locked the petty-cash box and put it away; painstakingly arranged the blotters, paste pot and all the clerical paraphernalia of his desk, and slued round on his stool to blink pensively at Mr. Bross.

That gentleman having some time since despaired of any response to his persistent baiting, was now preoccupied with a hand mirror and endeavoring to erase the smudge of marking ink from his face with a handkerchief, now and again moistened in an engagingly natural and unaffected manner.

"It's no use, George," observed P. Sybarite presently. "If you're in earnest in the public-spirited endeavors to

"PERHAPS it was true. Perhaps Molly Lessing of the glove counter really was one and the same with Marian Blessington of the fabulous fortune. Old Brian Shaynon would be quite consistent in urging her into unwelcome matrimony with his son. The hypothesis was quite plausible; a thing had happened within P. Sybarite's knowledge of Brian Shaynon."

—how would you put it—to remove the soil from your map, take a tip from an old hand and go to soap and water. I know it's painful, but, believe me, it's the only way." George looked up in some surprise.

"Why, there you are, little Bright Eyes!" he exclaimed with spirit. "I was beginnin' to be afraid this sittin' would pass off without a visit from Uncle Georgie's pet control. Had little Perceval any message from the other side this afternoon?"

"One or two," assented P. Sybarite gravely. "To begin with, I'm going to shut up shop in just five minutes; and if you don't want to show yourself on the street looking like the difference of opinion between a bull calf and a fountain pen"——

"Gotcha," interrupted George, rising and putting away handkerchief and mirror. "I'll drown myself if you say so. Anythin's better'n letting you talk me to death."

"One thing more."

Splashing vigorously at the stationary wash-handstand, George looked gloomily over his shoulder, and in sepulchral accents, uttered the one word:

"Shoot!"

"How would you like to go to the theater tonight?"

George soaped his huge red hands noisily.

"I'd like it so hard," he replied, "that I'm already dated up for an evenin' of intellect'l enjoyment. Me and Sammy Holt's goin' round to Miner's Eight' Avenoo and bust up the show. You can trail if you wanta, but don't blame me if some big, coarse, two-fisted guy hears me call you Perceval and picks on you."

"Wait a minute," insisted P. Sybarite, without moving. "I'm in earnest about this. I offer you a seat in a stage box at the Knickerbocker Theater tonight to see Otis Skinner in 'Kismet.'"

George's eyes opened simultaneously with his mouth.

"Me?" he gasped. "Alone?"

P. Sybarite shook his head. "One of a party of four."

"Who else?" George demanded with pardonable caution.

"Miss Prim, Miss Lessing, myself."

Removing his apron of ticking, the shipping clerk opened a drawer in his desk, took out a pair of cuffs and began to adjust them to the wristbands of his shirt.

"Since when did you begin to snuff coke?" he inquired with mild compassion.

"I'm not joking." P. Sybarite displayed the tickets. "A friend sent me these. I'll make up the party as I said, and let you come along—on one condition."

"Go to it."

"You must promise me to quit calling me Percival, here or any place else, today and forever!"

George chuckled; paused; frowned; regarded P. Sybarite with narrow suspicion.

"And never tell anybody, either," added the other in deadly earnest.

George hesitated.

"Well, it's your name, ain't it?" he grumbled.

"That's not my fault. I'll be damned if I'll be called Percival."

"And what if I keep on?"

"Then I'll make up my theater party without you—and break your neck into the bargain," said P. Sybarite intensely.

"You?" George laughed derisively. "You break my neck? Can the comedy, beau. Why, I could eat you alive, Perceval."

P. Sybarite got down from his stool. His face almost colorless, but for two bright red spots, the size of quarters, beneath either cheek bone. He was half a head shorter than the shipping clerk, and apparently about half as wide; but there was sincerity in his manner and an ominous snap in the unflinching stare of his blue eyes.

"Please yourself," he said quietly. "Only—don't say I didn't warn you!"

"Ah-h!" sneered George, truculent in his amazement. "What's eatin' you?"

"We're going to settle this question before you leave this warehouse. I won't be called Percival by you or any other pink-eared cross between Balaam's ass and a laughing hyena."

Mr. Bross gaped with resentment, which gradually overcame his better judgment.

"You won't, eh?" he said stridently. "I like to know what you're going to do to stop me, Perc"——

P. Sybarite stepped quickly toward him, and George, with a growl threw out his hands in a manner based upon a somewhat hazy conception of the formula of self-defense. To his surprise, the open hand of the smaller man slipped swiftly past what he called his "guard" and placed a smart, stinging slap upon lips open to utter the syllable "'val."

Roaring with indignation, he swung his right fist heavily for the head of P. Sybarite. Somehow, strangely, it missed its goal and——

George Bross sat up on the dusty, grimy floor, batted his eyes, ruefully rubbed the back of his head, and marveled at the reverberations inside it.

Then he became conscious of P. Sybarite some three feet distant, regarding him with tight-lipped interest.

"Good God!" he ejaculated with fervid feeling. "Did you do that to me?"

"I did," returned P. Sybarite curtly. "Want me to prove it?"

"Plenty, thanks," returned the shipping clerk morosely, as he picked himself up and dusted off his clothing. "Gee! You got a wallop like the kick of a mule, Per'—

"Cut that!"

"P. S., I mean," George amended hastily. "Why didn't you ever tell me you was the Big Smoke's sparrin' partner?"

"I'm not and never was, and furthermore, I didn't hit you," replied P. Sybarite. "All I did was to let you fall over my foot and bump your head on the floor. You're a clumsy beast, you know, George, and if you tried it another time you might dent that dome of yours. Better accept my offer and be friends."

"Never call you Per"——

"Don't say it!"

"Oh, all right—all right," George agreed plaintively. "And if I promise, I'm in on that theater party?"

"That's my offer."

"It's hard," George sighed regretfully, "damn' hard. But whatever you say goes. I'll keep your secret."

"Good." P. Sybarite extended one of his small, delicately modeled hands. "Shake," said he, smiling wistfully.

CHAPTER II.

Inspiration.

WHEN they had locked in the genius of the place to batten upon itself until 7 o'clock Monday morning, P. Sybarite and Mr. Bross, with at least every outward semblance of complete amity, threaded the roaring congestion in narrow-chested Frankfort street, boldly breasted the floodtide of homing Brooklynites, won their way through City Hall Park, and were presently swinging shoulder to shoulder up the sunny side of lower Broadway.

"Lis'n"—George interjected of a sudden.

P. Sybarite started. "Eh?" he inquired blankly.

"I wanna know where you picked up all that classy footwork."

"O," returned P. S. carelessly, "I used to spar a bit with the fellows when I was at—ah—when I was younger."

"When you was at what?" insisted Bross.

"When I was at liberty to."

"Huh! You mean when you was at colledge."

"I was," P. S. admitted with reluctance; "but I never graduated. When I was 21 I had to quit to go to work for Whigham & Wimper."

"G'wan," commented the other. "They ain't been in business 20 years."

"I'm only 31."

"More news for Sweeny. You'll never see 40 again."

"That statement," said P. Sybarite with some asperity, "is an uncivil untruth, dictated by a spirit of gratuitous contentiousness"——

"Good Lord!" cried Bross in alarm. "I'm wrong and you're right and I won't do it again and forgive me for living!"

"With pleasure," agreed P. Sybarite pleasantly.

"Your people had money, didn't they, oncet?"

"I've been told so, but if true, it only goes to prove there's nothing in the theory of heredity."

"I gotcha," announced Bross, upon prolonged and painful analysis.

Suddenly it was borne in upon the shipping clerk that in the probable arrangement of the proposed party he would be expected to dance attendance upon Miss Violet Prim, leaving P. Sybarite free to devote himself to Miss Lessing. And he scowled darkly.

"P. S.'s got his nerve with him," he protested privately, "to cop out the one pippin in the house all for his lonely. It's a wonder he wouldn't slip her a chance to enjoy herself with summon her own age."

Then he made an end to envy for the time being and turned his attention to more pressing concerns; but though he pondered with all his might and main, it seemed impossible to excogitate any way to square his account with P. Sybarite. And when, at Thirty-eighth street, the latter made an excuse to part with George, instead of going home in his company, the shipping clerk was too thoroughly disgusted to question the subterfuge. He was, indeed, a bit relieved; the temporary disassociation promised just so much more time for solitary conspiracy.

Turning west, he was presently prompted by that arch-comedian Destiny (disguised as thirst) to drop into Clancey's for a shell of beer.

Now in Clancey's George found a crumpled copy of an evening paper almost afloat on the high-tide of the dregs-drenched bar. Rescuing the sheet, he smoothed it out, examined (grinning) its daily meed of comics, read every word on the "sports page," plowed through the weekly vaudeville charts, scanned the advertisements, and at length reviewed the news columns with a listless eye.

It may have been the stimulation of his drink, but it was probably nothing more nor less than jealousy that sparked his sluggish imagination as he contemplated a two-column reproduction in a coarse halftone of a photograph entitled "Marian Blessington." Slowly the light dawned upon mental darkness; slowly his grin broadened and became fixed—even as his great scheme for the confusion and confounding of P. Sybarite took shape and matured.

CHAPTER III.

Gloves and the Man.

WITH a feeling of some guilt, becoming in one who stoops to unworthy artifice, P. Sybarite walked slowly on up Broadway a little way, then doubled on his trail, going softly until a swift and stealthy survey westward from the corner of Thirty-eighth street assured him that George was not skulking to spy upon him. Thus reassured he mended his pace and held briskly on toward the shopping district.

From afar the clock warned him that his hour was fleeting; in 20 minutes it would be 6 o'clock; at 6 sharp, Blessington's would close its doors. Distressed, he scurried on, crossed Thirty-fourth street, aimed himself courageously for the wide entrance of the department store, battled manfully through the retreating army of feminine shoppers— and gained the glove counter with a scant 15 minutes to spare.

And there he halted, confused and blushing in recognition of circumstances as unpropitious as unforeseen.

These consisted in three girls behind the counter and one customer before it; the latter commanding the attention and services of a fair young woman with a pleasant manner.

She recognized him with a smile, but none the less with a friendly smile.

"Why, Mr. Sybarite"——

In his hearing her voice was rarest music. He gulped; stammered: "Miss Lessing!" and was stricken dumb by realization of his effrontery.

"Can I do anything for you?"

He breathed in panic: "Gloves"——

"For a lady, Mr. Sybarite?"

He nodded as expressively as any automaton.

"What kind?"

"I—I don't know."

"For day or evening wear?"

He wagged a dismal head: "I don't know."

Amusement touched her eyes and lips so charmingly that he thought of the sea at dawn, rimpled by the morning breeze, gay with the laughter of young sunlight.

"Surely you must!" she insisted.

"No," he contended in stubborn melancholy.

"Oh, I see. You wish to make a present"——

"I—ah—suppose so," he admitted.

"Evening gloves are always acceptable. Does she go often to the theater?"

"I—don't know."

The least suspicion of a perplexed frown knitted the eyebrows of Miss Lessing.

"Well—is she old or young?"

"I—ah—couldn't say."

"Mr. Sybarite!" said the young woman with decision.

He fixed an apprehensive gaze to hers—which inclined to disapproval, if with reservations.

"Yes, Miss Lessing?"

"Do you really want to buy gloves?"

"No-o."

"Then what under the sun do you want?"

He noticed suddenly that, however impatient her tone, here eyes were still kindly. Eyes of luminous hazel brown, they were, wide open and clear beneath dark and delicate brows; eyes that assorted oddly with her hair of pale, dull gold, rendering her prettiness both individual and distinctive.

Somehow he found himself more at ease.

"Please," he begged humbly, "show me some gloves—any kind—it doesn't matter—and pretend you believe I want to buy 'em. I don't really. I—I only want—a—ah—word with you before you go home."

If this were impertinence, the girl elected quickly not to resent it. She turned to the shelves behind her, took down a box or two and opened them for his inspection.

"These are very nice," she suggested quietly.

"I think so, too." He grinned uneasily. "What I want to say is—will you be my guest at the theater tonight?"

"I'm afraid I don't understand you," she said, replacing the gloves.

"With Miss Prim and George Bross," he amended hastily. "Somebody—a friend— sent me a box for 'Kismet.' I thought—possibly—you might care to go. It—it would give me great pleasure."

Miss Lessing held up another pair of gloves.

"These are three-fifty-nine," she said absently. "Why did you come here to ask me?"

"I—I was afraid you might make some other engagement for the evening."

He couldn't have served his cause more handsomely than by uttering just that transparent evasion. In a thought she understood; at their boarding house he could have found no ready opportunity to ask her save in the presence of others; and he was desperately apprehensive lest she refuse.

After all, he had reason to be; they were only table acquaintances of a few weeks' standing. It was most presumptuous of him to dream that she would accept.

On the other hand, he was (she considered gravely) a decent, manly little body and had shown her more civility and deference than all the rest of the boarding house and shop people put together. And she rather liked him and was reluctant to hurt his feelings; for she knew instinctively he was very sensitive.

Her eyes and lips softened winningly.

"It's so good of you to think of me," she said.

"You mean that you—you will come?" he cried, transported.

"I shall be very glad."

"That's—that's awf'ly good of you," he said huskily. "Now do, please, find some way to get rid of me."

Smiling quietly, the girl recovered the glove boxes

"I'm afraid we haven't what you want in stock," she said, in a voice not loud but clear enough to carry to the ears of her inquisitive colaborers. "We're expecting a fresh shipment in next week—if you could stop in then."

"Thank you very much," said P. Sybarite, with uncalled-for emotion.

He backed away awkwardly, spoiled the effect altogether by lifting his hat, wheeled and broke for the doors, and won his way through them a single instant before they closed.

From the squalor, the heat, dirt and turmoil of Eighth avenue, P. Sybarite turned west on Thirty-eighth street to seek his boarding house.

This establishment—between which and the cave of the smell, his existence alternated with the monotony of a pendulum—was situated midway on the block on the north side of the street.

The sun of April, declining, threw down the street a slant of kindly light to mitigate its homeliness. In this ethereal evanescence the house romance took the air upon the stoop.

CHAPTER IV.

A Likely Story.

GEORGE BROSS was 85 per cent of the house romance. The remainder was Miss Violet Prim. Mr. Bross sat a step or two below Miss Prim, his knees adjacent to his chin, his face, upturned to his charmer, wreathed in a fond and fatuous smile. From her higher plane she smiled in likewise down upon him. She seemed in the eyes of her lover unusually fair—and was. Saturday was her day for seeming unusually fair; by the following Thursday there would begin to be a barely perceptible shadow round the roots of her golden hair.

She was a spirited and abundant creature, hopelessly healthy, notwithstanding the coating of paint, powder and peroxide with which she armored herself against the battle of life. Normally good looking in ordinary daylight, she was a radiant beauty across the footlights. Her eyes were bright, even at such times as belladonna lacked in them; her nose pretty and pert; her mouth,

LOOKING BACKWARD! IF the GREEK SCULPTORS HAD KNOWN the TANGO

SOME day in the dim, dim vista of the future, when all that makes America today shall have crumbled to dust, perhaps some antiquarian, unborn yet for an eon, will ask: "What was the tango?"

Then he will thumb his tomes and cull from out the text sundry cryptic references to the odd folk dances of the ancient Americas. But from these can he piece together the steps of the tango as its devotees dance it today? Impossible!

Oh, for a Phidias or a Praxiteles, the mighty sculptors of old! Their marbles, living today, record for us the activities of ancient Greece—how athletes strove and Bacchantes danced.

Is there none to do a like service for the graceful movements of today? True, none has tooled its motions in stone, but how about living models whose unyielding grace rivals the beauty and action of an antique statue?

Herr Paul Seldom and Fraulein Erna Claron of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts, Berlin, have posed as statues for the tango under the deft direction of Miss Janet McIlwaine of the Jardin de Danse of New York. It was a labor of love, for Herr Seldom and Fraulein Claron are devoted to art and sculpture and are touring the United States doing "poses plastiques," while Miss McIlwaine is happiest when dancing.

In classic draperies, then, the two living models mounted a marble pedestal and posed for the various steps in the up-to-date tango.

And here is the result—a frieze which Phidias himself might have fashioned to adorn a stately temple, as once the Elgin marbles glorified the Parthenon.

TUA MATA OF TUVANA

Have you followed the history of the "Harvest Moon," that wonderful pearl of evil? Many marvelous tales of it have been collected

BY JUSTUS MILES FORMAN

(Copyright, 1914, by the Post-Dispatch.)

IT was at Haapai, in the southern Tonga group, that we learned of the death of poor Mr. Arthur, Sir Herbert's and Her Ladyship's brother, that might have been Sir Herbert's twin to look at, but wasn't, being some years younger, and of how his body was brought back to Tuvana, the island he ruled over, by the brown men, and buried there, and the Harvest Moon brought back there, too, which had been the cause of his death, and which the Princess Mata wore now, round her neck, for love and remembrance of him she had hoped to marry.

So we landed at Tuvana, that had been poor Mr. Arthur's home and, as you might say, kingdom.

The people on the beach, when they saw Sir Herbert's face, that was so extraordinarily like Mr. Arthur's, though older, and, if I may say, a bit harder, began to shriek and carry on, and some of them was all for running away, thinking they saw a ghost, but the brown boy that had come with us made a kind of oration, explaining who we were, so it appeared, and then they stopped their noise, but gathered round us, wanting to hold our hands, and grinned and made signs to show how glad they were. Some of them could speak a little English—just single words, like so many of the natives hereabouts, who learn it from the copra traders and sailormen—and these said all the words they knew over and over again, and everybody got down on their knees to Sir Herbert, who didn't like it, and looked very red and uncomfortable.

The brown boy that sailed with us from Haapai had slipped away while we were standing about on the beach being made much of, but in a few minutes he came back and made us understand—for he could speak more than a bit of English, too, when he wasn't excited—that the Tua Mata, the queen or princess or chieftainess, or whatever you may like to say tua means, was waiting to see us. So we went up from the beach and under the palm trees in a kind of procession, the brown people following after.

We went along a sort of lane, where the sunlight didn't reach the ground, and past little clean thatched native huts with walls made out of plaited fiber, and, at the top of a slope, came to a house like the others, but bigger, and two of its walls were rolled up like the flaps of a tent. I noticed that the native people had stopped a few yards away under the trees, and I wondered why, but after a moment I stopped wondering altogether, and just stared, and I dare say my eyeballs a-popping out like a frog's or a bulldog's.

The Tua Mata was standing in the open wall of that plaited house, alone, except that, some distance back in the shadows, there may have been half a dozen other women. And she was like the marble ladies in the picture galleries, if only they was painted a golden brown and had a square of red silk twisted round their hips, so that it fell to the knees or thereabouts. She was far too beautiful, the Tua Mata was, for me to try to describe her. I didn't know brown women could be like that—no, nor white ones neither, though in my time I have seen a great many ladies as had their pictures in the weekly papers and wore pearls—or even strawberry leaves—and swept about a house like peacocks with the gift of speech.

She was no more than a girl—not yet 20, I'll swear—but she stood up before Sir Herbert and Her Ladyship like a duchess in a court train and a coronet, instead of a brown girl in a yard of thin red silk and a trumpery brass locket hung from her neck.

I heard Her Ladyship give a little cry under her breath, and Sir Herbert he says aloud: "By Jove!"

Then the Tua Mata, who had been gazing very proud and still out over our heads, looked down at Sir Herbert's face.

She must have seen poor Mr. Arthur, that called himself Hayes, a-standing there before her as if he had stepped out of his grave, for she began to shiver all over, and she turned her head away, very slow, and put both her hands up over her face. It was a terrible thing to see, and much worse than as if she had screamed or wept or carried on as other women might do. I don't mind confessing that it turned me sick for a bit.

Her Ladyship cried out, and went a step nearer to where that brown girl stood. She put her arms about the girl's bare shoulders, and she says:

"Oh, my dear! We're his brother and his sister. Won't you welcome us for his sake?" Nobody could ever resist Her Ladyship when she spoke like that—not even the Tua Mata, who turned her face for an instant to be kissed, and then hid it on Her Ladyship's bosom.

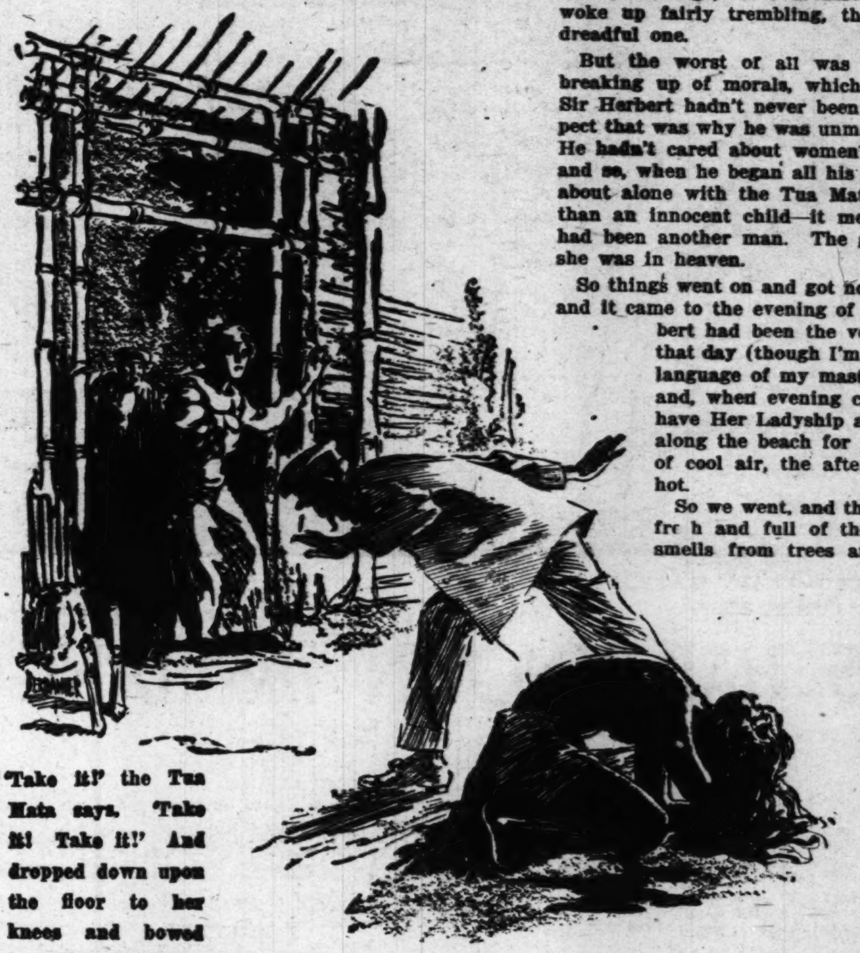
But presently she stood up straight again, and you would never have known that anything had happened. She said in very good English, but queer-sounding, that no doubt Mr. Arthur had taught her: "I bid you welcome," and stretched out her hand to Sir Herbert, but she didn't look at him again just then.

I saw Sir Herbert hesitate as to what he should do. Then he bent over and kissed the Tua Mata's hand—and I was glad.

I find it isn't nothing like so easy to write about things as I thought it would be. If I should try to set down here all that happened in the ten days Sir Herbert and Her Ladyship and I spent on Tuvana it would take me a month, or even more. So I must pick out, if I can, the most important things and let the others go, though it seems a pity, for now I shan't be able to tell about the feasts, and the kava-drinkings, and the native dances (which was very stirring, indeed, and gave you little thrills like soldiers marching past to music), and the picnics, and the fish spearing in the lagoon of a starlight night.

The first very important thing that happened seems to me to be the visit we made—Sir Herbert and Her Ladyship and the Tua Mata and me and a dozen of the natives—to Mr. Arthur's grave up on the mountainside above the village. And it seems to me important, not on account of poor Mr. Arthur—or Hayes, if you like—but for another reason altogether.

The natives, all but the Tua Mata, hung back among the trees as the rest of us stood about Mr. Arthur's grave, and Her Ladyship went down on her knees, and I think, said a little prayer. But Sir Herbert and the Tua Mata stood across from each other, with the grave between them, and the Tua Mata's eyes went from Sir Herbert's face down to the big stones that covered what was left of the man she'd loved, and back again, and then once more down and back, and, after that, they stayed upon Sir Herbert's face, who didn't notice, I fancy. But I did.



"'Take it!' the Tua Mata says. 'Take it! Take it!' And dropped down upon the floor to her knees and bowed herself over them with her face hidden. We ran into the room together, Her Ladyship and I. The Harvest Moon, in its cheap brass locket, lay at Sir Herbert's feet on the floor, and he stood partly stooped over it."

I think the next important thing that happened was the first look we had at the Harvest Moon, which was one evening, when Sir Herbert and Her Ladyship and the Tua Mata were sitting on the mats in the big house, and I was just outside—for Sir Herbert liked to have me near at hand.

I was so near that I overheard every word as was said, and I heard my master come out plump with a direct question about the pearl. The Tua Mata didn't answer him at first, but after a moment she said: "It is 'ere," and put up her hand to the cheap brass locket she wore hanging by a cord from her neck.

"'E al-ways say," says the Tua Mata in her queer-sounding speech that made me think of Her Ladyship's French maid we'd left behind in Auckland. "'Ayes al-ways say 'e weesh me to 'ave the 'Arves' Moon, an' so w'en 'e is dead the boys, Tano an' Sitivi, breeng it to me, an' I wear it, like 'e wear it, in the gol'locket. You like to see?"

She took the locket off and held it in her hands before her. It must have taken her some little time to open the thing, or else what was inside was well wrapped up, for none of them spoke at once. Then, after what may have been a minute or more, I saw their heads go forward, and I heard Her Ladyship give a cry, and I heard Sir Herbert draw a very long, deep breath, so that it hissed and whistled between his teeth.

"The 'Arves' Moon!" says the Tua Mata in a whisper, and her voice broke the spell I was under, and I tip-toed away before anybody saw me. It didn't break the spell for the others, though—and especially for Sir Herbert, who sat bending forward, with his eyes fastened on the Harvest Moon, and scarcely seemed to breathe at all. I'd never seen him like that before. But when the Tua Mata stirred at last and began to wrap the pearl up once more in a half dozen little squares of cloth, Sir Herbert drew another long breath and rubbed one hand across his face. I thought he looked dazed, as if he'd been asleep. He didn't say anything, but Her Ladyship exclaimed about how magnificent the Harvest Moon was, and how she didn't wonder so many people had lost their heads, and their lives as well, over it.

And no more do I! No more do I!

Now you may believe it or not, but from that evening on to the end, I bear witness that my master was another man altogether. Whether he was bewitched by the Harvest Moon I haven't no means of making sure; but I know what I think. You must think what you choose.

For one thing, he began to drink more than was good for him—as he'd done once before, some years back, but had cured himself of—and the drink made him irritable and hard to please. I had to mind my p's and q's in those days, you may be sure. Now I wasn't the only one to suffer, neither, for Her Ladyship had many a word out of him that he wouldn't have spoke if he'd been quite himself.

Likewise, he talked in his sleep, as never before, and it was about the Harvest Moon, though that wasn't noways strange, for I dreamed of it once myself, and woke up fairly trembling, the dream having been a dreadful one.

But the worst of all was what you might call a breaking up of morals, which I began to see in him. Sir Herbert hadn't never been a ladies' man, and I expect that was why he was unmarried at three and forty. He hadn't cared about women of any kind nor degree, and so, when he began all his hours walking or sitting about alone with the Tua Mata—and her nothing else than an innocent child—it meant more than as if he had been another man. The girl, I dare say, thought she was in heaven.

So things went on and got no better, but much worse, and it came to the evening of the ninth day. Sir Herbert had been the very devil to get on with that day (though I'm sure I regret using such language of my master—and him a baronet), and, when evening came, I was very glad to have Her Ladyship ask me to walk with her along the beach for an hour to get a breath of cool air, the afternoon having been very hot.

So we went, and the night air was cool and fresh and full of the most wonderful sweet smells from trees and flowers out of sight in the dark, and the sky was the deepest purple blue that could be, with stars so warm and bright they looked like pearls—but not like the Harvest Moon, which I'd dreamed of again the night before—and the sea made soft little whispers out against the reef, and now and then a fish jumped in the lagoon, and, I remember some of the native men and women were singing together far away at the other side of the village.

It seemed a pity not to stay out in that beautiful night till the dawn came, but at the end of an hour or thereabouts Her Ladyship said we must go back to the house.

They'd forgotten us, the two there in the lamplight, or else they hadn't expected us so soon. Sir Herbert was a-sitting on one of the boxes the Tua Mata had brought in for her guests, who couldn't sit comfortable on the woven mat, and the girl was kneeling at his knees, and they were talking about when they should be married.

Her Ladyship began to tremble as we stood outside, and I was for slipping away, but she caught my arm and held me.

Lovers' talk they were talking, though I hadn't thought my master capable of such. And about marriage, which was worse still! I couldn't believe my ears.

Sir Herbert said how he must first go back to England to settle his affairs, and that made the Tua Mata weep, and she begged him to take her with him, saying as she'd die if left behind. Then he had to comfort her about that, and there was more lovers' talk.

But when they had been still for a moment, and the girl's face was hidden on his knees, my master says in a very low voice:

"Let me see the Harvest Moon, Mata." She reared up her head at that, looking frightened, and clasped both hands together over the brass locket hung on her breast.

"Why? Why?"

"Why not?" says Sir Herbert in that same low voice, and, after a bit, she unclasped her hands and opened the locket.

They looked at that great pearl together in the yellow lamplight, and Her Ladyship and I looked, too, from the darkness outside, but Sir Herbert's face was purplish red, with the veins standing out on his forehead, and his hands, hanging beside him, shook a little.

"Let me keep it, Mata!" says he at last in a very queer, hoarse voice. "Let me keep it. I'll sell it—sell it in England, and you shall be rich—do you hear? Rich!" But the girl gave a sharp cry, and stumbled up to her feet, backing away from him across the floor. She stuffed the pearl back into the locket with the little square cloth, and backed away still farther, crying out:

"No! No! No! It was 'is—'Ayes'. No! Nevvaire!"

My master had got to his feet and followed a step after her, shaking all over.

"Give it to me!" says he in that queer voice. "It was Arthur's. I've a right to it. Don't be a fool! Give

"WE buried her at sunset of the next day, high up on the mountain alongside Mr. Arthur's grave, that had called himself Hayes. It was a sad day for Tuvana; but it was a grand occasion for the Harvest Moon, which, I think, must have laughed itself almost to death and clapped its hands for joy." . . . .

t to me!" And then he stopped short, for the girl was facing him with her eyes wide open and her hands spread out, and on her face the most dreadful look of horror and understanding that I have ever yet seen, and, God willing, ever shall see. She had to fight for breath to speak.

"So it was—that!" says she when her voice came.

"It was—the 'Arves' Moon, not me—no! No, not me, you wanted the 'Arvest Moon!"

She gave the most terrible loud, strangling cry, and, hard upon it, tore the brass locket from her neck, the rotten cord snapping in two, and threw it straight into Sir Herbert's face.

"Take it!" the Tua Mata says. "Take it! Take it!" And dropped down upon the floor to her knees and bowed herself over them with her face hidden.

We ran into the room together, Her Ladyship and I, and Sir Herbert turned half about to meet us. Her face was as white as paper, and his eyes were staring. He looked like a man in some kind of a trance. The Harvest Moon, in its cheap brass locket, lay at his feet on the floor, and he stood partly stooped over it, with his hands out before him. So the three of us faced one another without a word for, I should think, half a minute. Then Her Ladyship screamed, very sharp and sudden, and pointed to where the brown girl lay in a heap, bowed over upon her knees. I looked, and a pool of blood was spreading out from where she lay—quite back in the lamplight. She'd stabbed herself with the knife she wore stuck in the twist of her pareo.

I ran to where she was, though my legs were weak under me, and began to lift her, but Sir Herbert brushed me aside as though I had been a chair, and caught the girl up in his arms. The horror of the thing had sobered him—shocked him out of that trance or whatever it had been. He held her against his breast, calling upon her:

"Mata! Mata! For God's sake! Mata! Mata!" And there was real agony, and, I like to believe, real love in his voice. He held her close, and her blood streamed over them both—a dreadful sight.

The girl was almost gone, for she'd stuck deep and true and near the heart with her strong little hands, but there was life in her still—a little. She opened her eyes and saw his face. Her mind must have been a little clouded, for she seems to have thought he was her old lover that held her against his breast. She said in a very weak whisper:

"'Ayes!—'Ayes!—Kiss!" And she smiled. I saw her smile.

Sir Herbert kissed her, and her head fell, and she died. Then he laid her down upon the floor again, and bowed himself over her, and fell to sobbing like a little child.

We buried her at sunset of the next day, high up on the mountain alongside Mr. Arthur's grave, that had called himself Hayes. It was a sad day for Tuvana, and a sad day for the three of us as had come there, meaning no harm.

But it was a grand occasion for the Harvest Moon, which, I think, must have laughed itself almost to death and clapped its hands for joy.

I had had a dreadful night with Sir Herbert, who was quite unstrung and broke down and hysterical over the Tua Mata's death, and wept and called himself a murderer, and said he should never forgive himself, nor God wouldn't neither, and carried on in a shocking way, and couldn't sleep until very late, indeed, when he dropped off into a sort of doze.

It came to be time to carry Tua Mata up the mountain to her grave, which the young men were to do, and Her Ladyship spoke to Sir Herbert, whom she hadn't said a word to since morning. She spoke very grave and serious and short, without any cringing—the first time I ever knew her to stand up to him without fear, as you might say. She says:

"When Mata is buried the Harvest Moon is to be buried with her. I hope you understand that." And Sir Herbert answered:

"Yes, that's right. That's right." And she went away.

One last look I had at the poor child before they wrapped her up in the precious woven mats to carry her to the grave. There were flowers about her and in her hair, and her little hands were crossed, and her beautiful face was quite calm—not smiling nor frowning, just calm and as peaceful as peace itself.

And lying on her breast was the cheap brass locket tied by its bit of dirty string.

I must say it made my heart beat fast to see it there, and to think that at last, after so much wickedness and despair and treachery and bloodshed, the Harvest Moon was to be lost to the world—buried away forever where it couldn't bewitch and ruin and kill people any more. It was the only thing to do; I knew that right enough. It was like burying a horrid disease, where it couldn't never harm the world again; but, for all that, it made my heart beat fast. It was like seeing a great fortune thrown deliberately into the sea or burnt.

I don't quite know whether I was sorry or not, but I was very much excited. I confess that.

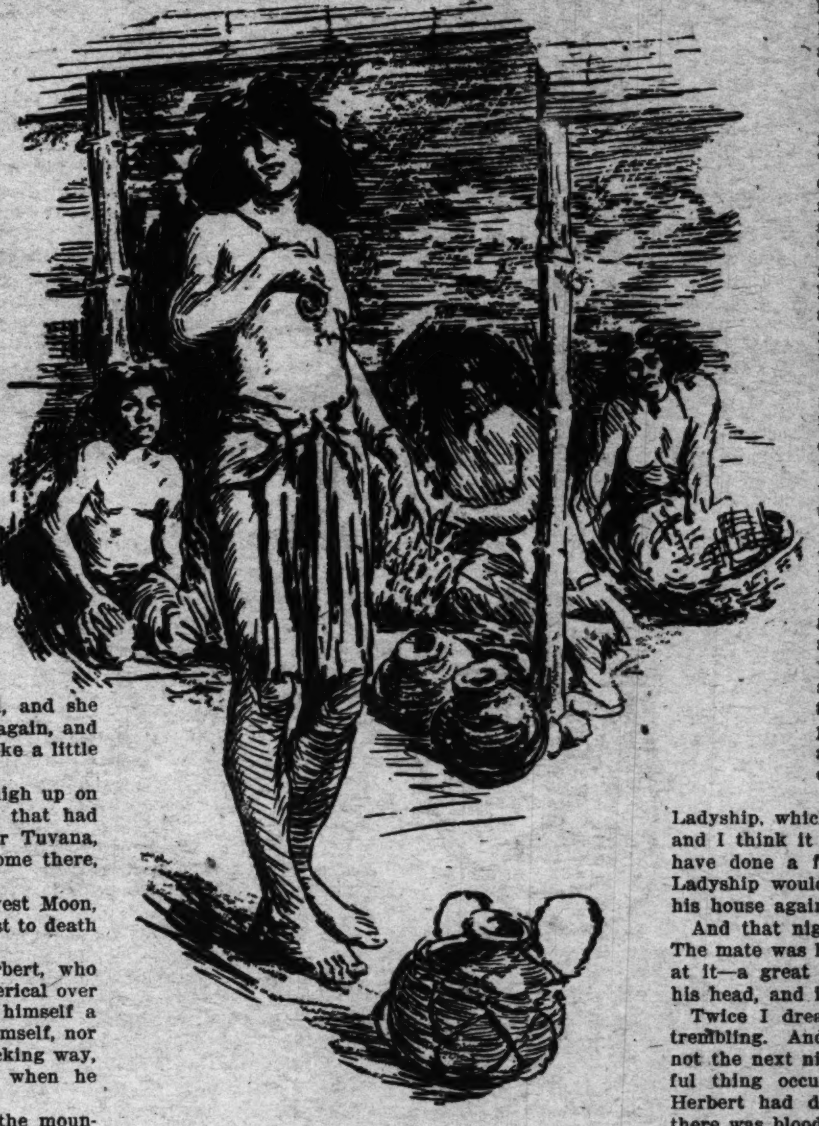
So we buried her beside her lover, looking out over the quiet sea, and the young men who had been up there on the mountainside all day, making ready, piled the big stones over her in a flat, low heap like over Hayes' grave, and the women scattered flowers and wept and sang.

The sun went down behind the western sea, and we came away.

That same evening Sir Herbert and Her Ladyship and me went on board the schooner. I won't say as we thought it was downright unsafe to stay at Tuvana, for the natives was civil to us up to the last minute—not having any clear idea of how we were responsible for Mata's death—but there was sure to be a good deal of palm-wine drinking that night, and so on, and we felt as it was just as well to get away—Sir Herbert in particular. So we went on board, and there was just a breath of air blowing to carry us outside the reef into the three-knot current that flows past, then the breeze dropped altogether, and we drifted on the current. In an hour the few low lights along the island beach was out of sight, and we was done with Tuvana—almost.

Sir Herbert had been drinking through the day, and wasn't himself. That must have been why he invited the skipper and the mate to sit down with him in the bit of a saloon and crack a bottle (we were out of the lagoon then, and drifting, so there was no work for them on deck). Her Ladyship was for going off to her cabin at that, but Sir Herbert took offense, and to humor him she stayed, while the skipper and mate, very red and uncomfortable, pretended to drink what Sir Herbert poured out for them.

I wasn't there. I was on deck, but I could see and hear all that went on through the saloon skylight that was open to let in the air. Besides me, there was only the kanaka at the wheel, the others of the crew being below having their supper.



"The Tua Mata was standing in the open wall of that plaited house, alone. She was like the marble ladies in the picture galleries, if only they was painted a golden brown and had a square of red silk twisted round their hips, so that it fell to the knees or thereabouts. She was far too beautiful, the Tua Mata was, for me to try to describe her."

I remember that there was two huge sharks a-circling round the schooner—I could see them in the starlight—and as I was watching these I didn't pay attention to all that went on in the saloon below, but presently the skipper, for some reason, began talking about the Harvest Moon, and about what a wicked thing it was; but, all the same, it seemed dreadful to a poor man like him to bury anything so valuable away from the world. Thousands and thousands of pounds it must be worth, he says, and he says he was sure he couldn't have done it—meaning put away the pearl under the ground.

At that Sir Herbert began to laugh, a queer, nasty, tittering sort of low laugh, and kept on laughing like he couldn't stop. But finally he says:

"Neither could I, friend Schwartz. Neither could I." And he reached down into his jacket pocket and pulled out the Harvest Moon and laid it on the table before him.

My heart came up into my mouth, and I near tumbled into the open skylight, where I was crouching to see. I damned him somethin' awful, under my breath.

And, though she found other words, such as a lady might use, it was just about those same things that Her Ladyship said to her brother after she had given one loud, dreadful scream at sight of the Harvest Moon, and got to her feet, trembling all over, and stood facing him with her back against the saloon bulkhead. And she said he was never more any brother of hers, and she wished she might die without seeing his face again. Then she went away to shut herself into her own cabin. But Sir Herbert sat where he was, breathing a bit hard, and very purple as to his face. And presently the other two, the skipper and the mate, as had got up when Her Ladyship began to carry on, sat down again, and all three of them stared at that wonderful wicked pearl as if they couldn't leave off. From where I was on the deck overhead, I could see the mate's face plainest, and it was twitching, and his eyes standing out. It frightened me, the mate's face did. It was terrible. Once he put out his big red hand toward the pearl, as if to turn it over, but Sir Herbert says very sharp:

"Don't touch it!" And he drew his hand back. He says in a kind of whisper:

"Thousands and thousands of pounds." And after a time he says it again, and his face was dreadful.

The old skipper went away presently, shaking his head, but the other two, Sir Herbert and the mate, they stayed on, quite still, with the pearl between them.

He came up on deck presently, with the mate close after, and began to walk up and down, none too steady on his feet; but I couldn't bear to be near him and went below. I remembered afterward that I'd left just the three there on the schooner's deck—Sir Herbert, the mate and the kanaka boy at the wheel.

I think I must have dozed off in my cabin, so I don't know how long afterward it was that I heard feet running about overhead, and the mate's voice bellowing:

"Man overboard! Man overboard!"

I hadn't undressed, and I ran up at once. The skipper and the mate was there, talking very excited, and the crew was beginning to tumble out of the fo'castle companion.

Sir Herbert was gone! Gone! Quite gone! Him that I had served for seven years. Him as I had seen, half an hour back, sitting alive and staring at the Harvest Moon. Gone out of the world forever!

Like a smashed fly.

"'E must 'ave missed 'is footing," the mate was saying. "'E must 'ave missed 'is footing, being unsteady like with the drink, and pitched straight over the side. I'd sent the boy below to get 'is supper, and I was at the wheel meself. The first thing I knew I hears a splash, and then a little shout, like off the loo'ard, and then a great whopping splash where the shout came from, and nothing more. That'll 'ave been one 'o them sharks, sir, 'as got 'im."

So, very swift and awful and unlooked for, Sir Herbert came to his end. Perhaps he deserved it. Yes, I dare say he did, but it was an unusual, terrible end to come to, and I was sorry for the words I'd said about him, even though they was to myself with no one to hear.

I don't think the skipper believed a word of the mate's story, except, perhaps, about the sharks at the end, and I know I didn't, for, even in the dim glow from the binnacle lamp I'd caught sight of red on the mate's right hand, which he tried to hold behind him, and, as soon as might be, scrubbed off, but there was no witness and no way of proving anything, and the skipper was an old man, that stood in terror of his own mate. So nothing was done.

The worst of all was telling Her Ladyship, which I had to do. She took it like a man, and I think it didn't come so hard on her as it would have done a fortnight before. If he had lived, Her Ladyship would never have forgiven him nor lived in his house again, I'll swear.

And that night I dreamed about the Harvest Moon. The mate was holding it between his hands and staring at it—a great fiery, glowing, shining thing, as big as his head, and it threw up a red light against his face.

Twice I dreamt that dream, and woke up after it trembling. And the next night I dreamt it again. But not the next night, for during the third night a dreadful thing occurred. The mate disappeared like Sir Herbert had done. Vanished! And in the morning there was blood on the deck nearby the taffrail. So he hadn't gone willing nor of his own accord.

The skipper examined all the crew, one by one, singly, in his cabin, but couldn't find out anything. And he searched them, too, and the fo'castle, and even the hold, but he didn't find the thing which he knew somebody must have killed the mate for.

Then, on the next day, we reached Suva, in the Fijis, which, at Sir Herbert's death, Her Ladyship had told the skipper to make for, and there we left the schooner and paid it off.

By great good luck there was a steamer from the north—a liner—calling at Suva on its way to Australia on the next day after we landed, and Her Ladyship went on board very glad and thankful. Of course, she expected me to sail with her, but I didn't. I said my nerve was gone, and that I wanted to lie up in the sun and rest and take a holiday, and, besides, she didn't truly need me. Her Ladyship was sorry, but didn't urge me long. She wanted to give me a present of money, but I wouldn't take that, saying as I had quite enough laid by from my wages to get me to England after a bit. Which was true.

Then, when Her Ladyship's vessel was out of the harbor and far away, I came up here to my room in Mother McDonald's Hotel, and I locked the door and let down the window shutters, and I took the Harvest Moon out of the little bag the mate had kept it in and laid it on the table before me. The red fires within it burned up and died out, and burned crimson again, and it seemed to me as if the Harvest Moon began to swell and grow bigger until it was as big as my hand, as big as my head, as big as that little room, as big as the world—a great, gigantic, shining, breathing thing that filled up all the space there is and left me shivering on my knees before it.

It is always like that. It has got into my head and my blood and all of me. It has bewitched me like it did the others. I see it in the air before me by day, and by night I dream of it. There's just me and the Harvest Moon in all the world now.

For all that, when I get back to London I mean to sell the pearl. I know a man as knows a place where it can be done. Then I shall be as rich as a lord, and never work any more, and so will be my children and grandchildren as will read this tale of how I come by my fortune.

That is, if I ever get back to England at all. Twice today it seemed to me like I was being followed as I walked down the beach road, and yesterday a seafaring man as I was drinking with in one of the bars near the harbor asked some very odd questions.

I wonder if they know anything!

THE END.

DON'TS For the Would-Be Economical

Eat more cereals and less of expensive dainties.

Little and Big Items of Expense Which Can Be Avoided if One Really Wishes to Cut Down the Cost of Living.—Rules Prepared by an Expert in Social Economics

By Winnifred Harper Cooley

National President Associated Clubs of Domestic Science

Don't call a taxicab khen walking's good.

DON'T kick about the High Cost of Living till you've reduced the cost of your High Living.

Don't measure every expenditure by your neighbor's income.

Don't get more than a few dollars out of the bank at a time. Then you cannot spend more.

Don't go shopping if you cannot afford to buy. It's amazing how many things you do not need.

Don't send your children to a poor private school because "everybody's doing it," when there is a better public school around the corner.

Don't patronize a barber if you want to save $75 a year by shaving yourself.

Don't smoke or drink and you'll save so much money you won't know what to do with it.

Don't smoke or drink.

Learn to shave yourself.

Don't fail to have scales and weigh your purchases, to check up the butcher and grocer.

Don't take ice in winter. The pantry window keeps food cold enough. Use jars or improvise a cold storage box.

Don't go to millionaires' hotels for luncheons daily, fondly fancying you are impressing other men and getting business.

Don't shake for drinks and dinners. You may have to pay for a dozen men's meals.

Don't try to impress your friends by extravagance. They're all on to you.

Don't live beyond your income—no matter how small it is.

Don't live up to your income. Save at least 10 per cent of it every month, and, if possible, 40 per cent.

Don't let money lie idle. It is the fractions that count. Put every bit of surplus in a savings bank quickly, and every time $100 accumulates, invest it.

Don't keep up several establishments. If you go away for the summer, sublet your house. Plenty of people in the world just as good as you are do it.

Don't pay for show, but for value received.

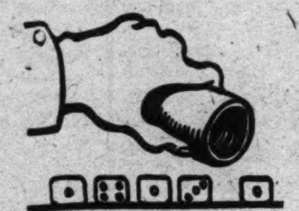
Don't buy fancy bottled foods at $1.50 per bottle, when stewed prunes and baked apples make you healthy and beautiful.

Don't market by telephone.

Don't buy summer fruits in January.

Don't eat porterhouse steak three times a week when a few cents will buy enough breast of veal or leg of lamb to stew for the family.

Don't use "pay" telephones for anything trivial.



Don't shake for drinks or dinners.

Don't take a street car for every short distance. You need the exercise, anyway.

Don't call a taxicab to impress someone, when walking is good.

Don't run charge accounts.

Don't draw money out of the bank until you are reduced to your last dollar. You will save hundreds a year by not having money in your pocket.

Don't go in debt any time for anything.

Don't lend, unless you are willing and able to lose the money.

Don't think pate de foi gras and marrons glaces and champagne necessary to a good dinner.

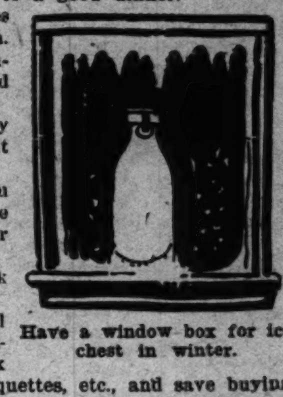
Don't think you must pay $5 or $7 a pair for all shoes and slippers, if you can find good ones for half as much.

Don't be taken in by fake bargains; but buy the minimum-priced article always, if it suits your needs and is all you should afford.

Don't follow freakish fashions, for they change quickly and you are forced to discard a perfectly good garment for fear of ridicule.

Don't hire people to do your tasks just because you are lazy. The only true economy is to hire them because your time is worth more, and you can increase your earning capacity.

Don't buy things you don't need, just because they look well on the counter and the clerk hypnotizes you.



Have a window box for ice chest in winter.

Don't fail to have scales and use them.

Don't fail to utilize all your assets. Bits of "left-over" food in the icebox combine with salads, croquettes, etc., and save buying a whole meal. Or bits of time saved enable one to earn money on odd jobs—tasks outside one's profession.

Save time and money by using a fireless cooker. Hours of gas are wasted by most cooks.

Buy in bulk where practicable and sanitary.

Purchase in large quantities when you can "keep" food. But there is no economy if one-third of the potatoes or green vegetables or apples spoil before you can use them.

When not situated so that buying for the future is possible, select just the quantity for one meal. A little food left over daily fills the garbage can and empties the purse.

Don't use the pay telephone unless it is absolutely necessary. People have no idea how much money they waste in telephoning. Don't use the phone at all if there is no hurry. Just drop a postal card.

Don't eat dessert and pastry.

Don't think you must buy the most expensive seats at the theater. There are plenty of excellent ones for the lesser prices.

Don't allow yourself shopping orgies.

Don't patronize the bootblack so much. A good oil dressing at 15 cents a bottle will polish the family's shoes for weeks.

Don't forget to turn off the light when you leave a room.

Polish your own shoes.

Eat cereals—the cheapest and most nutritious food

If limited in your income, severely limit your out-go.

Don't buy expensive clothes, declaring it's because they "wear" for years, and then discard them every season.

Why take more than one daily paper?

Don't coddle yourself. Most of the world's really great have lived very simply.

Don't argue violently against every suggestion here given, condemning them all unheard. Try a few and soon you'll feel like a John D. Rockefeller.

St. Louis Aviator Quits After Fifteen Narrow Escapes

In 1907 Robinson began building, after the Bleriot model, the first monoplane ever constructed in America. He exhibited it during Centennial week in Forest Park, but because of weak motors was unable to accomplish more than short jumps. In the winter of 1910 he joined Curtiss at San Diego, and there they designed and built the first hydroaeroplane in the world. During the next summer Robinson made his public debut at Los Angeles and San Francisco, winning one-third of all the prizes offered.

His first aeroplane accident occurred during his third appearance in public, at Rapid City, S. D. As he was landing an auto delivery truck drove into his path. One wing of the biplane was sheared away and the machine whirled upside down. Robinson was only scratched.

The hairbreadth escapes at Juan les Pins and Paducah followed, and then came an odd mishap at Washington, D. C. While cruising over the Potomac in a land machine, Robinson's engines began skipping and he found he could not get back to his starting point. So he picked out what looked from his height to be a good landing spot on the shore and swooped to earth.

To his alarm, the biplane instantly sank into the ground until it was completely buried, and himself with it. Fearing he had dropped into a bed of quicksand, he sprang from his seat and tried to run. His eyes were blinded with mud and he struck his head against the radiator, making a scar which he wears today. He had landed in a pool of soft mud.

At Rochester, N. Y., Robinson agreed with Lincoln Beachey that the latter should dive under his machine. He heard Beachey's motor behind him and erroneously decided from the sound that Beachey was above him. He began dropping to get out of the way.

A moment later Beachey swerved under Robinson's falling craft, his upper wing missing Robinson's landing wheels by only three or four feet. The wash of air from Beachey's machine sent Robinson dropping like a shot for 200 feet. He regained mastery of the biplane when it was only 25 feet above a clump of trees.

Next came a misadvanture at Cairo, Ill., when Robinson shaved the top of a railroad bridge. To reach the river he had to arise from a vacant lot, negotiate a narrow passage between the bridge and a smokestack, and then, wheeling sharply at right angles, soar high enough to clear the bridge. It was a difficult feat.

Robinson accomplished it several times. But on his final flight, as he made his turn, a gust struck one of the wings and tipped it up. While he was righting the biplane it dropped so fast that he went over the bridge with only three or four feet to spare.

The St. Louisan's well-known flight down the Mississippi River 375 miles from Minneapolis to Rock Island, on which he was the first to deliver United States mail by hydroaeroplane, was replete with mishaps. On the first day his motor stopped and he dropped 1000 feet towards the city's roofs.

On the same afternoon, having passed Red Wing, Minn., unawares, he landed on the river. As he arose and attempted to turn about between two high bluffs to retrace his way, a puff of wind tilted the left wing upwards and the craft began sliding sideways to the water. Robinson sprang from his seat and threw his weight on the left wing, while jerking at the aileron control with his right hand. The machine came to a level just as its right wing hit the water and was crushed by the impact.

On the next day the gasoline gave out and the flying boat went drifting down the current, Robinson standing on a float and wielding a paddle in an effort to steer it. The paddle handle broke and he went head over heels into the water. Encumbered with heavy clothes, he had a desperate swim to overtake the hydro, which the next moment plunged over a rock dam and tore a big rent in its hull. Robinson, with his broken paddle, contrived to steer it ashore before it sank, and with the aid of two hoboes, pulled it out on the bank.

At Duluth, Minn., Robinson was flying over the water in a hydroaeroplane with a system of controls new to him. His companion was a mechanic, Wells Ingalls, who could not swim. As they alighted on the water with a speed of nearly a mile a minute, the aviator instinctively pulled back the rudder lever, as he was accustomed to do with other machines. However, instead of lessening the shock of landing, as he had intended, the lever jerked the horizontal rudder about, and the craft swerved to one side with such violence that its hull and the wings parted company.

Ingalls was flung 15 feet away in the water, and Robinson received a blow on the head from a strut which half-dazed him. But he saw the mechanician's hair and perceived that, though he was paddling desperately, he could not get his head above water.

The aviator disentangled himself from a network of broken wires and swam to the other's assistance. Ingalls seized him with the grip of the drowning and forced him under water. Robinson, unable to free himself from the incubus, swam under water at random, and by good luck at last reached the wings of the biplane, which were still floating. Ingalls at once loosed his hold on Robinson's neck to grasp the framework. But, as a last annoyance, Robinson's coattails got tangled in the engine under water, and by the time he released himself and reached the surface he was utterly spent.

The scene of Robinson's misadventures now shifts to Astoria, Ore., where he gave a hydroaeroplane exhibition on the Columbia, the most turbulent stream he had ever coped with. A big swell washed up over the propeller and it cracked in two, one blade flying high in the air and the other piercing like an arrow through one of the floats. The craft capsized and turned upside down. Robinson clambered upon the keel and the machine began drifting out towards the Pacific Ocean.

A tug hastened to the rescue, but wherever a rope was fastened to the hydroaeroplane the framework gave way. Robinson was foreboding a trip to China when the tug at last nosed his machine behind a big coal coal barge, which took him and the remnants of the machine aboard.

Then, in the high altitude of Glenwood Springs, Colo., Robinson, rising from a field, was unable to clear a new fence supported by six-inch cedar posts. The biplane, going 60 miles an hour, knocked down 100 feet of the fence and cut off three of the posts as if with a saw. Robinson sailed 50 feet over the fence and landed on his face in a potato patch. The next day an enterprising druggist displayed in his window "the only potatoes in the world ever dug up by an aviator's face."

Next, at Wichita, Kan., a downward puff of air slammed Robinson's biplane into a tree top. The motor broke from its fastenings, and went hurtling over his head, burying itself deep in the ground. The aviator crashed through the limbs, breaking his right collarbone for the third time and fracturing three ribs.

This series of accidents impressed upon him that he should not ride to death even so auspicious a number as 13. So he gave up exhibition flights and became a teacher in the Curtiss school at Hammondsport, N. Y. After he had fallen one day with a pupil 200 feet into Lake Keuka, which at that spot is 700 feet deep, his wife and mother prevailed upon him to give up flying.

There Are So Many Things That Science Does Not Know

By G. De PAWLOWSKI,
Literary Critic of the Paris Matin.

I AM the first to admit that we have made formidable progress on material, mechanical lines. We have electric trains that run by drawing their power from a central station, thanks to the transmission of energy to a distance; we use the telegraph, we abuse the telephone; we have ingeniously combined the elements to domesticate them, exactly like beavers damming a stream to build their village or intelligent animals filling a too deep pot with stones to make the water rise to a level at which they can drink. But of the intimate nature of the phenomena we know absolutely nothing.

What is this electricity of which we make so much use? We have not the faintest idea. We know the exterior of the facts; we cleverly pit natural forces one against another, but we are utterly ignorant of the agents we are using. We are ever in Eden, but the secret of the tree escapes us.

Among the servants we have taken into our employ are some interesting microbes. We send good microbes full tilt against bad microbes to kill them; we observe and announce the results, but the microbe is far more intelligent than we, for he knows what he is doing, while we are ignorant of how he works. Does he poison his adversaries or does he delegate his task to militant submicrobes? We do not know; we take refuge respectfully behind our guardian microbes without knowing how they protect us.

We know nothing of the processes of nature; we are children before our own bodies; like simple animals, we are subject to the worst diseases, when a minimum of real science ought to be enough to relieve us of them in a few seconds.

We are utterly ignorant about our own bodies, though we can analyze them minutely. I do not speak now of life, of the fluids which operate our nervous system and direct us, though we cannot even suspect what this may be. Every day the most astonishing proofs come forward to give the lie formally to the petty certainties that we think we possess. Without going further, it was only last week that our attention was called to the case of a man who had just died of a simple epileptic fit, and of whom only the autopsy revealed that he had been living for a year with a brain in full decomposition. In view of this, what becomes of those localizations, of some of which at least we were so sure?

We know nothing; we have everything to learn. When the men of future ages shall look back upon our science they will have the opinion of us that we may have of the anthropoids of the Stone Age.

How Roosevelt Would Control the Trusts

better service, by the fullest protection that the Government could afford it. On the other hand, if a corporation were found seeking profit through injury or oppression of the community, by restricting production through trick or device, by plot or conspiracy against competitors, or by oppression of the wageworkers, and then extorting high prices for the commodity it had made artificially scarce, it would be prevented from organizing if its nefarious purpose could be discovered in time, or pursued and suppressed by all the power of Government whenever found in actual operation. Such a commission, with the power I advocate, would put a stop to abuses of big corporations and small corporations alike; it would draw the line on conduct and not on size; it would destroy monopoly and make the biggest business man in the country conform squarely to the principles laid down by the American people, while at the same time giving fair play to the little man and certainty of knowledge as to what was wrong and what was right both to big man and little man.

Although under the decision of the courts the National Government had power over the railways, I found, when I became President, that this power was either not exercised at all or exercised with utter inefficiency. The law against rebates was a dead letter. All the unscrupulous railway men had been allowed to violate it with impunity; and because of this, as was inevitable, the scrupulous and decent railway men had been forced to violate it themselves, under penalty of being beaten by their less scrupulous rivals. It was not the fault of these decent railway men. It was the fault of the Government.

Thanks to a first-class railway man, Paul Morton of the Santa Fe, son of Mr. Cleveland's Secretary of Agriculture, I was able completely to stop the practice. Mr. Morton volunteered to aid the Government in abolishing rebates. He frankly stated that he, like everyone else, had been guilty in the matter; but he insisted that he uttered the sentiments of the decent railway men of the country when he said that he hoped the practice would be stopped, and that if I would really stop it, and not merely make believe to stop it, he would give the testimony which would put into the hands of the Government the power to put a complete check to the practice. Accordingly he testified, and on the information which he gave us we were able to take such action through the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Department of Justice, supplemented by the necessary additional legislation, that the evil was absolutely eradicated. He thus rendered, of his own accord, at his own personal risk, and from purely disinterested motives, an invaluable service to the people, a service which no other man who was able to render was willing to render.

As an immediate sequel, the world-old alliance between Blifil and Black George was immediately revived against Paul Morton. In giving rebates he had done only what every honest railway man in the country had been obliged to do because of the failure of the Government to enforce the prohibition as regards dishonest railway men. But unlike his fellows he had then shown the courage and sense of obligation to the public which made him come forward and without evasion or concealment state what he had done, in order that we might successfully put an end to the practice; and put an end to the practice we did, and we did it because of the courage and patriotism he had shown. The unscrupulous railway men, whose dishonest practices were thereby put a stop to, and the unscrupulous demagogues who were either under the influence of these men or desirous of gaining credit with thoughtless and ignorant people, no matter who was hurt, joined in vindictive clamor against Mr. Morton. They actually wished me to prosecute him, although such prosecution would have been a piece of unpardonable ingratitude and treachery on the part of the public toward him—for I was merely acting as the steward of the public in this matter. I need hardly say that I stood by him; and later he served under me as Secretary of the Navy, and a capital Secretary he made, too.

We not only secured the stopping of rebates, but in the Hepburn rate bill we were able to put through a measure which gave the Interstate Commerce Commission for the first time real control over the railways. There were two or three amusing features in the contest over this bill. All of the great business interests which objected to governmental control banded to fight it, and they were helped by the honest men of the ultra-conservative type, who always dread change, whether good or bad. We finally forced it through the House. In the Senate it was referred to a committee in which the Republican majority was under the control of Senator Aldrich, who took the lead in opposing the bill. There was one Republican on this committee, however, whom Senator Aldrich could not control—Senator Dolliver of Iowa.

The leading Democrat on the committee was Senator Tillman of South Carolina, with whom I was not on good terms, because I had been obliged to cancel an invitation to him to dine at the White House on account of his having made a personal assault in the Senate chamber on his colleague from South Carolina; and later I had to take action against him on account of his conduct in connection with land matters. Senator Tillman favored the bill. The Republican majority in the committee under Senator Aldrich, when they acted adversely on the bill, turned it over to Senator Tillman, thereby making him its sponsor. The object was to create what it was hoped would be an impossible situation, in view of the relations between Senator Tillman and myself. I regarded the action as simply childish. It was a curious instance of how able and astute men sometimes commit blunders because of sheer inability to understand intensity of disinterested motive in others. I did not care a rap about Mr. Tillman's getting credit for the bill, or having charge of it. I was delighted to go with him or with anyone else just so long as he was traveling my way—and no longer.

Green Hair and Hair of Every Hue

another gray hair above a childish youthful face.

Every woman knows the effectiveness of gray hair in exaggerating the youthfulness of a well-modeled, lineless face. When the fat of age has destroyed the accents of the features, and wrinkles begin to appear, women struggle against graying hair; but so long as these stigmata of the years are absent nothing brings out the reminders of youth so much as "premature" white hair. Some devotees of beauty have aided nature in silvering their locks, others have lacked the courage of their charms, fearing that as the accents of youth disappear and wrinkles come, despite massage, that gray hair will cease to be a delightful contrast. Millions of women have blonded their locks, to restore or emphasize youth by wearing hair in the hue of childhood. Others add ammonia to the water when they wash their hair to bring out the red and others have frankly dyed their tresses in red tones.

But until this season all attempts to alter the hair color has been restricted to the tones that are natural to hair. The fashion which is spreading from Paris all over the world revives an ancient custom of the Orient, which was adopted by the hetaerea of Greece and the patrician ladies of Rome.

These ancient beauties powdered their hair—not as did European ladies of the eighteenth century—with white powder, but with powders of all the colors in the spectrum. Antiquarians say purple was the favorite color and over that they dusted mica which glistened like diamonds in the rich night of their coiffures. Instead of powders the modern devotees of colored hair use dyes which are not permanent, which can be worn one night to match the gown of that occasion and removed by washing to make way for another hue the following night.

Paris first saw the new mode at the Opera-Comique when a performance of "Madame Butterfly" was on the boards. At a given time, in walked a squad of those divine and exclusively Parisian maidens, the mannequins, or models. One of them wore a cerise dress and cerise hair. Another wore an olive green dress and olive green hair. Still a third was a symphony in violet, and a tall, stately demoiselle undulated along the center aisle a charming ensemble of blue, from the topmost tip of her barrette to the furthest point of her tiny toe.

Now a French audience, as a general thing, is pretty hard to distract when a good bit of music is given. But this time was an exception. Necks were craned this way and that, there were whispers of comment. A shrill, boyish voice from somewhere up near the roof piped the French equivalent of,

"Hello! Pipe the Buff Orpington!"

Then it broke. Half the audience clapped their hands in applause. The other half groaned in sarcasm. But in the long run, the former won. The mannequins shivered with delight. And the new fashion had arrived.

A clever newspaper paragrapher was quick to point out the advantages of the new style. No longer a lady, he argued, could say to her costumer: "I'd like that gown but it doesn't match my complexion." Instead she says, "I'll take that; I can make my hair and color match it." Furthermore, if one is gray, this most excellent sciolist contends, one can never tell whether her hair is really that color or she is simply matching her black-and-white frock.

Now if an up-to-date young woman appears on the street in a morning gown of violet, at a tango tea in a frock of lavender and at a dance in the evening in heliotrope, she must have three separate coiffures, violet, heliotrope and lavender. In furnishing her with these, the hair dresser finds his ingenuity taxed to the utmost, and his exchequer constantly growing.

Mr. De Donato says that St. Louis ladies will adopt the mode, wearing either wigs or transformations or using pomades and tints. And Mr. De Donato should know.

The difference between a wig and a transformation, he explains, is this: A wig is an entire suit of false hair, built on a permanent base, to fit over the head. A transformation is a sort of veneer of false hair, intended to fit around and supplement the natural hair.

The difficulty in dyeing or tinting hair for the various effects is much greater. A dye, technically speaking, is a color expected to last for several weeks, while a tint is expected to last for only a short time. Pomades are used mostly in tints.

But that crabbed, unfashionable old Mother Nature rebels with all her power against artificial coloring. In the first place, it must be remembered, the dyer must obey the fundamental laws of pigmentation. There are three primary colors, red, yellow and blue and from combinations of them, all colors are made. One can mix a certain amount of yellow with a certain amount of blue and get a desired green. If the natural hair is also a brown, there is still a third pigmentation to be taken care of. Thus it would be almost impossible to get a heliotrope shade with black hair. The hair first would have to be bleached, and frequent bleaching is passport to baldness.

However, the inventors are hard at work, and there is no telling what they will be able to do. If they can discover a pomade which can give any desirable hue for service overnight and be washed off in the morning, they will have solved the problem. Otherwise the makers of wigs and transformations are expected to do a land office business.

Little things like this, the hairdressers assure us on the other hand, will not count for much when the fashion becomes general. So long as Father is on the job with the little old check book in convenient reach, the difficulties do not count.

Taking all the Blood Out of Body and Washing It

all this is not accomplished in one passage. For three hours, in one experiment, the blood coursed back and forth from the body to the apparatus, losing with each trip some of the undesirable elements it contained. In this time 19.1 per cent of the foreign substances (salicylic acid was the agent employed) which had been injected for the test, was eliminated from the dog's body. This was practically doubling the kidneys' capacity for eliminating the acid.

The experimenters declare in the most emphatic manner that the apparatus may be attached to an animal and the blood allowed to flow through it for several hours without inducing any untoward effects or injuring the animal in any way. They give the details of two such experiments to prove their contentions. Hirudin is harmless, and the substances of which the tubes and solution are composed do not give up to the blood anything which affects its quality or pressure.

Both animals in the two experiments mentioned made quick recoveries, and in the weeks following, during which they were kept under strict observation, nothing abnormal was noted. On the contrary, the animals improved in condition and took on weight because of the good care they received.

The statement of the investigators that the apparatus is still in a primitive state and is susceptible of great improvement, points to a prediction that ultimately it will aid in solving some of the most vexing problems of medical science.

Take, for instance, the notorious frequency of attempted suicide by means of bichloride of mercury. This poison does not kill in itself. Its effect is to paralyze the kidneys, which are unable to cast off the waste products of the body, which, constantly accumulatitng in them, eventually poisons itself. Why, it is asked, could not this new apparatus be employed to do the work of the kidneys until they recover from their paralysis?

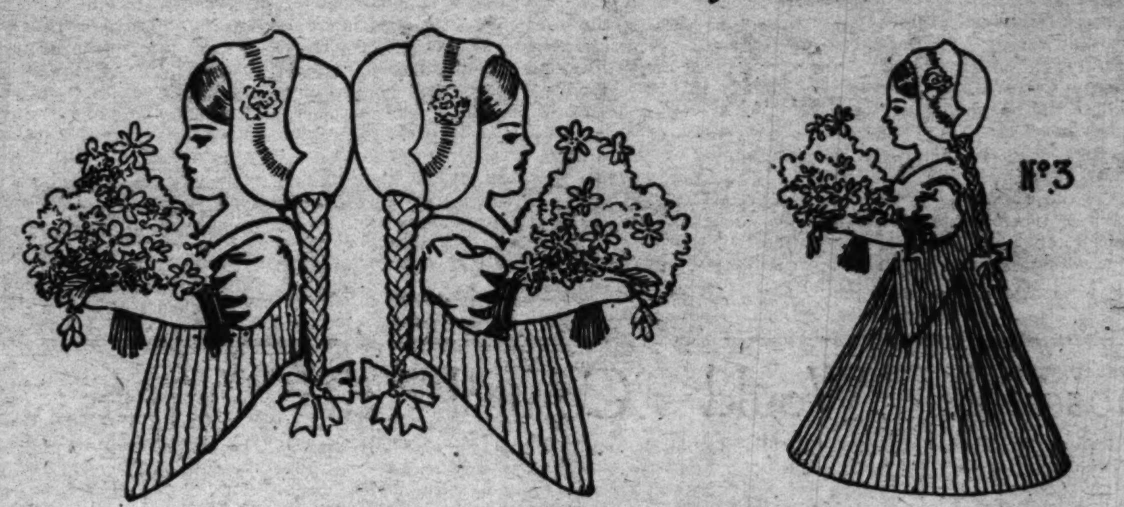
Blood disease, such as scrofula and rheumatism, might come within the scope of the "artificial kidney." Its use, at present, seems to be indicated in all cases of mineral poisoning. Its possibilities in temporarily replacing the functions of diseased organs of the body is predicted by the Johns Hopkins physicians in the Journal of Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics:

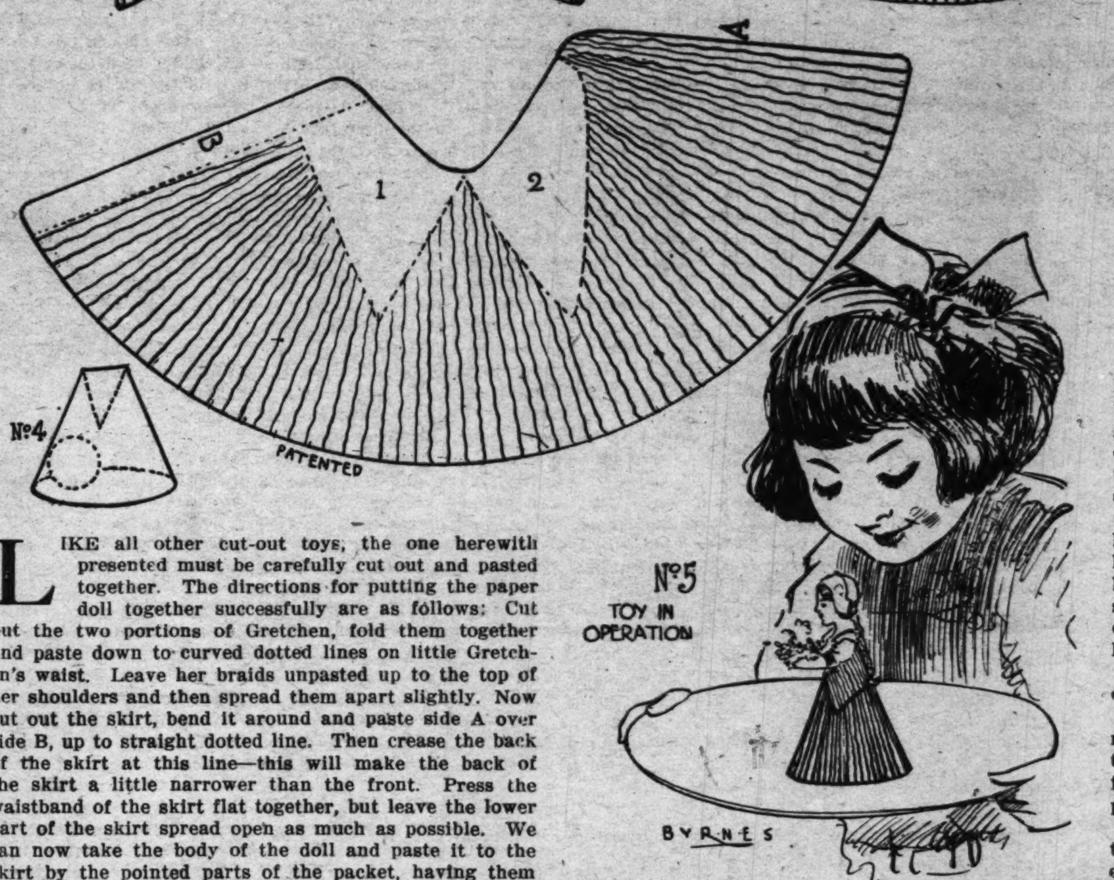
"There are numerous toxic states in which the eliminating organs, more especially the kidneys, are incapable of removing from the body at an adequate rate either the aboriginal or the foreign substances whose presence in excessive amount is detrimental to life processes.

"In the hope of providing a substitute in such emergencies, which might tide over a dangerous crisis, we have devised a method by which the blood of a living animal may be submitted to dialysis outside the body, and again returned to the natural circulation without exposure to the air, infection by micro-organisms, or any alteration which would necessarily be prejudicial to life. The process may be appropriately referred to as 'vivi-diffusion.'"

Here's Another Dancing Doll for Little Ones

Cut It Out and Color It if You Want to





LIKE all other cut-out toys, the one herewith presented must be carefully cut out and pasted together. The directions for putting the paper doll together successfully are as follows: Cut out the two portions of Gretchen, fold them together and paste down to curved dotted lines on little Gretchen's waist. Leave her braids unpasted up to the top of her shoulders and then spread them apart slightly. Now cut out the skirt, bend it around and paste side A over side B, up to straight dotted line. Then crease the back of the skirt at this line—this will make the back of the skirt a little narrower than the front. Press the waistband of the skirt flat together, but leave the lower part of the skirt spread open as much as possible. We can now take the body of the doll and paste it to the skirt by the pointed parts of the packet, having them fit over the pointed spaces 1 and 2 on the skirt, on either side, up to curved dotted line on the jacket, as shown in model No. 3.

Model No. 4 shows the form of skirt and the marble underneath. No. 5 shows the toy operated by a girl, apparently in the parlor before her young friend, to whom she is exhibiting her skill with these toys. First get a smooth pasteboard box cover or tea tray, or even a school geography, and place the toy upon it. Then we must put a marble of the size indicated in figure D, under the skirt of the doll, and then tilt the board or tray in any direction. Little Gretchen will move about in a very fascinating manner.

"THE DAY OF... DAYS"

By Louis
Joseph Vance

open for laughter (as it usually was) disclosed twin rows of sound, white, home-made teeth.

P. Sybarite, approaching the gate, delicately averted his eyes.

At that moment George was announcing, in an undertone: "Here's the lollop now."

"You are certainly one observing young gent," remarked Miss Prim in accents of envious admiration.

Ignoring the challenge, Bross pondered hastily. "Think I'd better spring it on him now?" he inquired in doubt.

"My Gawd, no!" protested the lady in alarm. "It'd spoil the plant, sure. I'd love to watch you feed it to him, but heaven knows I'd never be able to hold in without bustin'."

"You think he'll swallow it all right?"

"That simp?" cried Miss Prim in open derision. "Why, he'll eat it alive!"

She disappeared by way of the vestibule. George shook a head heavy with forebodings.

"Class to that kid, all right," he observed. "Some stepper, take it from me. Anyway, I'm glad it's a box: then I can hide under a chair. I ain't got nothin' to go in but these hand-me-downs."

"You'll be all right," said P. Sybarite hastily.

"I dunno how to break it to you," Bross faltered dubiously. "You better brace yourself to lean up against the biggest disappointment ever."

P. Sybarite regarded him with sharp distrust. "You interest me strangely, George. But perhaps you're no more addled than usual. Consider me gently prepared against the worst—and get it off your chest."

"Well," said George regretfully, "I just wanna put you next to the facts before you ask her. Miss Lessing ain't goin' to be with us tonight.

P. Sybarite looked startled and grieved.

"No?" he exclaimed.

George wagged his head mournfully. "It's a shame. I know you counted on it, but I guess you'll have to get someone else."

"I'm afraid I don't understand. How do you know Miss Lessing won't go? Did she tell you so?"

"Not what you might call exactly, but she won't, all right," George returned with confidence. "There ain't one chance in a hundred I'm in wrong."

"In wrong? How?"

"About her being who she is."

P. Sybarite subjected the open, naive countenance of the shipping clerk to a prolonged stare of suspicion.

"No, I ain't crazy in the head, neither," George asservated with some heat. "I suspicioned something was queer about that girl right along, but now I know it."

"Explain yourself."

"Ah, it ain't nothin' against her! You don't have to scorch your collar. She's all right. Only—she's in bad. I don't s'pose you seen the evenin' paper?"

"No."

"Well, I picked up the Joinal down to Clancy's—this is it." With an effective flourish George drew the sheet from his coat pocket and unfolded its still damp and pungent pages. "And soon's I seen that," he added, indicating a smudged halftone, "I begun to wise up to that little girl. It's sure some shame about her, all right, all right."

Taking the paper, P. Sybarite examined with perplexity a portrait labeled "Marian Blessington." Whatever its original aspect, the coarse mesh of the reproducing process had blurred it to a vague presentment of the head and shoulders of almost any young woman with fair hair and regular features; only a certain, almost indefinable individuality in the poise of the head rendered it dimly suggestive of Molly Lessing.

In a further endeavor to fathom his meaning, the little bookkeeper conned carefully the legend attached to the putative likeness:

> MARIAN BLESSINGTON.—Only daughter of the late Nathaniel Blessington, millionaire founder of the great Blessington chain of department stores. Although much sought after on account of the immense property, into control of which she is to come on her twenty-fifth birthday, Miss Blessington contrived to escape matrimonial entanglements until last January, when Brian Shaynon, her guardian and executor of the Blessington estate, gave out the announcement of her engagement to his son, Bayard Shaynon.
> This engagement was whispered to be distasteful to the young woman, who is noted for her independent and spirited nature; and it is now persistently being rumored that she had demonstrated her disapproval by disappearing mysteriously from the knowledge of her guardian.
> It is said that nothing has been known of her whereabouts since about the first of March, when she left her home in the Shaynon mansion on Fifth avenue, ostensibly for a shopping tour.
> This was flatly contradicted this morning by Brian Shaynon, who declared that his ward sailed for Europe Feb. 28, on the Mauretania, and has since been in constant communication with her betrothed and his family. He also denied having employed detectives to locate his ward. The sailing list of the Mauretania fails to give the name of Miss Blessington on the date named by Mr. Shaynon.

Refolding the paper, P. Sybarite returned it without comment.

"Well?" George demanded anxiously.

"Well?"

"Then this here don't mean nothin' to you?"

"To me—nothing, as you say."

"You ain't dropped to the resemblance between Molly Lessing and Marian Blessington?"

"Between Miss Lessing and that portrait?" asked P. Sybarite.

"Why, they're dead ringers for each other. Anyone what can't see that is blind."

"But I'm not blind."

"Well, then you gotta admit they look alike as twins."

"But I've known twins who didn't look alike."

"Ah, nix on the stallin'!" George insisted, on the verge of losing his temper. "Molly Lessing's the spit'n image of Marian Blessington—and you know it. What's more—look at their names. Molly for Mary—you make that? Mary and Marian's near enough alike, ain't they? And what's Lessing but Blessington, docked goin' and comin'?"

"You forget that the paper simply reports a rumor. It doesn't claim it's true. In fact, the story is contradicted by the very person that ought to know—Miss Blessington's guardian."

"Well, if she sailed for Europe on the Mauretania, like he says—how's it come her name wasn't on the passenger list?"

"It's quite possible that a young woman as much sought after and annoyed by fortune hunters, may have elected to sail incognito. It can be done, you know. In fact, it has been done."

George digested this in profound gloom.

In desperation he grasped at one final, fugitive hope.

"All right," he said sullenly; "all right. You ain't gotta believe me if you don't wanta. Only wait—that's all I ask—wait. You'll see, whether I'm right or not when she turns down your invite tonight."

P. Sybarite smiled sunnily. "So that is why you thought she wouldn't go with us, is it?"

"You got me."

"You thought she, if Marian Blessington, must necessarily be such a snob that she wouldn't associate with us poor devils, did you?"

"Wait. You'll see."

"Well, it's none of your business, George; but I don't mind telling you you're wrong. Quite wrong. In the head, too, George. I've already asked Miss Lessing, and she has accepted."

"And she fell for it?"

"She accepted my invitation—yes."

After a long pause George ground his cigarette beneath his heel, and rose.

"In wrong, as usual," he admitted with winning simplicity. "I never did guess anything right the first time. Only—you grab this from me: maybe she's willin' to run the risk of bein' seen with us, but that ain't sayin' she's anybody else but Marian Blessington."

"You really think it likely that Miss Blessington, hiding from her guardian and anxious to escape detection, would take a job at the glove counter of her own store, where everybody must know her by sight—where her guardian, Shaynon himself, couldn't fail to see her at least twice a day as he enters and leaves the building?"

Staggered, Bross recovered quickly.

"That's just her cuteness. She doped it out that the safest place for her would be the last place he'd look for her!"

"And you really think that she, accustomed to every luxury that money can buy, would voluntarily come down to living here, at $6 a week, and clerking in a department store, simply because, according to the papers, she's opposed to a marriage that she can't be forced to contract in a free country like this? I'm not arguing with you. I'm telling you; you're hopelessly mistaken."

"You think so—huh?" growled George. "Well, I got eight iron bucks that says Marian Blessington to any five of your money."

He made a bold show of his pay envelope.

"It'd be a shame to rob you, George," said P. Sybarite. "Besides, you're bad-tempered when broke."

"Never you mind about that. Here's my eight, if you've got five that make's a noise like Molly Lessing."

P. Sybarite laughed softly and produced the little wad of bills that represented his weekly wage. At this George involuntarily drew back.

"S-s-s-h!" P. Sybarite warned him sibilantly. "Miss Lessing might hear you. What will happen if you disobey me," he added as the shopgirl turned in at the gateway, lowering his own voice and fixing the shipping clerk with a steely stare, "will be another accident, much resembling that of this afternoon—if you haven't forgotten. Now, mind what I tell you, and be good."

Mr. Bross swelled with resentment; exhibited a distorted and empurpled visage; but kept silence.

How to Live to Be 100

The Maxims of Sir James Sawyer, the Famous English Physician

1. Eight hours' sleep every night.
2. Sleep on your right side.
3. Keep your bedroom window open.
4. Have a mat at your bedroom door.
5. Keep your bed away from the wall.
6. No cold bath in the morning, but a bath at the temperature of the body.
7. Exercise before breakfast.
8. Eat little meat, and be sure it is well cooked.
9. Drink no milk. (This applies to adults only.)
10. Eat plenty of fat to feed the cells which destroy disease germs.
11. Avoid intoxicants which destroy the cells that combat disease.
12. Allow no pet animals in your living rooms, for they carry disease germs.
13. Live in the country if you can.
14. Watch the three D's—drinking water, damp and drains.
15. Have change of occupation.
16. Take frequent and short holidays.
17. Limit your ambition.
18. Keep your temper.

Whims that Fashion Favors

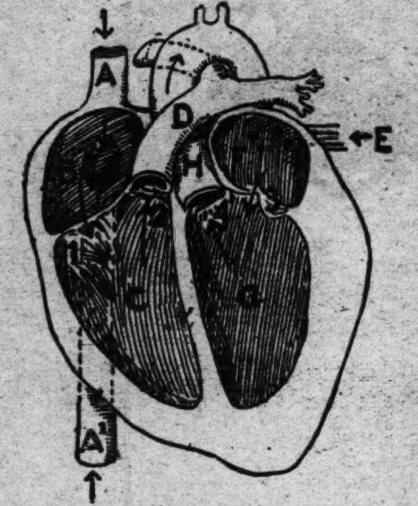
NOVEL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Most Wonderful Pump Not Made by Man

THE most perfect pump in the world, the most perfect ever made, is also the oldest—how old, no one knows, for it is as old as man himself.

This pump is so small and so light that it might be carried in an overcoat pocket. Yet it runs day and night without a stop, without attention, drawing in and sending forth two and a half ounces of liquid 70 times a minute. In one minute it pumps 175 ounces; in one hour, 656¼ pounds; in one year, 5,748,750 pounds. Its normal life is 70 years, in which time it pumps 402,412,500 pounds, or more than 201,206 tons.

To transport this immense weight of liquid that it pumps would require 6700 freight cars of ordinary capacity. This would mean 223 trains of 30 cars each and as many engines to haul them. Strung out in one line, with no intervals between each train, they would cover a distance of 47 miles.



A, A1—Pipes through which blood is drawn in from the body; B, right auricle, in which all the blood is received and from which it passes through valve 1 into C, right verticle. This pumps it through valve 2 into the pipe D, that conveys it to the lungs. It returns through pipes E from the lungs into F, the left auricle, whence it is passed through valve 3 into G, the left verticle, which pumps it through valve 4 into H, the aorta, the main that distributes it again throughout the body.

This diminutive piece of machinery has been known to keep up its work without a single stop for more than 100 ye[illegible] It pulsates 4200 times an hour, 100,800 times a day, 36,792,000 times a year. [illegible] has no journals or bearings to oil, no bolts to tighten or slacks to be taken up. It is so constructed that its parts are automatically repaired as it goes along. But, with all of this, there is one very serious characteristic inseparably connected with this pump, which is that once it stops it cannot be started up again unless immediate steps be taken to do so by an expert. Even this generally fails. So the owner should use care and judgment in its upkeep. There is no other machine that we have any knowledge of of which the above can be said. How this is all accomplished is known only to its inventor.

This pump is the human heart.

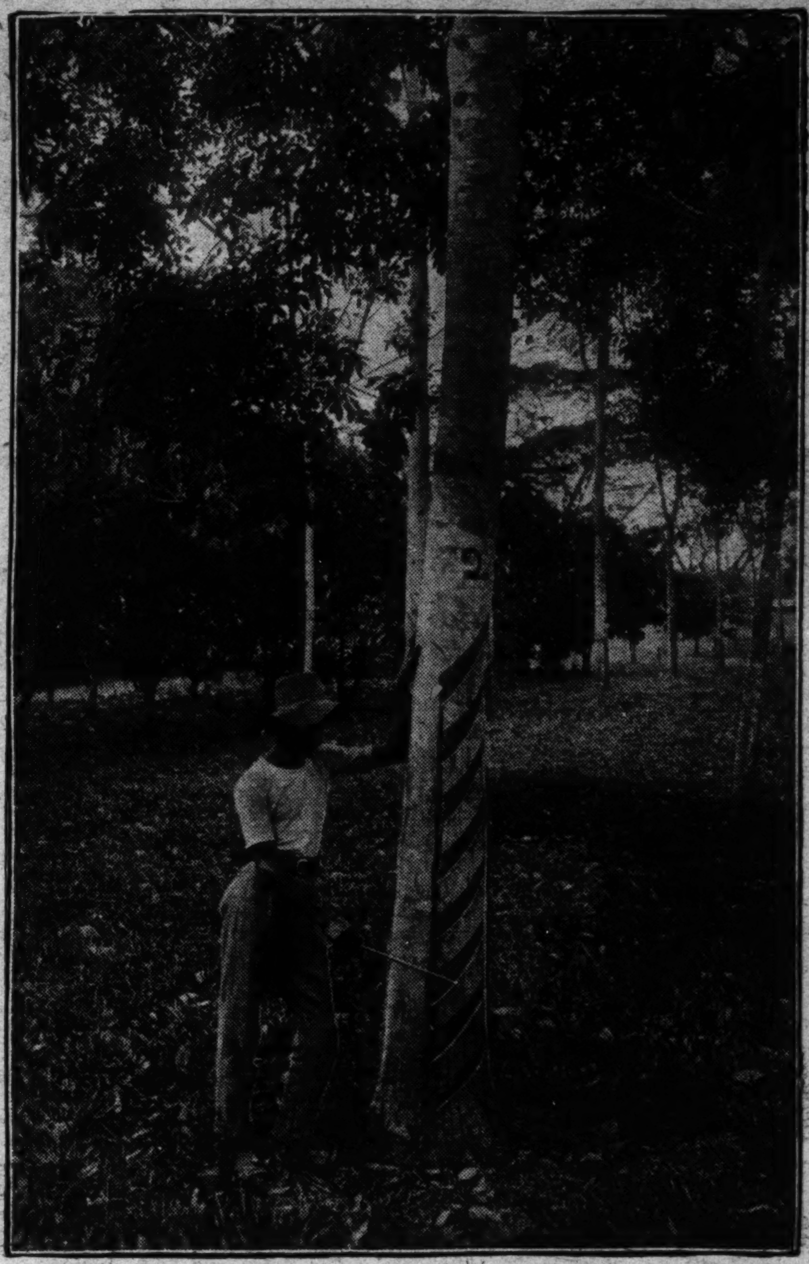
Provisions for Aseptic Barber Shops in Paris

THE Paris Board of Health is about to take up the problem of compelling barbers to use sanitary methods. It will have before it the recommendations made by Dr. Fouquet to the Societe de Prophylaxie, who recommends that lumps of alum be abolished and that calcined alum in powder and applied with cotton batting be substituted as a styptic; that powder puffs be abolished and face powder be applied with wads of cotton which shall be thrown away after once using.

He would have all cutting instruments—scissors, razors, etc.—washed in a 1 per cent solution of carbonate of soda, wiped with dry linen and passed through a flame before being used. All brushes, combs and shaving brushes should be kept in an airtight closet containing a reservoir of a 40 per cent solution of formol, should be dipped into boiling water before using and washed every evening in ammonia soap.

Dr. Fouquet would forbid barbers to strop razors on the palm of their hands. He would also insist upon individual utensils of all sorts for each customer who has any contagious disease.

Coaxing Rubber From Gashes in Tree



Brown & Dawson Photo.

THE flow of rubber from the rubber trees is even slower than molasses in winter. The supply, tons of it, must be gathered patiently drop by drop. The utmost care must be taken to have the tree yield its maximum supply without injury to its growth. The bark is cut skillfully, and the rubber gradually oozes out from the incision and is coaxed into a receptacle at the base. The method of cutting the tree is shown in the accompanying photograph. The picture was taken in a large grove in the island of Trinidad by one of the party of tourists who visited the island on a recent cruise of the Victoria Luise. The native rubber gatherer is coaxing the precious drops of rubber along the incision with a long sharp rod. The tree is visited each day and incisions carefully widened.

Etching Action of Desert Sand

EXTENDING from Cairo to the Pyramids of Gizeh is an electric trolley line which is used chiefly by tourists. The Electric World thus describes a peculiar feature of the service: "The trunks of huge palm trees serve as trolley poles to support the overhead conductor, and the contrast between the modern hurrying motor cars and the peaceful, centuries-old tombs of the Pharaohs holds the interest of many a contemplative traveler. At one side of the trolley conductor, on bell-shaped insulators, are run the feeders which, like the trolley wire, are of bright, hard-drawn copper. After these wires had been installed it was soon found that they invariably broke and fell within six or seven months, the cross-section being much reduced at the point of fracture. Investigation showed that the desert winds which sweep across the right of way whip sand particles against the wires, causing a filing action which cuts away the copper much like an artificial sand blast. The glass globes of arc lamps installed along the roads have exhibited the same destructive action. A similar effect is observed with the incandescent units used to light the way to the sphinx. These strings of lamps besides having to be moved at frequent intervals to accommodate the varying level of the shifting sands, are rapidly eaten away by the etching action of the desert winds. Thus far no remedy has been discovered for this destruction except frequent renewals.

Stagnant Air Overheats the Skin

IN a badly ventilated or close room we feel discomfort more from the stagnation of the air than from its impurity, according to the greatest experts. Dr. Leonard Hill, the famous London physician, has been fighting a strong campaign for this theory, which is opposed to the familiar theory that foul air is the cause of our discomfort.

Prof. Theodore Hough of the University of Virginia, in a recent article in the Heating and Ventilating Magazine, explains the effects of stagnant air upon our bodies as follows:

"In physiology we distinguish between the body temperature of internal organs not subject to cooling influences, and the temperature of the skin. The former is usually constant, or nearly so; the latter is quite variable. The temperature of internal organs is constant because special means are constantly taken to keep it so, and among these means one of the most important is the variation of the amount of warm blood allowed to flow through the skin.

"On warm days, of course, this amount of blood is increased and the temperature of the skin goes up, thereby keeping radiation, conduction and convection of heat from the body approximately equal to heat production. On cold days, when these physical channels would cause the loss of more heat than is being produced, the blood supply to the skin is lessened to conserve the heat within the body, thereby lowering the temperature of the skin.

"In the badly ventilated room, owing to the lack of air movement, higher temperature and excessive humidity, warm blood is rushed to the skin, whose temperature has already begun to rise owing to atmospheric interference with heat loss. This succeeds in getting rid of more heat and in maintaining the body, or internal temperature, but it is done at the expense of the discomfort which comes from an overheated skin and probably of the deprivation of other organs of their normal blood supply in order to furnish the requisite amount to the skin."

Carbon Has Been Melted

PROF. OTTO LUMLIER of Breslau has melted carbon. He inclosed a large arc light—formed of two carbon rods—in a heavy glass container and exhausted the air. By using a powerful electric current he produced such a heat that drops formed at the tips of the carbons. It has been suggested that in this he has shown the way to make diamonds.

In Full Payment for the Land

Regardless of the size or value of the crop, and without any cash payment to us on your part whatsoever

We have confidence in our land. We will give a settler 10 acres and take his first crop of watermelons in full payment. We guarantee that the crop can be raised within 4½ months and the total expenses of clearing, fencing, plowing, planting, cultivation, picking and hauling will not exceed $30 per acre.

We take only the first crop. The settler can than plant his grapefruit grove, and while the trees are growing he can raise beans, tomatoes, cabbages and other truck, besides hay, oats and other staple crops.

This is the great proven district for grapefruit and oranges; the largest citrus grove in Florida—900 acres; the best packing houses; almost one million boxes of fruit shipped last season. In one grove here a single acre yielded 1100 boxes, while another grove has yielded over 1000 per acre continuously for 10 years.

Our lands lie on either side of two railroads and three hard roads, with 12 stations, including six towns; they are high rolling, well drained, with clay subsoil, beautiful clear water lakes and elegant homes. Prices, in small tracts, $35 per acre and up on six years' time.

This is a settled country, where crops and climate have been demonstrated and where the people are prosperous. Hard roads and established market—62 cash buyers here one day last season. Come and see for yourself, or send for map and full particulars.

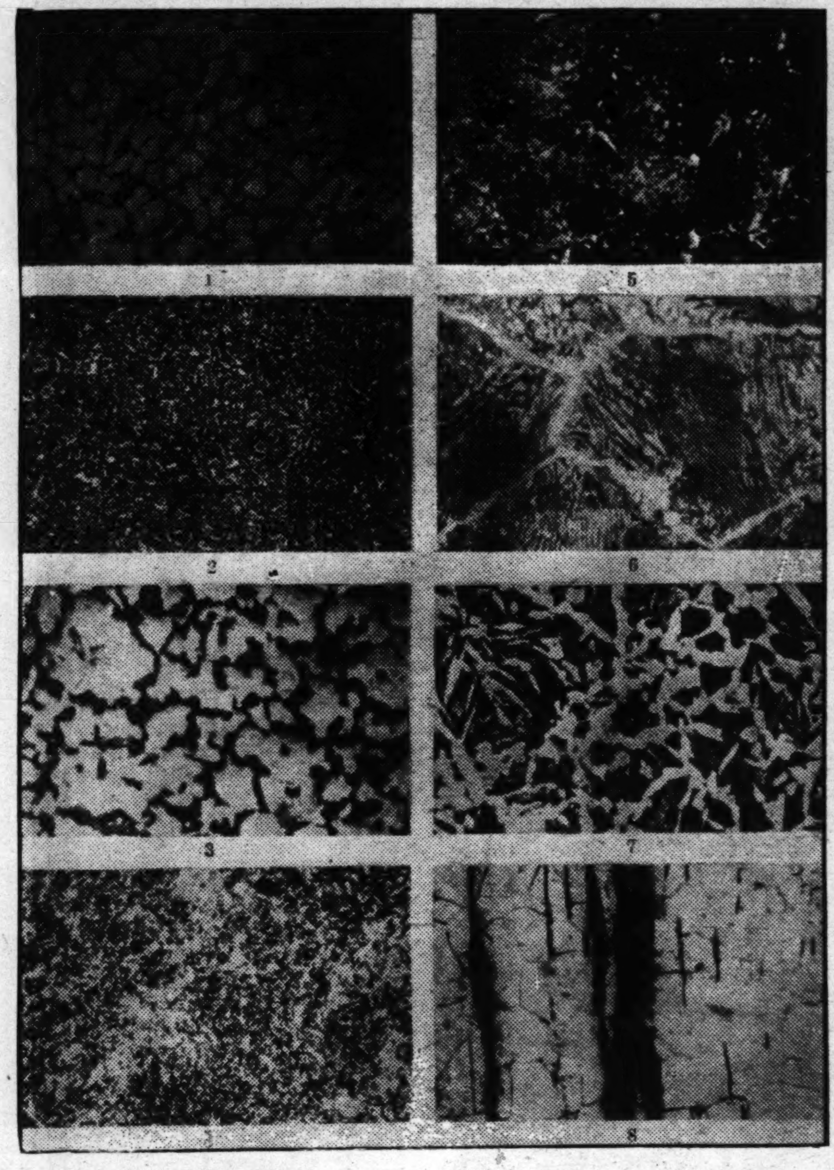
NEW and ODD THINGS in SCIENCE

Steel Is an Unstable Mixture



Constituents of Steel. From Photographs by Sauveur and Boylston.

(1) Austenite; light colored grains, with a little cementite showing at the junction lines. (2) Martonsite. (3) Troostite; dark network, with Martensite (slightly etched) appearing as light meshes. (4) Sorbite. (5) Structure obtained by the treatment described by Prof. Heyn (the proposer of the name) as producing Osmondite; in the opinion of the above authorities, this represents a condition rather than a constituent, and the figure shows Troostite (darkest portions), Sorbite (grayer portions) and a little free Ferrite (white). (6) Pearlite (laminated) plus Cementite (white network). (7) Pearlite (dark) plus Ferrite (white). (8) Ferrite, plus slag.

ONE thinks of steel as a permanent metal which, but for wear and rust, might last forever; and as possessing a smooth structure similar to the polished exterior of fine tools. These delusions must go the way of that other delusion concerning the everlastingness of the hills, which before our eyes are day by day disintegrating and crumbling. Steel is a most unstable compound. Its constituents make for wonderful hardness and strength so long as they stick together. but hardly is their union established before they begin to separate. Each constituent seems to feel itself contaminated by association with the other parts of the compound and some are so bitterly disgraced that they die of chagrin, leaving only the Alpha iron, ferrite, which is very soft, to bear the strain. The accompanying cut is from The Engineering Magazine and shows microscopically the structure of steel, of which there are many kinds, as shown by Bradley Stroughton's table which follows:

Name.	Constitution.	Property.
Austenite.	Solid solution of an iron carbide in Gamma iron.	Very hard, difficult to secure and to preserve.
Martensite.	Some of the Gamma iron is charged to Beta and Alpha.	The major constituent of hardened steels.
Troostite.	Gamma and Beta iron constantly decreasing, Alpha iron constantly increasing.	Readily obtained; usually present in tempered steel. A transition structure.
Osmondite.	Solid solution of iron carbide in Alpha iron.	Stages in the decomposition from Austentite to Pearlite with no peculiar virtue and significant only as support of the theory.
Sorbite.	A mixture of a constantly decreasing quantity of Osmondite, and a constantly increasing quantity of Pearlite, too fine to be resolved by the microscope.
Pearlite.	A conglomerate or mechanical mixture of free Alpha iron with iron carbide.	The eutectoid of Ferrite and Cementite.
Cementite.	The combination of Alpha iron with carbon, Fe C3.	Fairly hard.
Ferrite.	Pure Alpha iron.	Very soft.

Making Silver That Will Not Tarnish

TWO new alloys that are in many respects remarkable are described by the American Machinist. One, called Argental, and produced by the inventor of the McAdamite alloy, is a compound of silver and aluminum. It has been put out to compete with silver, over which many superiorities are claimed for it, for industrial purposes. It can be cast, spun, drawn into wire, takes a good polish and has greater strength than either aluminum or silver. It resembles silver in appearance, is not affected by nitric acid and does not tarnish on exposure to the air.

The other alloy is a blend of cobalt and tin of about 40 to 60. This is said by the official chemist of the American Institute of Metals to be especially resistant to acids, but owing to its brittleness it has little commercial value. Experiments, however, tend to show that when this is mixed with other metals, such as copper, for instance, it produces a series of alloys which may be turned, forged and machined and have a high degree of chemical resistance.

Eternal Life for Cells in Vitro; Why Not in Human Body?

TIME does not exist for tissues taken from the bodies of animals and grown in vitro—that is to say, in a special medium contained in glass jars. Dr. Alexis Carrell has found that by modifying the medium in which cells are placed these can be made to continue growing indefinitely. He has tissues that have been growing thus in vitro for nearly a year and a half and are now growing more rapidly than tissues just taken from embryos.

All cells of the animal body are immersed in a fluid of serum. From this serum they derive their activity, which consists in multiplication by the division of each cell and the growth of the two or more new cells until they again are ready to divide. While the body is still growing, this cell activity is at its height. When growth ceases the cell activity slows down to the speed that will just keep the balance even between decay and repair. Old age means the further slowing down of this cell activity, so that decay progresses more rapidly than repair.

What causes this slowing down? If a way to arrest it could be found, old age could be put off indefinitely. As the cells derive their activity from this serum that bathes them, the secret seems to lie hidden in the serum. It may be that the cells have an effect upon the serum as well as the serum upon the cells.

In Dr. Carrel's earlier experiments the cells lived their natural life, then died. Since he learned how to change and regulate the mediums they have continued to flourish and, so far as can be seen, will continue to flourish.

Now, it has been suggested, if the artificial medium or serum can so be regulated that living cells shall continue to grow in glass jars, why may not the natural medium or serum be regulated in a similar way, that the cells of our bodies may never grow old but may continue to divide and multiply indefinitely?

Precious Metals That Are Now in Daily Use

SCIENTISTS were busy for hundreds of years discovering new metals which they named and laid reverently away as very interesting, but perfectly worthless. Such metals as tungsten, vanadium, silicon and tantalum were unknown outside of scientific circles. In Colorado the miners used to throw away what they called "black-lock," but now they are searching the dump heaps to collect this valuable ore because they recognize it as wolframite or tungsten ore.

Tungsten leaped into prominence a few years ago when it was first used for filaments in incandescent electric lamps. It was found that the new metal could be used in place of carbon for the lamp filaments, giving three times the light of the old lamps for the same amount of current, and this new light was almost pure white, instead of an orange-red color. Tungsten has also many other valuable uses. In the form of sodium tungsten a fireproofing of value is produced. Tungsten brought joy to the heart of the housewife in that it fixes dyes so that goods will wash. Silk merchants rejoiced, for tungsten salts added weight to silk.

Tungsten is now mined in Arizona, California, Nevada, Montana, Idaho and Colorado, in which States 60 per cent of the output is produced. The tungsten belt in Colorado is three miles long and eight miles wide. The market for tungsten has become almost as staple as that of copper, zinc and lead.

Though tantulum has been known for a century, it was not commercially useful until Moissan in 1903 brought it into the limelight through the electric furnace. It is found in the Black Hills of Dakota. The most important use to which tantalum is put is in the manufacture of filaments for incandescent lamps.

Vanadium in small quantities is distributed in sandstones and limestones and other rocks. Its greatest value, when alloyed with iron as ferrovanadium, is in the making of steel. The automobile business has greatly increased the market for vanadium.

Other new metals rapidly coming into everyday use are boron, titanium, chromium, molybdenum, vanium, etc.

CAFE DE LA PAIX
RIZ LA
"Riz La Croix—C'est Chic!"

THE TRUE PARISIAN

is a man of chic and elegance in his habits, a cosmopolite whose twin perfections are savoir faire and ton. As boulevardier, cafe lounger, artist in idleness, the true son of the city by the Seine has a keen eye for the best things of life. Even in trifles light as cigarette papers, he appreciates supremity. He uses Riz La Croix.

RIZ LA +.

(Pronounced: REE-LAH-KROY)

FAMOUS CIGARETTE PAPERS

are a striking example of the French passion for perfection, neatness and efficiency. For decade after decade the manufacturers of the La Croix family have been improving and perfecting this remarkable paper.

Riz La Croix is firm—your cigarette does not burst while being rolled in Riz La Croix.

Riz La Croix is light—it does not char easily, burns freely—above all, it completely submerges its identity in the tobacco, leaving no "paper flavor."
